

FISHERGIRL'S ROMANCE.

Married Millions, But Is Now Seeking Divorce. New York, Sept. 19.—Mrs. Dorothy Prindall Norman is seeking a divorce from Hugh K. Norman, of Newport, while she was abroad last November.

Dorothy Prindall was a little fisher maiden in quaint old Gloucester, Mass., twelve years ago, and was in short skirts when the son of a millionaire, George H. Norman, of Newport, saw her and fell in love with her.

The alliance was got entirely agreeable to the Normans, but Hugh's picture of his intended bride prepared the way for her coming to Newport.

They were not long in finding that they were congenial spirits and as their association was mutually agreeable they met with frequency.

The awakening in her husband of a former love for an early acquaintance is said to have given Mrs. Norman any justification for her course and she made no protest when the rumor reached her of her husband's action.

Mrs. Norman's petition reveals that it was while abroad that her husband is alleged to have deserted her. It was on this trip that another chapter in the romance was enacted.

When his cash in hand was exhausted he turned to his wife for assistance. She cheerfully advanced the cash, feeling certain that one who would spend money in this manner would not squander millions behind him.

HELD AGAINST HIS WILL.

Rough Rider Easton's Troubles at Castle William. New York, Sept. 19.—Rough Rider Stephen Easton, who lost his speech and hearing by the explosion of a shell at the battle of San Juan Hill and who later contracted typhoid fever, called at a newspaper office yesterday and handed to a reporter a paper pad on which he had just written:

"I am a Rough Rider. I want to find out what Uncle Sam is going to do with me. All my regiment is mustered out. Why they don't discharge me and let me go home I don't know. I don't belong to the Thirteenth Regiment, which is in charge of Castle William, where I am confined in a cell. Every one seems to have forgotten me. I have had no pay for more than three months."

Easton's case is both sad and peculiar. When he joined the Rough Riders, in May last, and was sent to Cuba with his regiment he was physically and mentally sound. After he recovered from the fever he was sent to Key West on the transport Troop and remained in the hospital there until he was brought to North on the transport San Marcos.

He was then afflicted with melancholia and had a suicidal tendency. He made several attempts to kill himself while on the San Marcos and it was necessary to place him under restraint. He was taken to Governor's Island, handcuffed and under guard, and placed in a cell in Castle William, the military prison, as a means of protection against a possible recurrence of his suicidal mania.

Although under guard, he has been treated with hospital care, and otherwise treated as a convalescent soldier should be. That good care has been taken of him is shown by his robust appearance, and by the fact that the soldier in charge of him yesterday, Private Thomas F. Healey of the Thirteenth Regiment, reported that his mental condition is greatly improved, but that with the exception of occasional light moments, being that of a perfectly sane man.

The horse was one of a team of roadsters which had been driven, attached to a one-seated carriage, by Dr. D. Saladino, of No. 23 Broome Street. With Dr. Saladino were his wife and baby. At Fifth Avenue and Forty-third Street the horse shied and the whiffletree snapped.
