

A Gigantic Treat For Men and Boys.

Beginning today we inaugurate one of our "old-time semi-annual clearance sales."

All of our friends and patrons know that twice a year we hold a general clearance sale for the purpose of disposing of the season's stock of fine clothing, and those of you who have attended them in the past know they are not "fake" or "hurrah" sales, but real bona fide opportunities for saving big money on the highest grade clothing. We have no "doses of medicine to take," as we have never suffered from "business malaria." In fact, this store and its immense stock of clothing and athletic goods were never in better condition. We have always cleared up each season's styles in the season for which they were bought, and the lots which we offer you at this clearance sale are stylish, up-to-date '97 garments. Such clothing at these prices should meet with an instant disposal. You can always depend upon our offering the greatest values. Money back, as usual, if you want it.

GAMES YESTERDAY.

Philadelphia, 10; Washington, 9. New York, Baltimore, 2. Boston, 8; Brooklyn, 7. Pittsburg, 9; Cleveland, 3. Chicago, 3; Louisville, 7. St. Louis, Cincinnati—Game called.

GAMES TODAY.

Washington at Philadelphia. Baltimore at New York. Brooklyn at Boston. Louisville at Chicago. Cincinnati at Cleveland. St. Louis at St. Louis.

Philadelphia, June 29.—The second game of the series between Washington and the Phillies developed a regular comedy of errors. Especially was this true of the Senators, who put up a game in the field that would put lots of players to the blush. Of course, some allowance can and should be made for their crippled condition, but even that cannot excuse the work of Tucker, Wrigley and McGuire. Not only did they make all kinds of errors that can be scored, but they also turned up in the way of errors of omission. With Kelly out of the game, Wrigley was sent to third, German to second and Swain entrusted with the ball. No part of the defeat can be laid at the pitcher's door, for he held the slugger down surprisingly well, and many of the hits scored against him came after chances had been offered to retire the side. But in his support he had the worst any set of paid players could possibly give him. Tucker could neither catch or stop a ball. McGuire was too strong for such light work as throwing to first, while Wrigley did not seem to know what to do with the ball after he got it. There was hardly a redeeming feature of play in the game. Wrigley did make one neat stop, and Seibach got under a long drive from Lajoie's bat. This is how the game came across the plate, and Brown led off with a pretty single. Seibach fled to Geier, but DeMontreville's timely single sent Brown to third. McGuire singled, scoring Brown. Tucker lit to Dowd, who threw to Gillen and forced McGuire at second, DeMontreville scoring. Gillen was thrown out at first by Dowd. Copley singled over third base and went to third on Dowd's single to right. Dowd was thrown out, McGuire to DeMontreville, while trying to steal second, and Copley scored on Delehanty's out, DeMontreville to Tucker. Lajoie hit a long fly to left, which Seibach worked as throwing to first. Abby singled to right in the second and went to second on Wrigley's base on balls. Each moved up a base on Swain's sacrifice, Orth to Lajoie. Brown fouled to Lajoie, Abby and Wrigley scored when Gillen dropped Seibach's fly. DeMontreville singled to center and scored with Seibach, on McGuire's two-bagger to right. Tucker got a base on balls and German singled to right, but Geier made a pretty throw and nailed McGuire at the plate.

The Phillies gathered in one in the fourth. Dowd sent out a fly to Seibach, Delehanty singled to left, Lajoie fled to Seibach, and Delehanty went to third on boy's single to left. Boyle stole second and German fumbled Geier's grounder, Delehanty scoring. Geier stole second, and Boyle was caught napping at third, McGuire to Wrigley. Delehanty singled to left in the fifth, but was forced at second by Lajoie's hit to DeMontreville. Lajoie stole second. Boyle was thrown out at first by DeMontreville. Geier hit to center and the ball passed Brown. Lajoie scored and Geier went to third. Gillen hit to Wrigley, who fumbled, allowing Geier to score and giving Gillen a life. Gillen went to second on a wild pitch. Cross hit to third, and Wrigley could not recover himself to catch the runner. Gillen scored on the throw. Cross tried to steal, but was caught, McGuire to DeMontreville. The home team took the lead in the seventh. Orth hit to the center field wall for two bases. Cooley got a base on balls. McGuire tried to catch Orth napping at second. He threw wild, Orth taking third and Cooley going to second. Dowd hit safely to center, scoring Orth and Cooley and making second on Brown's throw to the plate to head off Cooley. Delehanty made a two-bagger and Dowd crossed the plate. Lajoie hit to Wrigley, who feinted by throwing to first in the hope of leading Delehanty to start from third. "De" didn't start and Lajoie was safe at first. Boyle attempted to sacrifice and bunted a fly into Swain's hands, who completed a double, throwing to first and catching Lajoie. Geier was out, German to Tucker. German fled to Dowd. Abby hit for two bases. Lajoie missed Wrigley's grounder and the runner was safe, Abby scoring. Swain struck out. Wrigley went to second on a passed ball. Brown walked to first. Seibach hit for two bases, scoring Wrigley and Brown. DeMontreville fouled to Delehanty. In Phillies half Gillen hit to Wrigley, who threw wild, Gillen going to second. Tucker fumbled Cross' hit and "Lave" was safe, Gillen taking third. Orth fled to Brown and Gillen came home. Cooley fled to Wrigley, who threw Cross out at second, making a double play.

