GEO. T. CHAMBERS

First National Bank of Livingston.

Months ago it was announced that St. Paul capitalists were about to organize a National Bank in Livingston. Since that time, though the consummation of the project has been hastened with all speed by its promoters, the delay had given rise to a skeptical feeling on the part of those who did not consider the tedious preliminaries incident to the organization of a National Bank—the omnipresent red-tape and necessary formalities attendant upon the transaction of such business with the Treasury department at Washington. Now, however, the difficulties have been surmounted and the company are ready to move forward. Safes and interior fittings for the banking office arrived in Livingston several weeks ago and are ready to be put into use. Yesterday there arrived from St. Paul Fred Ward, cashier and Mr. Norton, assistant cashier, of the prospective bank, bringing with them the plans for the building, which is to be erected during the summer. The building will be 25x80 feet, two stories in height, and the site selected is the western corner of Second and Park streets. We were shown the plans for the structure, and they represent a building the equal of which for elaborate design, elegant finish and general architectural beauty, we have not seen in any town west of St. Paul and Minneapolis. Such an edifice would attract attention in any city and amid any surroundings. It is to be constructed of pressed brick, with cast-iron trimmings. Beside the two main floors, there will be a basement beneath the building, which beside comprising the bank vaults will afford accommodation for heating furnaces, if the officers choose to utilize them. The first floor proper will contain the banking room and the private offices of the cashier and vice-president, and the second story will be divided into office-rooms for rent. Every room in the building is so arranged as to be splendidly lighted either from the front or through the windows on Second street. Messrs. Ward and Morton state that the plans will be carried out to the last line, and that work upon the building will be begun almost immediately, or as soon as the contract for its erection can be let. In the meantime a railing will be put up in the front of Smith, Hagy & Co.'s store, the safes moved in and the transaction of business begun in a week or ten days. The officers of the bank are, C. Livingston, of St. Paul, president; Fred Ward, cashier; Mr. Norton, assistant cashier; and those gentlemen, together with the following, are directors: John Donnelly, Mr. Holliday, John Halloran, Major Pease, and C. B. Towers, of Livingston, and William H. Oxley, of Miles City. Mr. Fogarty will be the resident manager of the bank's affairs.

American Noblemen.

It will be long before Livingston is honored by the presence of so distinguished a party as stopped here yesterday—comprising men who rank with the highest of the nation, and who are justly entitled to all honor, reverence and respect ever tendered by one free-born American to another. The gentlemen were Gen. W. T. Sherman, commander of all the armies of the United States, Gen. Alfred H. Terry, commander of the department of Dakota, of which Montana is part; Col. J. W. Forsyth, Col. Gibball, Col. Dodge, Judge Morrison, R. White, chief justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, and Judge Horace Gray, associate justice of the same high court. The names of the highest military and the highest judicial officers of America appear among the list, and the others are men who have attained national celebrity in either of the same avenues of life. General Sherman, as head of the army, is making a tour of inspection of the various military stations in the west, and the other gentlemen are either his staff officers or traveling guests. It is his last tour in his present capacity, as next March he retires by the rules of military limitation, and his place will be taken by Phil Sheridan, the present Lieut. General of the army. The party were traveling in two special cars. At Livingston they left their cars and took dinner at the Merchants Hotel. At present they proceed no farther west than Fort Ellis, but after a halt here of a few days will make a tour of the National Park. Thence returning they go on to the Pacific coast, and return eastward by the southern route.

A Missing Man.

James Randall, of the firm of Randall & Davis, who lived on the island opposite Livingston, and formerly operated a planing mill near town, has disappeared and neither his family nor friends know of his whereabouts. He was last seen in life between the 10th and 21st of May last, though at what particular date of that interval his friends are unable to exactly state. Mr. Randall was a man of about forty-five years, of large frame, with a full, reddish beard and long, bushy hair. He wore, when last seen, canvas overalls and a blue shirt. There is no reason known that would have induced him to leave the country, without informing his family, nor were his habits such as would lead him into unnecessary danger or give cause for sudden departure. His friends believe that he must accidentally have fallen into the river and been drowned. Floating bodies are reported to have been seen in the river at Benson's Landing, Boulder, Billings and Glendive, but no authentic information as to their description have reached the searchers after the missing man.

Dr. Sabin, physician in charge of the railroad hospital at Livingston, has now under his charge five patients, Fred Olson, Peter Hanson, and Oie Stanset, are all convalescing after severe illness from typhoid fever. Christ Hang is getting the better of a bad attack of rheumatism and John Downey, a brakeman who had his foot badly contused in the Bozeman yard, is also getting along nicely. In this case, to hasten healing process the doctor has grafted upon the wound minute pieces of sound cuticle taken from the patient's leg. This method of treatment has already shown beneficial results. Dr. Sabin informs us that during the month of June nine patients have been treated in the hospital and thirty-three have received treatment outside. There have been no deaths among the railroad force at Livingston during the month.

The project of building a telegraph line to connect White Sulphur Springs with the western Union wires is being agitated. The business men of Livingston are anxious to have the line connect with their town, and a number of them have signified their willingness to put up a liberal amount of cash for its construction, and it is very probable they will be given the opportunity to take a portion of the stock. It is proposed to organize a company with a capital sufficient to build and equip the line this summer. As to the revenue being sufficient to pay the expenses of operation, and interest on the investment, there is no question of doubt, since lines of less importance are proving remunerative. It is one of the greatest needs of the Springs now, remaining unsupplied, and we hope the matter of organizing may assume a business-like shape at an early date.—Husbandman.

At a late hour on Saturday evening a drunken rough, whose name our reporter did not learn, entered the Headquarters and began trying to pick a quarrel with the proprietor, Mr. Draper, who was engaged in playing a game of billiards. He finally went so far as to strike Draper without provocation, when the latter very properly knocked him down. Thus quelled, he promised to make no further disturbance, but a short time later Mr. Draper observed him with a billiard cue drawn in the act of striking him. Mr. Draper caught the blow as it fell on his arm, and in turn used a cue on the ruffian's person until he cried "enough." He then went out, threatening to get a gun and clean out the house, and did actually return with a revolver, but made no demonstrations with it. Earlier in the evening he made a row in a saloon in the old town, and seems to have had a bad heart all night.

Notice.

This evening from 7 to 9 o'clock polls will be open in Wetstein's hall for the election of the following officers of the Livingston Board of Trade: President, three vice presidents, secretary and treasurer. The officers selected will hold their position during a term of three months. All voters previous to casting their ballots must sign the constitution and by-laws of the Board of Trade, and thus enter upon membership in the body.
