Wasted Generosity.
"Oh, I'm so sorry I can't marry you. I had no idea you thought of me that way!"
"Well, what do you suppose I have been letting your father beat me with a golf all the time for?"—Judge.

Trouble Saved.
"I thought you were to move to a more expensive apartment."
"The landlord saved us the trouble," replied Mrs. Flimgilt. "He raised the rent of the one we have been occupying."—Washington Star.

Beat Solomon a Mile.
She—That's Mr. Osborn over there. He married a million. He—You don't say! Well, that beats Solomon.
The Egyptian Lotus.
The lotus figures to a very great extent in ancient Egyptian sculpture, though the flower is often crude and difficult to make out. The fruit of the Egyptian lotus was forbidden as food to disciples of Pythagoras. The lotus was dedicated to the goddess of fecundity, Isis, and buds are said to have been found in the tombs of ancient Egyptian kings. Egyptologists have decided that the lotus of Egypt was the common white water lily of the Nile and not the true sacred nelumbo of the far east.

An Ungallant Rascal.
"I suppose," said the angular spinster, "that you never had a romance?"
"Dat's where youse is wrong." replied the unlaundersed hobo. "I wunst had a sweetheart wot wuz a dead ringer for youse."
"And did she die?" asked the angular spinster as she helped him to another hunk of pie.
"No, ma'am," answered the hobo. "When leap year come round she asked me t' marry her—an' I run away from home."—Chicago News.

Last Wish of a Poet.
I wish to lie on the north side of the churchyard about the middle of the ground, where the morning and evening sun can linger the longest on my grave. I wish to have a rough, unhewn stone, something in the form of a milestone, so that the playing boys may not break it in their heedless pastimes, with nothing more on it than this inscription: "Here rest the hopes and ashes of John Clare." I desire that no date be inscribed thereon, as I wish it to live or die with my poems and other writings, which, if they have merit, with posterity it will, and if they have not it is not worth preserving.—John Clare, 1864.

RIGHT LIVING.
Live right today and it will be a step toward living right tomorrow. No man has any right to expect to live differently tomorrow from the way in which he is living today. What he chooses for today he chooses for tomorrow. What he overcomes today he is overcoming for tomorrow. Yet most of us live as though we did not believe this, and we try hard to persuade ourselves that we are safe in so living.

Russia's Fisheries.
Russia ranks third among the fish and deep sea food producing countries of the world. The total yield of fish is well over $8,000,000 worth a year, but even this great supply is not equal to the needs of the population.

Hand-me-downs.
"I have to wear father's old clothes. I don't suppose you girls have any troubles like those."
"Yes, we do," said the girl. "I have to wear mother's old hair."—Kansas City Journal.

Soldering Aluminium.
When holes appear in aluminium utensils it is not necessary to discard the dishes as no longer useful, for by a simple method they can be made to take solder. Insert a brass or copper rivet in the hole, flatten both ends and then solder over both the inside and the outside surfaces in the usual manner. If you wish to solder a piece to a sound part of the utensil use a sharp awl to punch holes for holding spots of copper or brass. If the aluminium is very thick cut the holes with a small drill held in a carpenter's bit brace.

A Doleful Mood.
The proprietor of a Paris cafe noticed that after he had refused to give his pianist an increase of salary the number of his customers dwindled rapidly. It was only when all but one diner had deserted him that he discovered that the pianist had been inflicting Chopin's "Funeral March" on the audience nightly. The pianist, who was proceeded against in the law courts and was fined 5 francs, pleaded that he played according to the mood he felt in after his request had been refused.

Misfortune is no respecter of persons, and neither is fortune, for the matter of that.—Chicago News.

Wallack on the Ballet.
The late Lester Wallack once told a story of his still more famous father, James W., that as either an actor or a manager he could never tolerate the ballet.
One day there came to him a friend, a man about town, who said, "My dear Wallack, it is very curious that you do not see the beauties of imagination shown by the poses of the ballet." Going on in this strain, the visitor at last wore out the patience of the actor-manager, who replied:
"Look here, it is bad enough to stand these absurdities in an opera; but though I can comprehend people singing their joys, I am hanged if I can their dancing their griefs."

AFFLICTIONS.
Afflictions sent by Providence met the constancy of the noble minded, but confirm the obduracy of the wic. The same furnace that hardens clay liquefies gold, and in the strong manifestations of Divine power Pharaoh found his punishment, but David his pardon.—Cotton.

PRAYER BEFORE BATTLE.

