TELEGRAPHIC NOTES.

Little Missouri Outlaws.
BISMARCK, June 26.—A special to the Tribune from the Little Missouri says: Count de Mores, who has recently held one of the largest cattle and sheep ranches in the west, expending a million dollars, had a difficulty with an outlaw named O'Donnell, the leader of a band of desperadoes. Last night the Count's house was surrounded and his life threatened. The sheriff left with a posse for the scene of trouble. O'Donnell swears he will kill the Count on sight.
LATER.
BISMARCK, June 26.—A special from Little Missouri says: For some time past the life of Marquis DeMores has been threatened by Frank O'Donnell, the leader of a gang of outlaws. On Monday morning at 3 o'clock O'Donnell and his gang rode into town and began firing into the windows of the hotel and other buildings. Several persons narrowly escaped the bullets. The sheriff of Morton county, with a posse of citizens, to-day pursued the outlaws, overtaking them a mile from the railroad. Riley, one of the outlaws, was killed in the melee. O'Donnell and the others were captured after a hard fight.

The river at St. Louis is falling and there is general rejoicing. Dispatches received on the 26th state that the river has risen six inches at Sioux City. In twenty-four hours it has risen three inches at Leavenworth; stationary at St. Joe. There is hardly a doubt but that the aggregate loss on the American bottom, between Allen and Cairo, will run into millions, and this is not half the story, for nearly as much bottom land skirts the river on the Missouri side, most of which is subject to overflow, and that the worst is over. Advice from Chester, Randolph county, Ill., say that St. Mary's levee, opposite that point, on the Missouri, broke Sunday night, and the St. Mary's region, a large wheat raising region, is now nearly all flooded. It is said that there is 20,000 acres of wheat under water on this bottom alone.

The Arctic expeditionary ship, Proteus, is actively preparing for a voyage to Lady Franklin Bay, and will probably leave on Thursday. The steamer Yantic, of the United States Navy, is waiting at St. John's to accompany the Proteus to Smith Sound.

There was a frightful accident at Tre-hassy Monday evening. A large fishing boat went down with six men on board, all of whom were drowned. The vessel is supposed to have been overloaded.

Yesterday, in New York city, there were forty-two deaths. Thirty-eight are known to have been from cholera, and a large proportion of the others are supposed to have been from the same malady.

It is believed that the Virginia duellists, Elam and Birne, who have been once stopped by the police, are bound to fight. We should say let them fight if they will.

NEWS NOTES.

Real estate to the value of $2,178,782.70 has changed hands in Bismarck since that city became the capitol. Problem. If that amount of property has changed hands how many Bismarck old-timers have made themselves wealthy, and how many eastern tenderfeet have made fools of themselves?

On his return from the west ex-secretary John Sherman spent a day in Bismarck. He visited the farm of ex-President R. B. Hayes, lying six miles north of the city, and saw his six hundred acres of growing crops, drank of the milk of the ex-president's herd of Jerseys and admired the surrounding country and the evidence of thrift and economy to be seen on every hand.

Two men were accosted on the Mandan depot platform by a gentlemanly looking personage on Saturday and asked if they wanted work. They replied in the affirmative. At the request of the third man the trio walked across the track into the grove. When the trio were out of sight of the outside world the gentlemanly personage drew a revolver and demanded the money or the life of his companions. They quietly forked over their money to the aggregate tune of $70. They were given no further work.

Frank J. O'Connell, the tenderfoot (in Bozeman parlance) who tried to create a boom in Bozeman for his dry goods store, has sold out and returned to Cincinnati.

Three horses were stolen from Helena Monday night. Next morning letters of description were sent out on all the coaches, resulting in the capture of the horses and one of the thieves near Jefferson City.

A. H. Mitchell, a young engineer, was drowned in the Missoula river Tuesday morning. He was a son of the assistant chief engineer of the Northern Pacific railroad. It is not expected that the body will be recovered.

MONTANA NEWS.

The re-arrangement of revenue districts deposes Capt. T. P. Fuller, who by efficient service has made many friends.

Wm. Wertman, who robbed a woman in Bozeman of a diamond pin, was sentenced to one year in the penitentiary.

Nelson Story will purchase a gravestone to be erected over the grave of John Bozeman, in whose honor the town of Bozeman was named.

A San Francisco paper says: A Montana millionaire is fitting up a fifty-thousand dollar saloon. He used to sell his liquor from a tin cup.

A man was held up near Helena on Tuesday, and robbed of a time check. For new instances of business activity there is nothing like a railroad.

It is said that Mr. Abe Jones, who has had a contract on the railroad near Bozeman for the past year, while en route to Deadwood a few days ago, made $12,000 in real estate during a three days visit to Bismarck.

In the case of Charles Story, of Bozeman, charged with embezzling $10,000 from his uncle Nelson's bank, and who was let out on bail, the court ordered the sheriff to pay over the amount of the bonds, which were forfeited by his non-appearance.

A sneak-thief entered the real estate office of Mrs. Tomlinson, at Billings, while that lady was absent exhibiting lots, and stole a pocket-book containing three or four dollars in stamps and a non-negotiable note. He will know better than to select a Billings real estate office next time.

Mr. Sam Sloan, an employe of the Northern Pacific, was held up near Missoula, a few days ago, by two men, who by dint of a free use of revolvers compelled him to yield up $175, which he had about his clothes. The "hold up" act is being played very successfully all along the road.

C. H. Dewey and Walter Burke had a law-suit at Billings to determine which of them was the owner of a certain span of mules. The evidence seemed equally strong and conclusive on both sides and the justice of the peace before whom the case was being tried was in a pickle, hardly knowing how to decide. He took twenty-four hours to consider the matter, and that night Providence, which never deserts the just, sent a Yellowstone thief along who stole both mules, and thus took a greivous weight off the good man's mind.

Attempted Stage Robbery.

Montana highwaymen, who have mostly lain dormant since the days when X. Beidler and his posse cleaned them up years ago, are seemingly coming to the front again with the idea of improving the little time that remains before stragles give away entirely to railroad caecanes. On Tuesday, when the Deer Lodge coach, bound for Helena, had just passed French woman's ranch, and reached a thicket of bush about twenty miles from Helena, two masked men stepped out on the road and attempted to stop the leading horses. John McCormick, post trader at Fort Missoula, was riding with the driver and as soon as he saw the robbers knew their intention and bringing up his revolver began firing. At the second shot one of the robbers fell. The second robber then began firing at the horses and hurt one of them. The team ran for some distance when the wounded horse fell and died. The robbers did not pursue. It is believed that the man who was shot was not wounded mortally, but will suffer long before recovering. The officers are searching for them.

An Important Postal Order.

In the May number of the United States Postal Guide there is published an order of the first assistant postmaster general, forbidding postmasters to allow one person to call for a list of names, keeping others in waiting, and directing them to require the person attempting to go through a list, to fall back and come up in the rear of others after calling for a single name, and in the most explicit terms postmasters are forbidden to keep general callers waiting in order to pick out the mail for an indefinite number of persons. They are required to treat such person calling as one person, and require them, when served, to pass on and give others a chance. The postmaster general holds that to permit one person to call for a list of names, gives those embraced in the list an undue advantage and discourages the renting of boxes, and takes that much from the postal service, as all money paid for box rent goes to the government and not to the postmaster.

Persons having lock boxes can obtain mail within a few minutes after its arrival. Those renting call boxes can learn long before the delivery is open if there are letters for them. Those who value time, and who wish to avoid the jam at the delivery should secure boxes.
