HORACE GREELEY AS A HACK DRIVER. -A Washington correspondent relates the following amusing incident: The philosopher of the Tribune arrived in Washington a few evenings since, and happening to have a few hours leisure on Thursday night, he concluded to attend the reception of Speaker Colfax. He arrayed himself in his usual neat and fashionable costume-boots like young gun-boats; pentaloons rather the worse of the wear, of Chatham street stock, and a couple of inches too short, at that ; vest, cheap and coat long, threadbare, and dirty withalthe whole surmounted by a hat of the fashion of twenty years ago, hung on the back of his head, and inclining at an angle of forty five degrees. He made his way to Four-and a-half street, ascended the steps of the Speaker's house, and fell into the rear of a large and elegantlysoldressed crowd of ladies and gentlemen, pressing their way to the parlor. On such occasions there is always a good deal of trouble with the backmen. They will insist upon disregarding the rules in these cases made and provided, that they shall move to the other side of the street as fast as they are relieved of their gay and precious burdens, so as to prevent a general blockade, and to make way for those who are yet to come. Some times there is quite a row between the masters of outside ceremonies and an obstinate Jehu who attempts to ignore or disregard of rheumatism, and can walk without the aid the rules of vehicular discipline. Horace was quietly waiting his turn on the occasion referred to, or, rather, was leisurely waiting on the door-steps for the "rush' to cease, not taking much notice of what was going on around him-composing a tariff article or an amnesty pronunciamento for the Tribune perhaps-when a Milesian gentleman, who had been officiating as a sort of outside usher, dashed at him it a fit of great rage, and told him if he didn't move his d-d old hack, he'd start his team for him, and let them go to h-l it they liked. The Tribune philosopher reminded his assailant that this was a clear case of mistaken identity; "I'm not a hack driver, sir; you are mistaken altogether." "Aint you the owner of that pair of grays?" inquired the officiating Hibernian. "No, sir; my name is Greeley; I've come to attend the reception." The truth now flashed upon the Irish loudly calls for increased watchfulness, and mind that he had grossly insulted the greater care in the selection of the remedy. editor of the Tribune, and he commenced apologizing. "You see, sir," said he, "we
