

ODDS & ENDS.

A young Englishman, while at Naples, was introduced at an assembly of one of the first ladies, by a Neapolitan gentleman; while he was there his snuff box was stolen from him. The next day, being at another house, he saw a person taking snuff out of his box. He ran to his friend—"There," said he, "that man in blue, with gold embroidery, is taking snuff out of the box stolen from me yesterday. Do you know him? Is he not a sharper?"

"Take care," said the other, "that man is of the first quality." "I do not care for his quality," said the Englishman, "I must have my snuff box again; I will go and ask him for it." "Pray be quiet," said his friend, "and leave it to me to get back your box."

Upon this answer the Englishman went away, after inviting his friend to dine with him the next day. He accordingly came, and, as he entered, said, "There, I return you your snuff box."

"Well, how did you obtain it?"

"Why, I did not wish to make any noise about it, so I picked his pocket of it."

Some years since an incident occurred in the Boston Lunatic Hospital, of a very peculiar character. A mother and daughter both became inmates, and were placed in the same story of the building, where they had access to the same hall. They met and recognized each other, though one had left the other years ago in Ireland. Both had crossed the ocean, become residents here, and lost all knowledge of each other's history of fate; both became bereft of reason, and came upon the public for support, and in a mad-house, surrounded by those who were hopelessly insane, the child and parent met; and though reason was dethroned, and each was there with a "mind diseased," yet nature triumphed over the clouded intellect, and for a brief moment the parties talked of the land of their birth, and then they separated from each other. This incident is of romantic interest, sufficient to suit the most anxious inquirer after extraordinary adventures.

The Rochester Democrat, in discussing the question of voting in camp, or by proxy, has the following:

"We have seen a election carried on in the army of the Potomac. A regiment of Ohio cavalry cast their solid vote against Vandalism, voting while in the saddle, and facing the enemy on the morning of a day of almost incessant battle. And that act of the Ohio soldiery—citizens in loyal blue—standing in line across the road at Brandy Station, each right hand grasping the ready sabre, which in an hour was to hew the rebels in front, and the left depositing the ballot which was to rout the Copperheads in the rear—it was one of the most sublime and significant spectacles we have ever witnessed, and how truly American!"

Mrs. Douglas, widow of the late Stephen A. Douglas, has written a letter to a friend in New York, in which she denies, in the most explicit and emphatic manner, the reports which have been going the rounds of the newspapers that she is employed as a clerk in one of the departments at Washington. She complains, naturally enough, of the annoyance which the circulation of this unfounded statement occasions her. It probably has its origin in the mistake of some correspondent not so familiar with her personal appearance as he supposed himself to be, and has been thoughtlessly copied by others.

One evening, a clergyman gave out the hymn, which was in measure rather harder than usual, and the deacon led off. At its close, the clergyman said—"Brother B—will please repeat the hymn, as I cannot pray after such singing." The deacon very composedly pitched into another tune, and the clergyman proceeded with his prayer. Having finished, he took up the book to give the second hymn, when he was interrupted by the deacon gravely getting up and saying, in a voice audible to the whole congregation—"Will Mr. C—please make another prayer? It would be impossible for me to sing after such praying as that."

Cesar has had the testimony of ages to his bravery, and yet he refused a challenge from Antony. He very calmly answered the bearer of the message:—"If Antony is weary of his life, tell him there are other ways to death, beside the point of my sword." How well would it be if there were more instances of the like independence of mind!
