

TIMELY HINTS FOR FARMERS

Sheep Barns Need Wide Doors.

In connection with the sheep barn or shed should be plenty of yard room. Locate the shed on a rather high, well drained spot, with yards if possible running with a slight slope to the south, at least so placed that plenty of sun can reach them. Plenty of door room for the sheep to go in and out is essential. Sheep go with a rush through any narrow opening. When one starts they all follow in a bunch. If the door is too small many will be jammed severely against the sides, some of the weak will be trampled, and the result will be abortions. Plenty of room is cheaper.

No animal does so well in the open air as the sheep. In an ordinary year they will not have to be shut in the barn nights more than a dozen times, when storms are bad, and not then were it not that a few will insist on staying out in the stiffest weather. Plenty of trough and rack room is also important. If the sheep must be crowded and push, each does not get its share, and results will not be satisfactory.

Feeding Idle Horses.

Allow one pound of grain and one and a third pounds of hay for each hundred pounds of body weight of horse as a day's ration, and in addition supply some roots, or the horses may be given a few pounds of silage daily. It also is customary to allow horses to run to a rack filled with bright oat straw. If this is allowed the hay may be cut to one pound per hundred of live weight. Increase oats, add bran and decrease the hay as spring approaches and weather becomes warmer. This gets the horses into good shape for spring work. During idleness horses require but little grain and may eat freely of roughage provided the bowls are kept active by feeding roots or silage.—Rural New Yorker.

Prevention of Bots.

Take a piece of soft cloth or waste moistened with coal oil and rub over the legs and shoulders of horses infested with bot eggs or "nits;" otherwise, writes E. T. Baker, veterinarian, Idaho experiment station, the horse licks the eggs off his body, the saliva dissolves the shells of the eggs, and larvae are swallowed and develop in the stomach. Few persons realize how much damage bots really cause a horse. Each bot is firmly attached to the stomach wall, and after it drops off the small puncture develops into an ulcer that does not heal. Prevention is better than cure.

WINTER FEEDING ON THE DAIRY FARM

Cows Coming Fresh Must Be Kept In Good Condition.

It will not be long before spring will be with us again. Soon on the farms where winter dairying is not followed the cows will be coming fresh in milk and the real work of the farm will commence. The cows should be kept in a healthy, vigorous condition for the work that will soon be expected of them.

None of the cows should be allowed to get thin or poor, as that will be a decided loss further on. After commencing to give milk they should have the best hay and fodder corn, or, better still, ensilage, with such kinds and amounts of grain as have been found to give the most satisfactory results.

Save the best heifer calves if they are not all wanted on the farm. There will be a good demand for them, as there is getting to be a scarcity in dairy stock. So far as possible keep the skimmilk at home to feed the calves and pigs, and both will give good returns for it.

Keep the young animals growing. This is very important and should receive all needed attention at all times of the year. For instance, heifers are expected to begin giving milk at two years of age. To do this they should be kept steadily growing right along from calfhood up, with such feed as will give a good, vigorous, healthy growth, but not unduly fatten. They should have a comfortable stable and be kept dry and warm.—American Cultivator.

Sickness Among Fowls.

The causes for sickness among fowls can be traced to lice, filth, no grit, overfatness, sour food, leaky roofs, lack of exercise, crowded quarters, cracks in the wall, exposure to hot suns, cold houses in winter, hot houses in summer, irregularity in feeding, damp houses and runs, not enough bulky food, impure drinking water, poorly ventilated houses, exposure to bad weather and too much heating food in summer.

The Early Lambs.

Lambs that come in February require a warm place and special care for the first few days after which they will look out for themselves. If they have enough to eat, becoming nice, sturdy fellows by May or June, when they will bring a good price, and it will pay to give the needed attention, even if one has to lose a few hours' sleep.

Be Alive to the Greatness of Your Own Country

"See America First"

Take a vacation this summer—get away from the daily grind—two weeks or two months can be profitably spent in Glacier National Park, Uncle Sam's newest national playground in Northwestern Montana. You will get keen enjoyment out of a tour through this wonderful region of scenic beauty. It is a big, bold, free, outdoor country—it will invigorate you—put new blood in your veins.

Vacations $1.00 to $5.00 Per Day in Glacier National Park

The Great Northern Railway has done everything possible for the comfort of the tourist and vacationist in Glacier National Park—a new hotel, costing over $100,000 has been erected at Glacier Park Station, the eastern gateway to the Park—hotels throughout the Park afford easy journeying during the day—automobile roads have been constructed in different sections of the Park and many other improvements have been made.

There are four different modes of conveyance at the disposal of the tourist. Automobiles and four-horse stages will be in operation the coming season between certain points. In addition to the popular horseback tours, walking tours can also be conveniently made if desired as the distance between camps is comparatively short.

Those desiring to make complete tours of Glacier National Park can, if they desire, make use of every form of conveyance described above, traveling afoot between certain points, using the stage where desired, the automobiles and horses, each of which presents its peculiar attractions.

Write for detailed information and descriptive literature describing these different tours, etc.
