A party of Leland Stanford students paused on the rim of the crater of Vesuvius. As they peered into the seething mass of horror below them, one exclaimed in an awed tone, "Don't that beat hell?" Some Englishwomen were standing near and evidently overheard. One of them remarked to the others in her well-bred, distinct voice, "Isn't it remarkable how widely these Americans travel!"

SAVED BY HIS DREAM

BALLOONIST TAKES STRANGE VISION AS A WARNING.

Gives Up His Vocation and His Successor Is Killed Within Two Weeks.

A dream in Buffalo five years ago, following an exhibition in a local park, caused Carl McManus to give up ballooning for a less dangerous vocation, and, as he believes, probably saved his life. Mr. McManus is now a traveling salesman for a New York house and was in Buffalo recently on business. At the Lafayette hotel he told his story.

"I am only slightly superstitious," said McManus, "but that dream proved too much for me. I'm mighty glad that it did, too.

"I had gone to bed rather early on the night of the dream, following my exhibition at the park. Things had gone rather badly and I was tired out. A couple of narrow escapes had slightly unnerved me.

"It couldn't have been more than ten minutes after I had fallen asleep before I started to dream. I was up in the air sailing along beautifully. There was no wind and the balloon rose slowly and gracefully. I went higher and remained up longer than usual and then made ready to descend.

"I threw out the ballast and held tight to the parachute, but the balloon failed to shoot up. That was strange, I thought. I pulled the cord and let out the gas. Instead of falling the big bag remained stationary. It was most unusual and inexplicable.

"Thoroughly alarmed and mystified by this time, I cut the cords of the parachute. There was nothing doing. The balloon and the parachute seemed anchored in the air to stay there.

"Then I awoke. A cold sweat covered my body. The more I thought about the dream the more convinced I became that it was an ominous warning. It means, I told myself, that some day I will go up and never come down again alive.

"The next day I gave up ballooning. My friends protested, but I told them I knew what was best for me. I left for New York that evening.

"A couple of weeks later I was reading a paper when I came across an item telling about an accident at an Ohio county fair in which a balloonist was killed when his parachute failed to work. The man who was killed was the one who had stepped into my shoes when I quit. The date was one I had been scheduled to fill. If I had kept my job I would probably have been killed, I told myself. I am not very religious, but you can just bet that I got busy right then and offered up thanks. And the following Sunday I attended church, too."

The Abuse of Bayonets.

A veteran soldier was talking about bayonets.

"A lot of unjust obloquy was heaped on our bayonet makers during the Civil war," he said. "The makers were blamed for defects that were really the faults of us soldiers.

"I saw some interesting bayonet tests the other day that proved this. First, in these tests, a lot of swords and bayonets, and they came out in superb condition. Then they were put through the improper ordeal that too many of us subjected them during the war.

"A piece of bread was toasted on a fine bayonet, and then the hot steel was thrust suddenly into cold water, as often happened in the field on the sudden appearance of an officer. The result was that the magnificent metal became as brittle as glass. Dropped on the floor, it broke into five pieces.

"Three bayonets were arranged in tripod shape and a steak was cooked under them. These bayonets cooled slowly, and, when cold, they were as soft as lead.

"And for these things, in the Civil war, many a bayonet maker's name was disgraced."

Altogether Too Expensive.

"Attracted by the whiteness of a servant girl's kitchen tables and floors, I very nearly committed an unpardonable extravagance down in Florida," said a good housekeeper.

"Never until I saw her tables and floors did I realize just how clean a kitchen can be. Recklessly I planned to invite the girl to come north and work for me. Before putting the fatal question I said:

"By the way, Jennie, what do you scrub with?"

"Imagine how I wilted when she said, 'Oranges. Just slice an orange in two and rub the wood. There is nothing like it to take off dirt.'"

"And it had been on the tip of my tongue to offer $25 a month to a girl who would require three dozen oranges a week to scrub with!"

Buried Treasure.

"You're sure there is something in that man's story of buried treasure?"

