

Popular Song.

JORDAN.—NO. 2.

Oh I cum to de city on a pleasant afternoon, In de year, fifty-three, I amartin, An whatever I did turn all de people sang a tune, An dey call it "On de odder side o' Jordan."

Wid a pull off your coat, an roll up your sleeves, Jordan's a hard road to travel, Pull off your coat, an roll up your sleeves, For to travel on de odder side o' Jordan.

Just about a year ago, dere was a tander gust; When hung'ry old Cowhook cum roarin, An he paid us a wisset for to raise a leetle dust, An now spends it on de odder side o' Jordan.

Oh dere railroad, an steambot, will take you mighty An you find it berry nice to sit aboard on, [cheap, But nebtake anap, ordery rous you from your sleep, When you find yourself on odder side o' Jordan.

Poor Mrs. Beacher Stow, she thinks herself so brave, So she left her own country accordin, [Slaves, She went on too England 'r to see dere White For to write about on odder side o' Jordan.

Now all my friends, I'm gwine to shut my mouth, But you'll hear ob me again, take my word on, An if you wanta song, just you cum to Ninth & South, Whar you're bound to git de odder side o' Jordan.

bles, you would say that it is like nothing so much as the after cabin of a Gravesend steamer on a summer Sunday afternoon. There is just such a row of tables on each side; just such a low roof; just such a thick palpable air, uncertain light, and noisy, steamy crowd of occupants. The place is intolerable in itself, but fall to upon the steaming block of baked veal which is set before you; clear your throat of the tobacco-smoke by mighty draughts of the pale yellow wine which is its proper accompaniment; finally, fill a deep-bowled meerschaum with Three Kings tobacco, creating for yourself your own private and exclusive atmosphere, and you begin to feel the situation. The temperature of nine host's cellar aids imagination greatly in recalling the idea of the old bakehouse, and there comes over you, after a while, a sense of stifling that mixes with the nightmare, usually constituting in this place an after-supper nap. In the waking lethargy that succeeds, you feel as if jostled in dark vaults by a mob of frantic Turks, labouring heavily to get breath, and sneaking in foul water for air.

Possibly when fully awakened, you begin to consider that the Turks' Cellar is not the most healthful place of recreation to be in; and cleaving the dense smoke, you ascend into sunlight. Perhaps you stroll to some place where the air is better, but which may still have a story quite as exciting as the catastrophe of the imperial bakehouse; perhaps to Bertholdsdorf, a pretty little market town with a tall-steeped church, and a half ruined battlement, situated on the hill slope about six miles to the south of Vienna. It forms a pretty summer day's ramble. Its chronicle is the worthy Markttrichter, or Town-justice, Jacob Trinksgeld, and his unvarnished story, freely translated, runs thus:—

"When the Turkish army, two hundred thousand strong without their allies, raised the siege of Raab, the retreating host of rebels and Tartars were sent to overrun the whole of Austria below the Enns on this side of the Danube, and to waste it with fire and sword. This was done. On the ninth of July, detached troops of Spahis and Tartars appeared before the walls of Bertholdsdorf, but were beaten back by our armed citizens. These attacks were repeated on the tenth and twelfth, and met with a determined resistance from the city of Vienna, which had invested, they gathered in increased force about our devoted town, and on the fifteenth of July attacked us with such fury on every side, that, seeing it was no longer possible to hold out against them, partly from their great numbers, and partly from our falling of powder; and moreover, seeing that they had already set fire to the town in several places, we were compelled to seek shelter with our goods and chattels in the church and fortress, neither of which were as yet touched by the flames.

"On the sixteenth, the town itself being then in ashes, there came a soldier dressed in the Turkish costume, save that he wore the leather jerkin of a German horseman, into the high-street, and waving a white cloth, he called out in the Hungarian language, to those of us who were in the fortress, that if we would ask for grace, both we and ours should be protected, and a safe conduct (salva qua) given to us that should be our future defence. Thereupon we held honest council together, citizens and neighbors then present, and in the meantime gave reply, translated also into Hungarian, that if we should agree thereto, we would set up a white flag upon the tower as a sign of our submission. Early on the morning of the nineteenth of July, there came a Pacha from the camp at Vienna, at the head of a great army, and with him the same Turk who had on the previous day made the proposal to us. And the Pacha sat himself down upon a red carpet spread on the bare ground, close by the house of Herr Strenginger, till we should agree to his terms. It was five o'clock in the morning before we could make up our minds.

"Then, when we were all willing to surrender, our enemies demanded, in the first place, that two of our men should march out of the fortress as hostages, and that two Turks should take their places with us; and that a maiden, with loose streaming hair, and a wreath upon her forehead, should bring forth the key of the town, seeing that this place had never till then been taken by an enemy. Further, they demanded six thousand forins ransom from us, which, however, we bated to four thousand, handing to them two thousand florins at once, upon three dishes, with the request that the remainder should be allowed to stand over till the forthcoming day of John the Baptist. As soon as this money had been paid over to them, the Pacha called such of our faithful garrison as were in the church to come and arrange themselves in the square, that he might see how many safe conduct were required; but, as each armed man came to the door, his musket was torn out of his hand, and such as resisted were dragged by the hair of the head into the square by the Turks, and told that they would need no weapons, seeing that to those who sought for mercy, the passes would be sufficient protection. And thus were our arms carried away from us.

