ITS EFFECT ON THE FAIR

Towns, being an aggregation of people, reflect the idiosyncrasies of that people. If one meets a man who impresses one unfavorably, one is not particular about meeting that man again. The same sentiment applies to towns. If one gets bad treatment in a town one is not particular about visiting that town again. And the contrary is likewise true.

Harlowton certainly did its level best to see that every visitor received proper attention, and, we believe their efforts were appreciated. Visitors now know that we can entertain them right and when fair time rolls around they will feel very much like coming here again. Give them the best we have on the shelf and we will be laying up treasure for future use. People like to live among a bunch of live wires. They like the electrifying they get by the contact. When the farmer sells his farm to some appreciative customer, he will naturally want to move to town and settle down to a life of ease and pleasure. What more natural than that he should move to the town that has made special effort to entertain him when he was a visitor. He wants to get in the game himself and the live bunch gets him. He moves in and builds a comfy home, working always for the best interests of his town.

It certainly pays to be sociable, on the part of a town as well as an individual.

The attendance at the fair will be greatly augmented by our successful Fourth. Only let's make the fair a record breaker in more ways than a social one. Let us have the best that the country can produce in every line of farm endeavor.

Some papers secure considerable support from the patent medicine manufacturers by advertising their products. This paper, since the present management has taken charge refuses to accept any such advertisement. We also refuse to advertise any mercantile article that takes the trade away from our merchants, believing it is better for the town to have the money spent here. We believe our merchants appreciate our policy as they have been using the space in the paper very liberally in advertising their goods. We intend to continue this policy.

Mrs. Bell Ill.

Mrs. Geo. H. Bell took seriously ill on Monday last. For a time they feared she would not recover, but at this writing she is slowly improving. Her parents and Geo. W. Harden of White Sulphur springs are here with her. Mr. Bell has had three doctors attending his wife during her illness. The News joins with her many friends in hoping for a speedy recovery.
