MILES CITY BURNED.

Loss $100,000.

William Rigney Lynched.

Special to Daily Enterprise.

MILES CITY July 22.—A fire broke out in the Cosmopolitan Theatre, on Main street Sunday morning and in a few moments the flames had gained such headway that it was impossible to extinguish them. The theatre in a short time was a mass of flames. Next the flames fell upon a row of three small buildings occupied by Merritt as a lunch counter, Brown's tobacco store, and Bishop's Side Board saloon. These were quickly consumed. The fire quickly spread to the next building, which was known as "Flick's" gambling hall, owned by Chas. Bishop. This building being of pine logs, gave out a great heat and the fire here gained so much strength that the block at one time was given up for gone. From this building it spread to the large and handsome store of Basinski & Bros., stationery and general dealers, and in a few moments what was a magnificent store was a total wreck. The next building to succumb to the flames was the drug store of W. E. Savage & Co., a large two-story frame building adjoining the First National Bank. It was also quickly destroyed, and by the frantic efforts of the citizens the fire was here stopped. The bank building being of brick interposed as a barrier to the further advance of the fire. The loss is estimated at various figures, by some as high as $100,000. The insurance is considerable and may amount to about $50,000, mostly in the Phoenix, Liverpool, London and Globe and Aetna companies.

The Cosmopolitan Theatre, where the fire originated, was situated on the northeast corner of Main and 6th street, and was a handsome and well appointed theatre, said to be the best one of its kind in the territory, and cost $8,000 to build. It was owned by H. E. Wolf, who is at present in Europe. It was leased by John Chinnick and was doing a good business. All the performers employed there lost their wardrobe and everything connected with the theatre was burned. It is thought the work of an incendiary as three attempts had been made at various times to burn it down but were discovered in time to prevent the desired purpose. The building next, owned by Charles Bishop, and rented by "Flick," was not insured, and everything is a total loss. Basinski Bros. will lose by the fire $40,000, as they had a very large and costly stock of goods in the building. They were partially insured. The drug store of W. E. Savage & Co., in which Dr. Redd was partner, was well insured and the loss will not be heavy, although a large assortment of fancy goods and drugs were always kept in stock. Their loss will not exceed more than $5,000 over the insurance. The fire department was promptly on hand but the fire had gained such headway that their efforts were useless.

SERVED HIM RIGHT.

Special to Daily Enterprise.

MILES CITY, July 22.—After the excitement of the fire was over this morning a party of masked and determined men proceeded to the county jail and took therefrom Bill Rigney, who had been incarcerated a few days before for threatening to rape the daughters of a worthy family named Campbell. He was found in the cell, and after some trouble was taken out and a rope put around his neck and taken to the railroad bridge over Tongue river, distant about half a mile, and there launched him into the dim and uncertain future. The act meets with the approbation of all who are good citizens, and the verdict is that he got his just dues. Rigney has been a terror in Miles City and neighboring towns for some months, and was counted one of the worst and most dangerous characters in the country. It is expected that others of this gang will be given some of the same medicine to-night unless they light out. The citizens are now determined to break up this thieving gang, who have been playing their nefarious practices for the last three years, and it is thought that the ring-leaders of this organization of rollers, horse thieves and murderers will be apprehended and brought to quick and speedy justice by the outraged community.

Hunter's Hot Springs.

Nearly fourteen years ago Dr. A. J. Hunter, with his family, settled at the now famous Hot Springs. Born in Virginia he had spent his early manhood in Missouri, and for some years previous to the outbreak of the war held an important position as a state medical officer. He came to Montana in the early sixties and after a few years of unsettled life made his home at the springs in 1870, building there a log shack, which, still standing, claims the honor of being the first permanent habitation in the Yellowstone. Down what must have been a dark avenue of fourteen years the doctor looked and saw a future for himself and his descendants in the hot sulphurous water bubbling up amid what was then an almost undisturbed Indian hunting ground. Thirty-one years before that date he had seen the Arkansas Springs with nothing but a shanty as the pioneer of what but a few years later became the resort of thousands and he believed that these springs would yet attain like fame. The opinion conceived under such unfavorable conditions is rapidly approaching realization. Until last year he did little more than "hold down" the property. But with a railroad and its accompanying rush of population in the Yellowstone valley Hunter's Hot Springs became known and patronized. Less than a year ago the doctor laid the foundation for a new hotel, and since that date by the earnings of the property has completed the building—a commodious structure—beside bath houses and numerous other improvements. A few days ago the hotel and water-rights were leased by E. Chew, formerly of the Grand Central in Miles City. Mr. Chew has long been a popular hotel proprietor, and is not impairing his record in the least at present. He attends to the wants of his invalid guests in a manner that makes all pleased with the situation, notwithstanding their numerous aches and pains. The present daily average of boarders who come to take the benefit of the waters is about thirty, with a steady increase as the season advances.

Dr. Hunter occupies a separate residence, and surrounded by his family, rests quietly on the first fruits of the property he has with infinite hardship and with indomitable fortitude acquired and brought before the notice of the world.

Of the springs themselves and their medicinal properties it is impossible to give a full description in the limits of a short article. Their curative properties have been abundantly tested both by chemical analysis and the actual experience of invalids, and it is now known that their equal is not found among medical springs. The water from the different springs is in such quantity as to be practically inexhaustible for purposes of bathing, and at present is not utilized to any extent exceeding one-fifth, and with proper appliances for handling the water we should say a much smaller fraction would answer all present purposes. The property is a bonanza and the owner well knows it as he positively refuses to sell at any price. Rufus Hatch a few months ago made overtures to purchase but Dr. Hunter very promptly informed him the springs were not for sale. He is willing to lease the property to any person or company who would guarantee improvements on a large scale, but otherwise would not part with it beyond a limited time. It is somewhat surprising that the Northern Pacific company does not consider it advisable to either take hold of the springs in this way or advertise them as the southern roads do the Arkansas springs. Certainly it would be almost and eventually quite as profitable an enterprise as advertising the National Park. But railroad companies do most emphatically as they please, and we have never noticed any disposition on the part of the N. P. to become an exception to the rule. Hunter's Hot Springs will yet become one of the famous health resorts of the continent, with the busy city of palatial hotels and less desirable institutions that pertain to such a universal asylum.

This reminds us that in one other point Livingston is most fortunately placed. Namely, in having these springs within such easy distance. With the National Park on one side and Hunters Hot Springs on the other, both attracting the presence of travelers from every part of the world, and Livingston with her own beautiful location as a summer home, from which either resort can be reached by a short ride, must always be the stopping place of a host of strangers who will be drawn hither by considerations independent of the town's commercial advantages.

Temporary Removal.

I Orschel Bro. are now occupying Donnelly's building on Second street, near the passenger depot, till their brick building on Park street will be completed.