"Not yet," replied Mr. Dustin Stax. "But there ought to be buried treasure somewhere in the neighborhood of his operations, if he has persuaded anybody else to sink as much money as he asks me for."

A Conclusive Arrangement.

"We're mighty particular about table manners when we take summer boarders," said Farmer Cortmessel.

"Have you succeeded in regulating them?"

"To a certain extent. We were so afraid somebody would out-pie with his knife that we decided there wouldn't be any pie."

Money Spent for Coffee.

It may be said, broadly, that the American people spend more than $400,000,000 a year for sugar and more than $200,000,000 for coffee. Every increase of 1 cent a pound in the price of sugar increases the expenditure at that rate of $70,000,000 a year, and every advance in the price of coffee adds a burden of millions of dollars. Both of these commodities are now selling at the highest prices reached in many years, but neither tariff, trusts nor railways can be held responsible for the situation. While there probably is, in both cases, some enhancement, the underlying cause is crop shortage, failure of supply to meet demand, says the New York Sun.

The price movement of sugar and coffee affords an excellent illustration of the operation of a force somewhat too frequently overlooked or disregarded by politicians.

The advance in sugar was due to the partial failure of the European beet crop, the source from which nearly one-half of the world's supply is drawn. The advance in coffee is due to a short crop in Brazil, whence comes about three-quarters of the world's coffee supply. The average shipments from that country are about 12,000,000 bags of 133 pounds each. A recent report gives the 1910 shipments at less than 10,000,000 bags.

"I don't know whether to make use of this testimonial or not," murmured a hair restorer proprietor.

"What's the matter with it?" his friend inquired.

"Well, the customer writes, 'I used to have three bald spots on the top of my head, but since using a bottle of your hair restorer I have only one.'"

SHE SUFFERED FIVE YEARS

Finally Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Eric, Pa.—"I suffered for five years from female troubles and at last was almost helpless. I went to three doctors and they did me no good, so my sister advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and when I had taken only two bottles I could see a big change, so I took six bottles and I am now strong and well again. I don't know how to express my thanks for the good it has done me and I hope all suffering women will give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It was worth its weight in gold."—Mrs. J. P. ENDRICH, R. F. D. No. 7, Erie, Pa.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you want special advice write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it is free and always helpful.

OLD TIME LIVE STOCK

HOW IT WAS CARED FOR IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.

Ignorant Local Leeches Cared for Sick Cattle—Examples of Intelligence of the Pig.

Sir Walter Gilbey has brought together a number of interesting facts concerning the live stock of the farm. Bleeding, the stock remedy for equine ills of every kind, was practiced until comparatively recent times. The Essex farmers used to bleed their animals regularly in spring and autumn as late as the year 1835, and in some districts it was continued until about 1850.

But veterinary surgery did not embrace the study of cattle and sheep diseases at all. Treatment of sick cattle was referred to the local "leech," who, to quote a writer of the time, "knows as much of the diseases of animals as the beast to attend which he is sent for."

Arthur Young, writing in 1770, reckoned the total of cattle in England at over 2,800,000, including 684,000 draught cattle. The fact that some 4,800,000 cattle are now owned in England indicates the change in the cattle breeding industry during a hundred years. There are no reliable figures. Sir Walter says, to show what the horse population was at that time.

Apart from coaching, every country gentleman drove or rode in the good old days. The farmer and commercial traveler traveled on horseback or drove a gig. Goods in out of the way parts of England were still carried on strings of pack horses. The importance of the latter as a means of transport is shown by the old "pack horse" bridges still remaining over the streams in various parts of England. They are wide enough to allow a laden horse to pass, but too narrow for carts.

Some curious examples are supplied by Sir Walter Gilbey of the intelligence of the pig. One of the most remarkable examples is furnished by the famous "pig pointer," a black sow, which two king's keepers in the new forest trained in a fortnight to find game, point and back almost as well as a pointer. The excellent scenting powers of the pig are, as is well known, utilized by French truffle finders, who train young swine to find the truffles, buried as they are in a few inches below the soil. They were used for this purpose in England also, Sir Walter states; Lord Braybrooke kept truffle hunting pigs some fifty years ago.