"As soon as the whole garrison, thus utterly defenceless, were collected in the public square, there sprung fifty Turks from their horses, and with great rudeness began searching every one of them for money or other valuables; and the citizens began already to see that they were betrayed into a surrender, and some of them tried to make their escape—among others, Herr Strenginger, the town-justice; but he was struck down immediately, and he was the first man murdered. Upon this, the Pacha stood up, and began to call out with a loud, clear voice to his troops, and as they heard his words, they fell upon the unarmed men in the market-place, and hewed them down with their scimitars without pity or remorse—sparing none in their eagerness for the butchery; and which, in spite of their haste, was not ended till between one and two o'clock in the afternoon. Of all our citizens, only two escaped the slaughter, and they contrived to hide themselves in the tower, but those who fled out of the town were captured by the Tartars, and instantly despatched. Then, having committed this cruel barbarism, they seized the women and children who had been left for safety in the church, and carried them away into slavery, taking care to lurn and utterly destroy the fortress ere they departed. And when Vienna was relieved, and the good people there came among the ruins of Bertholdsdorf, they gathered together the headless and mangled remains of our murdered citizens to the number of three thousand five hundred, and buried them all in one grave."

In "eternal remembrance" of this catastrophe, the worthy town-justice, Trinksgeld, in seventeen hundred ordered a painting to be executed, representing the fearful scene described. It occupies the whole of one side of the Town-hall, and in its quaint minuteness of detail, and defiance of perspective—depicting not merely the slaughter of the betrayed Bertholdsdorfers, but the concealment of the two who were fortunate enough to escape, and who are helplessly apparent behind some loose timber—would be ludicrous, were it not for the sacred gravity of the subject.

As it is, we quit the little romantic town with a sigh, and turning our faces toward Vienna, wonder what the Young Turks of eighteen hundred and fifty-four may possibly think of the Old Turks of one hundred and thirty years ago.

GOING IT ALONE.—The undersigned having taken to himself the store formerly owned by Fatchin & Swan, takes pleasure in informing his friends and the public generally, that he has just received from the city a splendid assortment of Dry Goods, Hardware, Queensware, Hats and Caps, Boots and Shoes, and every thing else usually kept in a country store. Persons wishing to buy cheap and good Goods, and who are tired of being deceived by the low prices of the "Cheap Goods Store," are invited to call on the undersigned at his store in the county. His motto is "a noble penny rather than a slow sixpence."

THE AMERICAN BOARDING HOUSE.—The subscriber would inform the public that he has just completed a large new building, on the South end of Second Street, Clearfield, Pa., which he has furnished and fitted up in the most comfortable manner for the accommodation of travellers and permanent boarders. His charges will be moderate, and his house conducted in a decent, sober and orderly manner, where all quiet and peace loving people, who may visit Clearfield can find a temporary home. JOHN S. RADEBACH, July 15, 1854.

NEW CLOTHING STORE.—Meyer Lehman would inform the public that he has opened a new and splendid assortment of Clothing, of the best quality and lowest prices, at his Store, near the office of L. J. Crans, Esq. Clearfield, Pa. Every variety of Clothing, Hats, Caps, and Fancy articles. He will sell cheaper than any other store in the county. He defies competition. Call and see for yourselves. Coffins made, and funerals attended on one short notice. June 27, 1854.—Jly.

IMPORTANT REDUCTION IN POST-AGE.—We congratulate our subscribers and the reading public generally on the cheapness with which they can now receive our reprints by mail. The postage hitherto—though gradually reduced since 1844—has always operated as a discouragement to their circulation in places inaccessible by express or other modes of regular private conveyance. Hence, as yet they have been a comparative mass of mail circulation. We hope now that the postage is merely nominal, a new impetus will be given to these valuable works, and that no Post Office within the United States will remain unvisited by at least one copy of the four Reviews and Blackwoods Magazine. The Postage on Blackwood and the four Reviews is now but 72 cents a year, and the subscription price is but $3; and when taken with any of the four Reviews but $2, a year!

GRAHAM'S MAGAZINE.—NEW VOL.—JUNE 1854.—Containing his readiness to receive orders for the New Volume, the editor does not know he has any very brilliant ideas to hold out in large capitals to dazzle people's eyes. "Graham" will be pretty much what it has been the last volume, with some improvements which experience suggests. No number will contain less than 100 pages of matter, and the readers of "Graham" may rely with great confidence upon this volume shall contain OVER TWELVE HUNDRED PAGES! Of the very best reading matter that capital can command from original sources, or be selected from the vast mass of available material. The aim of the editor will be to produce a publication which shall be valuable in matter, and choice in taste and style; and he flatters himself, from the known talents of his contributors, that he will be able to present as many good original articles to his readers as any publication of the day. He shall not, however, hesitate to publish, from time to time, articles from English authors, and translations from the best German and French writers, provided the pieces have never before appeared in print in this country. Essays on important Political Subjects will likewise be inserted, and criticisms on the Literature of America and the movements of the Age. The Review Department in which a large and liberal spirit of criticism will always be maintained, will be extended. For the defence of American Literature the editor will always be ready; the maintenance of a correct tone in the Magazine, he will, if possible, be still more watchful.

