LOCAL LAYOUT

J. C. Vilas, a merchant of Gardiner, came down the Park branch last evening.

Those are fine goods just opened at the St. Paul Clothing Store.

J. Orschel & Bro. are moved into their fine brick store next to the Merchants Hotel.

Baled timothy hay, best Gallatin valley oats, bran, wheat and chop feed always on hand at Billy Miles' feed and sale stables, old town, as low as the lowest and a little lower.

B. F. Ten Broeck, popularly known as "Sandy," leaves this morning for Miles City to visit his family.

J. Orschel & Bro. have just received a large shipment of fine custom made clothing equal to anything made by any merchant tailor for fit, style and quality. Be sure and call on them before sending east for your clothes.

Rev. Fred B. DuVal, of Wilmington, Delaware, is another enthusiastic tourist just returned from the Park.

The Montana Lumber Company is still booming.

In the Pioneer Press of last Saturday is a well written letter on the Rocky Canyon coal mines from the talented pen of Judge H. N. Maguire.

Gents furnishing goods in great variety and hats and caps of every description including the famous Stetson hat, at the St. Paul Clothing Store.

Since September 15th the postoffice department has issued 12,605,000 new two-cent stamps and yet many offices, including Livingston, remain unsupplied and are depending upon such stamps as they had on hand before the change.

Call at the Livingston Book Store, lower Main street for fancy stationery.

Wetzstein's Opera House has been strengthened by three heavy pillars being placed under the floor. If there were ever any cause for the charge that the building was weak and unsafe the difficulty has been entirely obviated by this additional support.

Buy your fishing tackle at the Livingston Book Store lower Main street.

Uncle Tom's Cabin drew a crowded house to Wetzstein's Opera House last evening, and the unanimous verdict regarding the play was "Good." Such a company, presenting such selections from the legitimate drama, will draw a good house in Livingston every time.

Line and hair always on hand at the Montana Lumber Company.

Among the east-bound freight cars in the yard yesterday was one loaded with hops from Washington Territory bound for New York. Hops are one of the leading products of Washington, certain districts of the territory being devoted almost entirely to their cultivation.

Lawrence & Stuff are daily receiving their winter supply of heating stoves.

J. M. Brants, an officer in the army of the Netherlands, is making an extended tour of what is to him the most interesting portion of America, the far west, and has just concluded a visit to the National Park, which he considers the crowning wonder and beauty of this great country.

A choice selection of sheet music will be found on sale at the Livingston Book Store.

S. C. Mathieson has just received a heavy consignment of California grapes, pears, lemons, oranges, apples, celery, tomatoes, cucumbers, fresh eggs, and California honey in the comb.

A case was in progress before Judge Budlong yesterday in which Albert Cherry, a minor, by Abram Cherry, his guardian, sued Angus Secord for $600, alleged to be due as the plaintiff's wages as a carpenter. J. A. Smith appeared for the plaintiff and J. H. Elder for the defendant. The case was tried before a jury and excited some interest. A verdict was returned allowing Cherry $57.

The last rose of summer is beginning to fade, the first gentle reminder of a heating stove for winter. Lawrence & Stuff have a fine selection.

Gallatin Valley potatoes at Donovan's.

Fresh Oysters at the Big Horn Stores.

Yesterday the surrounding mountain tops were whitened by a snowy covering that had fallen while it was raining in the valleys. At Muir City yesterday morning there was over an inch of snow on the ground, and it was still snowing.

Mulkern & Sherman of the Metropolitan bar, compound the best cocktail in Livingston.

On Monday a heavy snow storm prevailed in the Park from about Norris Geyser basin southward to an unknown distance. The storm was a very severe one, and those who came over the road think there was fully a foot of snow on the ground between the two geyser basins. Up to Monday there had been no snow in any portion of the Park, and even now there is none at Mammoth Hot Springs.

No trouble to show clothing, hats and caps at the St. Paul Clothing Store.

J. P. Read, of Charleston, S. C., has been spending three months past in Montana, and has just concluded a ramble through the Park. He came to this country to enjoy life amid new scenes, and has done so most thoroughly. Fishing, hunting, sight-seeing, open air life in every pleasurable form has made up the sum of his enjoyment, and he says that were it possible to part with the experience gained during his trip no amount of money would induce him to part with them.

