MONTANA NEWS.

About thirty tons of bullion is now in the Clarks Fork mines awaiting shipment.

Vice President Oakes is expected along Montana divisions of the N. P. in a few days.

Billings district is about to bond itself to the extent of $8,000 to erect a school building.

Dr. Lamme, of Bozeman, had his pocket picked of $530 during a recent trip over the Utah and Northern railroad.

Hugo J. Hoppy, who killed Patsy Walters in Bozeman last winter, is held in the sum of $5,000 bonds to appear at next term of court.

John Downey, a brakeman, had his foot badly mashed at Bozeman on Monday in attempting to couple cars to the forward end of a locomotive.

From a telegram received by Acting Governor McCutcheon, we learn that Gov. J. Schuyler Crosby will return to Montana on the 12th of July.

A telephone line extends from Custer station across the Yellowstone to Junction City on the opposite. Messages are transmitted at 25 cents each.

The western end of track is within fifteen miles of Missoula and advancing rapidly enough to warrant a belief that it will reach that town by July 1st.

A stock company is about to be formed in Bozeman to build and operate a street railway from the court house to the depot. They think it can be made to pay.

A new town is to be laid out up Tongue river, about eighty miles above Miles City. It will be called Ashland from the quantities of ash timber found in that section.

The Northern Pacific company is about to expend $3,000 in improving the road from Stinking Water to Billings, to encourage the shipment by this road of cattle grown in northern Wyoming.

Water tanks have advanced along the railroad line as far as Townsend. Locomotives utilize the syphon in taking drink from the Prickly Pear, Ten Mile and other streams west of the Missouri crossing.

Gallatin county jail is now a "designated depository" for criminals convicted under crimes, to serve in the penitentiary. The county charging therefor the sum of $1.50 per day. Warden Blakely will take care of them.

The largest trestle on the line of the Northern Pacific is that across Corican Defile, about twelve miles west of Missoula. When finished the track level will be 300 feet in the air. The length of the trestle is 2,400 feet.

On Tuesday evening, a soldier of company E, Fifth infantry, named Daniel Shaw was killed by lightning at Fort Keogh, while lying in his bunk in the company's quarters. No one else in the room was injured in the slightest degree, nor was the building damaged. It is supposed the electric fluid came down the chimney.

A Nez Perce chief, supposed to be old White Bird, passed through Bitter Root valley last week with a band of his people. This little band of about thirty is the remnant of the once powerful tribe. Their ranks have been thinned by life in the Indian Territory, until now harmless, they are returning to the vicinity of their old homes.

The first shipment of bullion from Helena via the Northern Pacific, will take place July 4th, when 1,000,000 pounds of Gregory bullion will be shipped. It will require fifty cars to transport this one shipment. The Helena Herald estimates that the Gregory reduction works will furnish 1,000,000 pounds of freight every month for the Northern Pacific, eastward.

The grand jury failed to find an indictment in the cases of Nathan C. Lay and George A. Lowe, charged with killing Irving Hunter in Gallatin valley last winter. There was no evidence to sustain the charge, though at the time of Hunter's death public feeling was so strong against the accused men that there were serious thoughts of lynching them. Lay will probably become possessor of the land over which the quarrel occurred.

NEWS NOTES.

The French are landing troops in Tonquin in preparation for war.

A passenger train was wrecked last Tuesday on the Baltimore and Ohio road. No one hurt.

Fire destroyed the town of Grant's Station in Oregon last Monday night. Loss $150,000.

Crook and his staff are at Tucson, Arizona, receiving the congratulations of the population.

A hail storm in Missouri on the 19th killed several negroes. The hailstones were as large as oranges.

Davis & Co., proprietors of a wholesale whiskey house, have failed in Louisville, Ky. Things are getting in a bad way in the south.

C. G. Synold eloped from Milwaukee with his brother's wife and money. The whole party were on their way from Michigan to Portland, Oregon.

Wong Ching Foo, the Chinese editor of New York, is in jail on a charge of libel, brought by another Chinaman. He is getting into the front ranks of journalism.

The Lower Missouri river has risen sufficiently to submerge low ground along Kansas and Missouri. Travel by railroad is interrupted along the flooded territory.

A correspondent of the Butte Miner thus moralizes upon the prices of intoxicants in Montana, as compared with those charged in the effete east: To a Montanian who has "done" the east and is longing for a breath of pure mountain air and the sight of familiar scenes, Glendive has a peculiar interest. Not that it differs from other towns to the eastward in enterprise and dash, but simply because it is in Montana. One feels like reaching out and shaking it by the hand and inquiring for old acquaintances and taking a drink.

The "old-timer" feels that he is at home again. He can see the grand old mountains and the tall pines in the distance, and the luxurious bunch grass at his feet, and the great herds of cattle on the "thousand hills," and whiskey is two bits a drink. There is more in the latter fact than the average tenderfoot imagines. It brings to his mind the flush times of early days; of roaring camps and big round-ups, and nights of revelry and an aching head. The true mountaineer views with suspicion the five cent and ten cent drinks of the farther east. He can't see how a man can stand behind a bar and sell a drink of whiskey for a paltry five cent piece. There must be something wrong in the whisky or the man, and unless he is unusually tempted he will avoid both, but when he reaches his mountain home, and can pay his two bits for the most villainous tarantula juice his fear vanishes—he is ready to take his poison and treat the barkeeper besides.

The Value of Willow Wood.

On account of its comparative incombustibility, the willow is eminently useful for the floors of buildings designed to be fire-proof. It grows to a large size and furnishes a great amount of lumber. There is a white willow growing at Stockbridge, Mass., which, at four feet from the ground measures twenty-two feet in circumference, and extends its branches fifty feet in every direction. Tradition says it was brought from Connecticut in 1847 by a traveler, who used it as a riding switch. The Hon. Jesse W. Fall, in giving an account of experiments in tree planting on an extensive scale in Illinois, says: "Were I called upon to designate one tree which, more than all others, I would recommend for general planting, I would say, unhesitatingly, it should be the white willow." Prof. Brewster says: "In England, where it is often fifty or sixty feet high in twenty years, there is no wood in greater demand than good willow. It is light, very tough, soft, takes a good finish, will bear more pounding and knocks than any other wood grown there, and is used for cricket bats, for floats to paddle wheels of steamers, and brake blocks on cars. It is used extensively for turning, planing, coasting vessel furniture, ox yokes, wooden legs, shoe lasts," etc. Fuller says: "It grows with incredible rapidity, it being a by-word that the profit by willows will buy the owner a horse before that by other trees will pay for a saddle." The basket willow, well cultivated, will yield a net income of $150 a year to the acre. On the whole, therefore, it would seem that the various kinds of willow, the economic value of which has been hitherto entirely overlooked in this country, are eminently deserving of attention, and will amply reward those who cultivate them.—Popular Science Monthly.