EACH NUMBER WILL CONTAIN AN ENGRAVING FROM A FINE STERIL PLATE IN ADDITION TO THE CHOICE DESIGNS AND ENGRAVINGS OF DEVEREUX, who will supply illustrations for the text in the body of the book. The aim of the editor will not be to much to increase the number of his engravers; as to secure for those he publishes the most finish the artist can give them; for common wood-cuts are so easily multiplied, that the most difficult and beautiful may outrank in dreary display the choicest paper-cut. The Editor does not feel, that with his own readers, he can increase his claims to respect by insisting on any very great superiority of "Graham's" general style. He is confident he can safely confide in their friendship and support, and in its past management for its present list, and such increase as naturally grows out of an extended circulation in a country where readers are multiplying so rapidly.

Of the January number the first edition will be 50,000 copies, and the editor trusts his old friends will be so prompt in renewing old clubs, and extending the list among new ones, that the first edition shall be sold out by the end of the year, will ultimately establish, as the permanent circulation of "Graham." Postage.—Subscribers in any part of the United States may now receive the Magazine, by mail, at three cents a copy; and in foreign countries a postage, payable at the Post-office where it is received. Postmasters and Editors all over the Union, are respectfully requested to act as Agents for the New Volume.

Terms.—The Terms of "Graham" are Three Dollars for single subscribers, if paid in advance. For six dollars in advance, one copy is sent three years. We continue the following long terms for Clubs to be sent by mail to one address, and in the country, to our Post-office. 2 copies, $6 per an. 5 " " " " 10 " " " " 10 " " " " 20 " " " " 30 " " " " 40 " " " " 50 " " " " The money for clubs always should be sent in advance. Subscriptions may be sent at our risk. When the sum is large, a draft should be procured if possible, the cost of which may be deducted from the amount.

Any person desiring of receiving a copy as a sample, can be accommodated by notifying the Editor by letter, (post-paid). Address, always post-paid, GEO. H. GRAHAM, Editor, Aug. 25, 106 Chesnut st., Philadelphia. WHAT CAN BE GOT FOR $5.—The undersigned has entered into an arrangement by which they agree to furnish the Knickerbocker Magazine, (monthly), the Home Journal, (weekly), and the Musical World and Times, (weekly), to new subscribers, at the very moderate price of five dollars a year for the three publications; all orders, enclosing that amount to Dyer & Willis, will be promptly attended to.

SAMUEL HEUSTON, Publisher of the Knickerbocker, MORRIS & WILLIS, Publishers of the Home Journal, Dyer & Willis, Publishers of the Musical World and Times, 375 Broadway, New York. GRAND LITERARY AND ARTISTIC COMBINATION. Arrangements have been made to furnish the Knickerbocker Magazine, the Home Journal, and the New York Musical World and Times, to new subscribers, for five dollars a year. This is a cheap literature, with a constant flow of new matter, and is published weekly. The Knickerbocker Magazine is published monthly, and contains a variety of new subscribers, at the very moderate price of five dollars a year for the three publications; all orders, enclosing that amount to Dyer & Willis, will be promptly attended to.

HOUSEHOLD WORDS.—A MONTHLY MAGAZINE. Edited by PERCIVAL LEAR. Only those who read the series promptly issued every week by DICKENS, with thoughtful appreciation, know how to prize it. "Household Words" is a monthly journal for the people, devoted to common subjects, uncommonly treated, in an original and interesting manner, and wonderfully fertile in subject. The pieces are the right length; they exhibit wonderful variety and are attuned to a harmonious key and remarkable unity of effect. For the month of the year, in short, the "Household Words" for a family journal. Pleasant stories, useful knowledge, graceful anecdotes, charming essays alternate in its pages. It is not always convenient to secure a copy of the weekly issue on the arrival of a steamer, in order to enjoy regularly this delightful work, we advise our readers to possess themselves of the handsome monthly reprint of McElrath & Baker, who bring out "Household Words" with commendable punctuality, at New York, Frederic Street, 35 West corner of the Boston street. Boston Transcript.

The articles, both in style and thought, are far superior to the trash that occupies the pages of many of our popular magazines.—New York Atlas. The above are but a few extracts from numerous notices of the press lately received. Those who wish "Household Words" will receive it monthly by mail upon remitting the subscription price. Specimen numbers sent on receipt of five red postage stamps. Aug. 23, McELRATH & BAKER, Publishers, 17 Spruce St., New York.
