

THE ARAB AND HIS SERPENTS.—A Paris correspondent says: I stopped to see some of the numerous shows, which are in full operation during the holidays. I found myself at last within a circle where an Arab was showing off with seven or eight great serpents. I wanted to turn and go away, but the crowd had become so great that I found I could not move, and so was obliged to remain a witness of certainly one of the most curious and frightful spectacles ever offered to the public. The snake charmer was seated on the ground, after the fashion of his country, with his snakes all around him; two or three of them were of most enormous size, almost as large as a full grown boar. He would take them up in his hands, let them wind around his legs, arms, body, neck and head; stick out their forked tongues and kiss him on the hands, the lips, the eyelids, and present their heads or tails to him as he commanded them.

While the spectacle was proceeding in the most successful manner, one of the largest snakes slipped off unnoticed by the Arab, or apparently so, and dragging itself along, got out of the crowd, everybody, you may be sure, giving him a clear space. Just out of the circle two dogs were playing together. The serpent no sooner espied them than he raised his head, and in an instant was busy winding himself around the body of one of the unfortunate animals. The poor dog literally screamed with fright. It was like the scream of a human being.

The Arab no sooner heard it and understood the cause than he got up, went to the spot, and without touching the serpent at all, spoke a few words, and the creature instantly uncoiled itself slowly until it left the dog free, and I assure you one of the canine race never ran as fast as that dog did as soon as he got loose. The surprise of the spectators of this scene knew no bounds, and pieces of silver were literally showered into the Arab's turban.

Mr. Greeley, as is well known to his friends, is very fond of a dry joke on almost any subject, and in his love of jest does not even spare what is called the divine institution, matrimony. A young man went to him not long since for advice, and informed the journalist that he had thought seriously of settling in North Carolina, where it appeared to him there was a good opening for youthful energy and enterprise. "Don't do it!" said Horace, emphatically; "don't do it, my friend. I went there once myself, once too often, indeed; I found my wife there. Take my advice young man, and keep out of North Carolina."

A small boy heard a parson preach a sermon from these words, "Ye must be born again," which was frequently repeated during the discourse. The little hearer paid strict attention to all that was said, and particularly to the text.

After he returned he became melancholy. His father observed it and inquired the cause. The boy told him that the preacher said he must be born again. "Well, my son," replied his father, "why do you cry about it?" "Oh!" said the boy, "I'm so afraid that next time I'll be made a gal!"

The funniest story of the age is told by a Detroit paper. A lady suspected her husband of improper intimacy with the hired girl. Without informing her husband of her intention, she sent the girl off that night, and went to sleep in the girl's bed. She had not been there long when somebody came and took the other half of the bed. About two hours after the wife arose, intending to reveal the infidelity of her spouse, and struck a light, when lo! it was the hired man.

"Billy," said a benevolent vender of food for stores, as with cheerful visage he sat down to his matutinal repast, "is it cold?" "Werry cold, father," was the reply. "Is the gutters froze, Billy?" rejoined the parent. "Werry hard, father, they is," was the response. "Ah!" sighed the old gentleman, "put up the coal two pence a pail, Billy. God help the poor!"