Geese have gone somewhat out of fashion in these days, but formerly they were held to be the most profitable kind of poultry. They were raised in vast numbers in the Lincolnshire fens. Pennant says that a single person would keep as many as a thousand old birds, each of which raising seven goslings the owner at the year's end would find himself master of a flock of 8,000 birds. In the great tracks of fenland, before they were drained, over a thousand persons made their living out of geese. The profit of goose keeping lay in the practice of plucking. The value of the goose feathers was estimated at about a shilling a head a year and three-pence more for the quills at that time in general demand for pens.

Soap.

"Were I a soap-maker," said a girl in a red bathing suit, "I should give away with every cake of soap a soap-dish like those at the Hotel Surf—a soap-dish that doesn't drain."

"The right kind of soap dish has a perforated plate on which the soap is laid. This plate drains off the water into a bowl below, and the soap dries at once. But the Surf hotel soap dishes have no drain plates; in them your soap lies always in a little pool, and, when you go to use it, about a quarter inch of it comes off on your hands in the shape of slime.

"The world is full of these non-draining soap dishes. I have tested them. I have proved by actual test that they waste 50 per cent of the soap. Hence, were I a soap-maker, I'd give them away to my patrons.

"The mustard maker, you know, grows rich out of the mustard people leave on the edge of their plates. By supplying all his patrons with non-draining soap dishes, the soap-maker would at once have to double his plant."

Rather Stiff.

"That is a rather stiff assertion," said Senator Curtis, at a dinner in Washington, of a reciprocity argument.

"That, in fact, reminds me of one of our Kansas stories.

"What is that tall chimney for?" said a visitor to Kansas, pointing to a farmyard. "Is somebody putting up a factory in this lonely quarter?"

"No," was the reply. "That's just Joe Miller's well. Cyclone turned her inside out."

Perfectly Clear.

At the Art museum the sign "Hands off" was conspicuously displayed before the statue of Venus de Milo, says Harper's Magazine.

A small child looked from the sign to the statue.
"Anybody could see that," she said, dryly.

Rid Your Garden of Grub Worms.

Under no circumstances should you use the same garden spot again until you have rid the soil of the worms and grubs. To do this plow the land, roll, drag and roll again to hold the moisture so all weeds will start to grow. Then give it another thorough working.

In September go over the ground again, making sure all weeds are destroyed, and next spring you may again use the space for a garden.

A Stable Screen Door.

If the screen door for the cow stable is made of strong material it can be secured by a wide board to drop into brackets on each side. This protects the door and is easily made at home. One end of the board should be bolted loosely to the barn so that it may act as a pivot and the boards be raised up when the door is opened.

Killing Lice.

Soapsuds will kill plant lice. So will tobacco extract, kerosene emulsion or whale-oil soap.

Mothers will find Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup the best remedy to use for their children during the teething period.

Strong Healthy Women

If a woman is strong and healthy in a womanly way, motherhood means to her but little suffering. The trouble lies in the fact that the many women suffer from weakness and disease of the distinctly feminine organism and are unfitted for motherhood. This can be remedied.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Cures the weaknesses and disorders of women. It acts directly on the delicate and important organs concerned in motherhood, making them healthy, strong, vigorous, virile and elastic.

"Favorite Prescription" banishes the indispositions of the period of expectancy and makes baby's advent easy and almost painless. It quickens and vitalizes the feminine organs, and insures a healthy and robust baby. Thousands of women have testified to its marvelous merits.

It Makes Weak Women Strong. It Makes Sick Women Well. Honest druggists do not offer substitutes, and urge them upon you as "just as good." Accept no secret nostrum in place of this non-secret remedy. It contains not a drop of alcohol and not a grain of habit-forming or injurious drugs. Is a pure glyceric extract of healing, native American roots.