Go to Mathieson's three stores for fresh fruit and vegetables of all kinds, confectionery and fancy groceries.

Those heating stoves of Lawrence & Stuff are daisies. Call and see them.

Attached to the east-bound freight train yesterday afternoon was a coach of the Oregon Railway & Navigation company loaded with passengers. They were mostly residents of Oregon and Washington going east to visit friends from whom they had long been separated, and taking advantage of cheap rates by traveling as emigrants. A few of the party were people who had gone to the west intending to remain, but were returning dissatisfied with the country.

The best Underwear for sale in the town will be found at the St. Paul Clothing Store.

Go to the Big Horn Stores for fresh oysters.

Col. J. H. Stephens, of Minneapolis, accompanied by his wife, Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Winston and Mrs. Wallace and son, returned from the Park last evening, having enjoyed themselves finely notwithstanding the lateness of the season and the necessarily cool temperature. The Colonel was highly pleased with that portion of his trip, and considered himself very fortunate in having fallen in with a number of the older residents from whom he obtained much information for use in his coming series of articles in the Minneapolis Tribune, with which he is associated.

A large stock of fall and winter clothing just opened at the St. Paul Clothing Store.

Frank Losekamp has closed up his business here, and he and his brother Gussie will leave this morning for Billings, where the services of both are required in their shop at that point, where they intend to largely extend their business. Frank has become greatly attached to Livingston and its people during his stay here, and leaves very regretfully. He is an industrious young business man, and one who commands the respect and regard of all who know him, and he is certainly a loss to the town. We wish him success wherever his lot may be cast.

Go to the Metropolitan bar for a good cocktail or anything in the way of drinks or cigars.

A gentleman just from Helena tells of seeing a gambling house in that city cleaned out on Monday night by a follower of King Faro, who accused the dealer of having wrongfully raked in one of his bets. He did not propose to be robbed by any snide check guerilla, and in support of the same seized the faro box, drew his revolver and prepared to shed blood. The crowd was suddenly called outside, and the dealer and determined player left alone promptly settled the difficulty by the former refunding the chips and the latter returning the box.

For fine Residence property, for sale or for rent, enquire of Fred Ward, at the First National Bank. Prices reasonable.

A force of about 100 men who were working on the railroad beyond Bozeman in surfacing, riprapping and such employment, have all struck work and are now in Livingston out of a job. The company reduced the force to thirty men, and instead of the $2 per day they had been receiving, limited them to $1.00. The crew refused to stand the reduction, and all left work. The Northern Pacific is evidently making a grand retrenchment in the expenditures for labor, but unhappily the effect is felt by those who were working for small wages and can not bear a reduction. One dollar and sixty cents per diem in Montana is a mere pittance, and according to the standard of wages in this country the man who can not earn more is not fit to work at any price.

What are the wild winds saying—only that winter will soon be here, and that Lawrence & Stuff have received a large invoice of heating stoves.

About Hotel Waiters.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune tells an incident illustrating the independence of the table waiters at the Mammoth Hot Springs hotel. An inoffensive Dutch merchant, he says, who had got tired of waiting at the table for some one to remove the pile of dishes that had accumulated in front of him, in order to get rid of them set them beside him on the floor. Then he finished his meal, and by the time the waiter had got around to his place had left the dining room. The story goes on: "You ought to have seen the anger and disgust depicted in his face as he beheld the plates at his feet. The foreigners who saw him, I dare say, fully expected him then and there to draw a revolver from his pocket and avenge the indignity offered to his person in the blood of the poor Hollander, who was just then enjoying a quiet smoke on the piazza outside, little suspecting the storm he had raised within. The waiter generously forebore doing anything violent, and contented himself by muttering in a snarling tone, loud enough for everybody within ten feet to hear, as he picked up the dishes, 'If I was a Dutch prince, I'd have manners, d—d if I wouldn't; feel just like hitting him in the jaw with a plate.'" The story reminds us of one on the same subject, related by E. V. Smalley as occurring during his trip through Montana in the summer of 1882. At the hotel in Bozeman where he was stopping he thought he had got on very good terms with the waiter, and one morning at the breakfast table ventured upon his supposed familiarity to ask that functionary the question, "How are the cakes this morning?" But Smalley had gone too far. The waiter turned upon him and replied, "Damfino; I haven't asked 'em."
