THE FIRST TOUCH OF JULY WEATHER

Without Warning the Thermometer Jumps to 80.

The Weather Man Says Winter Has Gone at Last.

An Ideal Summer Day When All Nature Seemed Jubilant to the Extreme.

Miss July visited the handsomest city in the country yesterday and after giving Miss April a good scolding for the surly disposition shown by the latter in the first week of her month, departed for Humidville, where she will remain until the last day of June.

With Miss July came a benison of real summer. The sun shone forth as though it held an advertising contract with a soap powder firm, the clouds sneaked off into the horizon in disgust, the sky beamed as though ever innocent of frowns or sulks, the breezes held a peace jubilee, the buds peeked out in wonder at the wonderful weather, and the grass was the cleanest, greenest grids of the season.

And the great careless citizenry awoke and found that it must have slept, apace, for here was summer, real, old, genuine summer, which smacked of airy goods, languid warmth, pleasant things, and happy outings. So the citizenry amputated its straw hats, trimmed its gauzy bonnets, dug out its camphorated "white flaxins," and hid itself out of doors to greet the welcome summer.

And the mercury seeing all this, thought itself that it must be summer, whereupon it leaped its mercury and called gaily up, up, up, until it feared that it might bump its head. So it remained and gossiped with its old friend, Eighty-degrees, whom it had not seen for many months, and only the bedtime signal from the sleepy sun caused the delighted mercury to retire to the privacy of slightly lower figures.

It was indeed a glorious day and it was proud of the title, first of the summer, though many weeks in advance of the real show. All the sorrow and misery and pain and privation of months was forgotten in the new, sweet balm of new life. Even the cynic and the pessimist and the anti-imperialist opened his windows and thought that it was a good world, and that it was sweet to live. It was a day of better to the homeless, life to the invalid, hope to the hopeless, and joy to the mourning.

Those who might not do the new proud garb of style were fully content to roam and survey man's inheritance. The river, the parks, the woods, all had new joys and new meanings. Thousands walked where none had passed for many months, and all this was good.

The streets were glowing in sunshine and the parks and public breathing places during the day. Thousands more found pleasure in trips to rustic nooks in Virginia and Maryland, via bicycle and vehicle. The open cars were for ladies and gentlemen, and the closed ones were boycotted. Air and sunshine was in favor everywhere, and the first taste of the joys of summertime intoxicated the entire public.

At times during the early afternoon the mercury registered over 80 degrees, yet the temperature was not uncomfortable. It was hot, but not humid. A slight breeze fanned the hot pavements and the sensation of real atmospheric warmth was delicious after a stretch of raw and even weather.

Sun baths were in vogue. The ancient and honorable citizen snuggled in the parks with the buffeted and unknown interlun. The old sweet scent of dog days was alert and men shirked from things light and carefree, and therefore was summer inaugurated even in April.

JUBILEE DECORATIONS.

New Plans Adopted and Important Matters Considered.

A well-attended meeting of the committee on decorations for the National Peace Jubilee was held at general headquarters last night. The matter of embellishing the headquarters was considered and many novel designs for arches and illuminations were received. About forty members were present.

Chairman M. Dymally presided, with Col. M. E. Urell as vice chairman and Arthur D. Marks as secretary. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted. Joseph Harvey reported that the committee on the decoration of the building occupied as Jubilee headquarters, had received a large number of bids for the work. The lowest of these bids was $35.

After some discussion the latter bid was accepted and the subcontractor was empowered to go ahead and decorate the building according to the accepted design.

Designs for the arches were submitted by Messrs. Hopkins and Hoffman. These were referred to the subcommittee on arches. C. H. Rudolph suggested that a subcommittee on searchlights be appointed to determine the location for searchlights. The committee was appointed, and will go to work at once.

It was suggested by John Doyle Carmody that the local architects be requested to submit competitive designs for arches. There are already three prominent architects on the committee on decorations, and it is expected that many novel and beautiful designs will be obtained.

The committee then adjourned until Thursday next at 8 p. m.

The committees on music and railroads will meet at headquarters this afternoon and complete some important business. The committee on civic parades will hold an important meeting at 8 o'clock tonight. Every member is requested to attend.

W. L. Marsh, of the Society of Mayflower Descendants, has been appointed on the executive committee. Mrs. Mary E. Cones has accepted an appointment on the committee on the historical program. The Sons of the Revolution and Society of 1812 are also represented upon the executive committee.

The following members of the committee were present last night:

Charles Howard, Joseph A. Burkard, A. Knudsen, James Stralinger, John Dole Canopy, Arthur Marks, Conrad H. Smith, Paul Robert Castleberg, Ernest Mayer, J. D. Ergeod, J. Williams Lee, H. T. Wheeler, George A. Mason, W. G. L. Marsh, C. J. Metcalfe, George E. Yonson, Charles Goldsmith, J. Goldenberger, H. A. Hopkins, J. Henry Bussler, T. H. Fickford, C. H. Rudolph, C. J. Metcalfe, R. B. Nason, J. J. Foreville, J. W. Carr, R. T. Craig, Matthew Goodard, J. F. Weight, Lewis Sisson, Fred L. Baker, Harry Morrison, A. C. Rogers, F. Clark, E. J. Lewis, R. Collingsworth, O. A. AN ALLEGED EMBEZZLER.

James Gallaher Brought From Baltimore Under Arrest.

James Gallaher, a former resident of this city, was arrested in Baltimore yesterday on a charge of embezzlement and brought here last night and turned over to the United States marshal. Gallaher was employed some time ago as an agent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company here, and is accused of embezzling its funds. He left Washington about six weeks ago and went to Baltimore, where he secured employment at the Camden Station. In the mean time he was indicted by the grand jury for the District, but was not located until last Wednesday.

Gallaher was seen last night and admitted that he had retained a small sum of the insurance company's money, but claimed that it was only about $10, and just about enough to cover his claim for commission and salary.
