ELECTRIC CARS TO CROSS
Commissioners Grant a Permit to the Capital Railway.

Navy Yard Bridge to Be Strengthened and One Car at a Time Allowed on It.

The District Commissioners have decided to strengthen the Navy Yard bridge immediately, so far as they are able, with certain undisposed of and available funds on hand. This decision was arrived at yesterday after a consultation with the Engineer Commissioner, in view of the fact that the bridge would be unsafe when the heavy cars of the Capital Railway Company commenced running across it, as allowed by act of Congress.

The matter of strengthening the bridge will come in the province of the engineer department, but it is understood that work will be commenced almost immediately. The exact fund at their disposal has not been ascertained, as the Commissioners themselves have not been informed of that subject definitely, but enough money is on hand to materially increase the structural efficiency of the bridge.

The Commissioners yesterday granted a permit to Mr. A. E. Handley, president of the Capital Railway Company, to put in the underground electric system on the tracks crossing the Navy Yard bridge, and to operate his cars over the bridge and to the end of the route at the Navy Yard gate, as soon as possible. This action was taken in spite of the protest of the Engineer Department, that the bridge was unsafe. The calculations of the Engineer Department, however, were based on the theory of what would happen if two cars of the company, loaded to their utmost capacity, should meet on the bridge. When Mr. Handley explained to the Commissioners that he intended to so arrange the schedule that only one car would be on the bridge at one time, the Commissioners said that that would be very satisfactory, and issued the permit.

Presently, in speaking of the matter yesterday, said that he could well understand the apprehension of the Commissioners in regard to the matter. He was satisfied, however, that the Commissioners had been acting for the public good in making the matter the subject of the commission of the bridge, but in his opinion, the bridge was safer and stronger today than it ever has been, as his company has just put down a double track of heavy eight-pound rails, in addition to a new flooring of heavy lumber beams. He expected to have the road in operation up to the navy yard gates by the last of next week.

VARICK HAWKINS' HAUL.
The Sum Reported Taken by Him Increased by $20.

It was discovered yesterday that Messrs. Varick Hawkins had from the office of the District Tax collector was $20 more than was at first reported.

The extra gain of Hawkins arose from a practice of taxpayers, who frequently do not care to wait for their receipts but slip the bill with the money in an envelope and give it to a clerk, with the understanding that the receipt will be sent them. One of these envelopes, containing $20, was missed several days before Hawkins' disbursements, and as it had passed through his hands, it is believed he took it with the rest of the money.

As the taxpayer has no way of proving that he paid his bill, he will have to stand the loss, and it is probable that this case, and the opportunities afforded by the system for similar transactions without discovery will caution citizens to abandon the practice.

WORK OF THE CROOKS.

Joseph Brashers reports stolen from a shed in rear of Sixteenth and E streets, a set of bricklayers' tools.

The greatest muslin and cambric underwear sale in the city's history.

The ladies of Washington shall be given the greatest treat of their lives tomorrow by being offered the entire surplus stock of one of the most famous underwear manufacturers in the world at from a fourth to a half of their actual value. The purchase is the largest that has been brought to this city, and while the season for the wear of thin muslin and cambric underwear is about at its end, we know you will not ignore this offering because of its extreme cheapness.

We have divided the purchase into four lots—put them on separate tables on the third floor, and Monday you may pick your choice. It's an offering you won't forget, because the values are greater than you've ever before been able to buy for so little.