The winning run was scored in the ninth on Delehanty's single, a steal, and a wild throw by McGuire, followed by Boyle's safe hit to left. The score:

New York, June 29.—The New Yorks easily disposed of the crippled Baltimore again today in the presence of another great crowd. Meekin was practically invisible and received fine support. Hoffer was batted freely. O'Brien made one of the finest catches ever seen here. He pulled in a home run from Davis by leaping over into the right field seats. The game was tied at the time. BOSTONS WIN IN THE NINTH.

The Brooklyns Give the Leaders a Hard Fight.

Boston, June 29.—Boston batted out another victory over Brooklyn today on hits by Stahl, Duffy and Collins. The game was won on its merits, and the outcome was in doubt till the last. Klodanz pitched a fair game, but when the visitors found him it was for consecutive hits, six out of their seven runs being earned. After Stahl's hit in the eighth Nichols was put in. A difficult chance by Jones, the batting of Anderson, Collins and Nichols, and Boston's infield work were the features. Score:

BEST MEN WON THE RACES

Columbia Athletic Club's First Regatta of the Season.

SENIOR CREW AGAINST TIME

Crossley's Gymnasium Boys Won the Junior Race—Splendid Exhibitions of Watermanship—Shell Collides With an Obstruction—All the Events Well Contested.

Yesterday was regatta day at the Columbia Athletic Club boathouse, and as usual upon these occasions it was a gala event. The weather clerk was kind to the oarsmen and provided splendid rowing weather, although a little cloudy. The water, too, was perfect and as smooth and placid as the bottom of a lake; there was little or no wind to other interfere with or help the sturdy oarsmen in their work.

It was the first of a series of club regattas arranged for the season, and the initial event was a brilliant success in every way, barring the delay in starting the first race, in which the crews took the word "go" at least an hour after the time scheduled. The fault lay with the oarsmen in allowing up so late. Notwithstanding the threatening weather there was present at the boathouse the largest attendance of spectators which has in recent years graced a similar event.

Lieut. Charlie Baker, in charge of the rowing department, was busy at work away from his crew, and his wisdom and close and interesting contests which were won and lost for the pleasure of the admiring crowds at the boathouse and on the adjoining wharves.

The river presented an animated scene with its scores of small pleasure boats filled with living freight. The crowded barges from the Potomac and Annapolis to the Chesapeake added animation to the pretty scene. All races except the eight's started and finished in front of the boathouse and the course, a mile, crossed the bridge piers and returned. The eight's race was a mile straight away.

The first event was for four-oared crews made up of the senior and light-weight crews, and called the whites and blues. To a good start both got away and pulled side and side to the bridge; both turned away for living freight. The whites getting straightened out, the crews came down and tucked and rowed a tight race. At the ice house the "whites" put on a spurt and took a lead and came over the line in splendid form, winning by half a length.

The work of both crews was excellent. The winning crew had McGowan, stroke; Parsons, 3; O'Leary, 2; and Flint, bow; the losers were Magee, stroke; Mann, 3; Eaton, 2; and Elder, bow.

The next event was for junior fours, and in this four crews competed, and they finished in the following order: No. 1, Humphreys, stroke; Waters, 3; Crow, 2; and Midge, bow. This was the "zephyr" crew, and the winners and Prof. Crossley were loudly cheered for their excellent work. They finished two lengths ahead of No. 2 crew, which had Swiggett, stroke; Mahon, 3; Miles, 2; and Metowan, bow; No. 3, Hook, stroke; Fowler, 3; Fowler, 2; and Lunsford, bow. This crew had the misfortune to come in collision with a bait-boat at the turn, throwing Bowman Lunsford out. He swam safely to shore. Fowles then drew in his oar, and the rowing two came over the line as pair-oar crew, leading crew No. 4 several lengths, and this latter rowed Purman, stroke; Parsons, 3; O'Leary, 2; and "Turkey" Parsons, bow.

It was now growing quite dusk, and by the time the eight's started in their event, just below the Three Sisters, it was quite dark. It was the best race of the card, and it was a pity that it couldn't have been enjoyed in the day light. The crews were well matched, and rowed a tight race. They came under the bridge together, and, at that point, Hox's crew put on a little steam and came away in good form, rowing strong and steadily, and were rewarded for their work by winning out by about two lengths.

The winning crew rowed: Hox, stroke; Lunsford, 7; Mahon, 6; Fowler, 5; Daly, 4; McGowan, 3; Waters, 2; and Ross, 1; with Crow, coxswain. The other crew had McGee, stroke; Swiggett, 7; Purman, 6; Fowler, 5; Meigs, 4; Walsh, 3; Shannon, 2; and Murphy, 1, with Hart Cabrera, coxswain. Between the races the senior he will probably be about again in a few days.

Shortstop Jennings Better. New York, June 29.—Hugh Jennings, shortstop of the Baltimore baseball club, who was hit by a pitched ball and badly injured yesterday, is doing well this morning. Nothing serious has developed, and he will probably be about again in a few days.
