The Cause
Of the Spat
By RUTH GRAHAM

"I have made up my mind to leave you," said the wife to her husband.
"On what ground?"
"Incompatibility."
"Do you mean that I am incompatible with you or you with me?"
"I mean that you are incompatible with me."
"Will you make that a plea for divorce?"
"I shall not apply for a divorce. Do you suppose that I am going to permit you after ruining my life to walk off with some other woman?"
"What am I to do?"
"Do what you like, only you will not be free to supply the place which you asked me to occupy and which I accepted in good faith."
"Well, then, I shall go to housekeeping. This boarding is in a measure accountable for your irritation."
"My irritation! I like that! But isn't your going to housekeeping locking the stable door after the horse has been stolen?"
"I think it rather a case of runaway.
You have taken the bit in your teeth and are kicking the dashboard to pieces."
"Do you consider that a proper simile to apply to your wife?"
"When are you going to leave?"
"When I get ready."
"I have the same right. I shall leave when I get ready, and I shall be ready as soon as I can find a house. Wait a minute."
He stepped to the telephone and asked a real estate agent if the house of fered a week before was still unrented the wife listening to one-half the dialogue.
"All right," he said, hanging up the receiver. "I shall be ready with my part of the separation tomorrow. I have taken that house we were offered last week."
"Who is to keep house for you?"
"A housekeeper."
"What housekeeper?"
"Why should that concern you since you have decided to leave me?"
"It concerns me very much. I don't propose people shall say that I have been turned out to make room for another."
"I shall not discuss that matter with you now. I'm going around to the house to have a look at it."
"I think I'll go with you."
"Very well; if you insist, come on."
They walked past the agent's, got the key and went to the house. Neither spoke a word on the way. The house was furnished. The wife did the talking as to the appointments.
"The sitting room is attractive," she said, "and the little parlor on the other side of the hall is plenty large enough for formal visits. The butler's pantry is nice too. What a roomy kitchen! And the last occupant has left it neat as a pin. Every pot shines.
The upstairs, too, is light and roomy.
I always did like these brass bedsteads. They're so bright and cheerful looking. What a lovely bathroom—filled all through and not a bit of that dreadful porcelain clipped! These bedrooms are all beautifully furnished, and the rugs are not a bit worn. And the hardwood floors—so easy to keep clean!
The outlook from the front bedroom is delightful. I shall have it for my own."
"What's that?"
"I mean I would occupy it if I had not been forced"—tremulously—"by your ill treatment to leave you."
"This will be my housekeeper's room."
"Your housekeeper! Her room should be in the garret."
"It shall be right here."
"Are you going to have your housekeeper roomed better than your wife?"
"My wife makes her own bed, and I suppose she must lie in it."
"H'm. Perhaps, now, you will tell me who is to be your housekeeper."
"Don't bother about whom I select to take care of the premises. I shall have a woman older than myself so that persons will not talk about me."
"Whom, for instance?"
"Well, I think the Widow Scott would like the position."
"The Widow Scott! Well, I declare!"
"What's the matter with her?"
"I wish you to distinctly understand that I don't propose to turn you over to any such person."
"Suppose you name some one."
"To occupy this room?"
"Of course."
"No one occupies this room but me."
"But how can you occupy it if you are going to leave me?"
"Since you've taken this house and it looks so nice and cozy and comfortable, with such pretty furniture and soft rugs and hardwood floors and tiled bathroom—"
"Are you making an inventory?"
"Don't be silly—and lovely curtains, and since I like the outlook from that window so well and would love to exchange that dirty one at the boarding house for it, I have decided to stand your harshness awhile longer." He put his arm about her. There was no fight left in her. It had vanished.
"I couldn't drive you away with a cat-o'-nine-tails," he said.
"Oh, how happy we shall be here!"
throwing her arm about his neck.
"Yes, and we'll do no more boarding.
It will ruin any couple that ever lived if kept up long enough. We will dine under our own roof-tree in future if the house is no better than a chicken coop. This one is for sale as it stands, and I shall buy it."

Notice of Contest
C2547
Department of the Interior, U. S. and Office at Lewistown, Montana, December 16th, 1913.
To Thomas L. Hehir of unknown address, Contestee:
You are hereby notified that Franklin E. Bush, who gives O'Brien, Montana, as his post-office address, did on December 16, 1913, file in this office his duly corroborated application to contest and secure the cancellation of your Homestead, serial No. 01620, made May 27, 1912, for south half of the north half, section 22, township 5 north, range 15 east Montana Meridian, and as grounds for his contest he alleges that said entryman has wholly abandoned said land and has never resided thereon, that said entryman has been absent from said land or the vicinity thereof since June 1912, and that said land is now in its native wild condition, wholly unimproved.
You are, therefore, further notified that the said allegations will be taken by this office as having been confessed by you, and your said entry will be cancelled thereunder without your further right to be heard therein either before this office or on appeal, if you fail to file in this office within twenty days after the fourth publication of this notice, as shown below, your answer, under oath, specifying meeting and responding to these allegations of contest, or if you fail within that time to file in this office due proof that you have served a copy of your answer on the said contestant either in person or by registered mail.
If this service is made by the delivery of a copy of your answer to the contestant in person proof of such service must be either the said contestant's written acknowledgment of his receipt of the date of its receipt, or the affidavit of the person by whom the delivery was made stating when and where the copy was delivered; if made by registered mail proof of such service must consist of the affidavit of the person by whom the copy was mailed stating when and the post office to which it was mailed, and this affidavit must be accompanied by the postmaster's receipt for the letter.
You should state in your answer the name of the post office to which you desire future notices to be sent to you.