When a Whole Army Kneled Before the Order to Attack.
During one of the numerous wars waged by France two centuries ago a strange scene took place near Saluzzo, a disputed outpost, which well illustrates the religious spirit which often prevailed among the soldiers of earlier times.
The French approached the besiegers' lines, and both armies were arranged for a conflict. The sun shone from a cloudless sky; every detail on each array in the field was visible to the other and both were beheld at once from the citadel.
There were three French marshals present, and it was Schomberg's turn to command. He drew up his 20,000 men in four lines, with skirmishers in front, and the regular cavalry were placed at stated intervals, ready to charge.
In this impressive order and in absolute silence the French advanced until nearly within cannon shot, when at a signal the army was halted and simultaneously knelt down to pray. Then followed the order to attack, which was silently and cheerfully obeyed.
The battle was not to be, however, for Mazam, amid a volley of musketry, suddenly appeared, rode at a gallop between the armies and stayed the incipient fight by bringing acceptable terms of peace.—Washington Star.

ANIMALS FIGURE IN STORIES OF THE WAR.

A cow strayed between French and German trenches, which were only 100 yards apart, and both sides agreed that whoever hit a horn first would be privileged to milk Bossy without molestation. The first shot came from the German lines and killed the cow.
A fat pig strayed into the French lines, and the men of two different batteries claimed it. It was tied to the wheel of an ammunition wagon, and although shrapnel began falling all around, the argument over the ownership did not abate until an officer ordered the pig cut in two and divided between the batteries, so the men could return to their guns.
By order of the mayor of Brausberg, East Prussia, the cats are being thinned out and the army helped at the same time, the skins of the felines being used for body belts and mittens for the soldiers, who believe cat skins ward off rheumatism.
A carrier pigeon took news out of the besieged city of Przemysl in Galicia to Vienna.
Marquis, dispatch dog of the Twenty-third French infantry, has been mentioned in the orders of the day. He was sent with an important dispatch through a fire zone too hot for a man to attempt at the battle of Sarrebourg, and delivered it, but he was so badly wounded he dropped dead as he reached his journey's end.
A Belgian farmer killed his last pig just before the Germans reached his farm. To save it he tucked the carcass in his bed, placed lighted candles near the sheeted form and was praying when a German soldier entered. Thinking they were in a chamber of death, the Germans withdrew and the farmer enjoyed his pork in peace.

LAWS OF WAR ON LAND.

Adopted to Save Conquered States From Organized Pillage.
The Hague laws of war on land, drawn up in 1899 and 1907 and adopted by all nations, were designed to check the rapacity of conquerors and to save vanquished states from organized spoliation, says Case and Comment.
Pillage is formally forbidden. This is a prohibition against the looting of captured towns, against acquiring booty at the expense of private property, but does not, of course, forbid the seizure of horses, arms or military supplies taken on the field of battle.
The laws further permit a military occupant to levy, in addition to the ordinary taxes, money contributions for the needs of the army or of the administration of the occupied territory. Contributions are to be required only on a written order and on the responsibility of a commander in chief.
Their collection is to be regulated by the rules in force for the assessment of taxes, and in every case a receipt is to be given to the individual payer. But this voucher, while evidence that money, goods or service has been exacted, implies in itself no promise to pay on the part of the occupant.

GLASS EYES ARE SCARCE.

None of Them, Has Come From Germany Since the War Began.
Glass eyes are getting scarcer and higher in price, according to the Crockery and Glass Journal, with no prospect of an increased supply while the war continues. The authorities in trade say that more than 3,000 people in this country wear glass eyes and keep on buying them from time to time, as the eyes usually wear out within a year or two.
New York city is the center of the glass eye trade in the United States, and the wholesalers say that all their imported eyes come from Germany. The importers also manufacture some eyes here, but all the material used comes from Germany. No shipment of eyes or material for eyes has been received since the war began. The present supply of manufactured eyes, the wholesalers say, will last only a few months. The material used in making eyes now on hand in this country will hardly last the remainder of the year, according to the trade reports. Even after the war ends there will be much delay before new supplies are available.

Getting at the Truth.

At twenty-three he thought fate was making a special effort to keep him down.
At thirty-five he thought he might have done great things if his wife had not been such a handicap.
At forty he believed he would have been a great man if his children had not made it necessary for him to cling quickly relieved.
Little Hannah had been left in the library one morning and shortly after she came running to her mother.
"Mother," she asked, "that ink that father writes with isn't indelible ink, is it?"
"No, dear," was the reply.
"Oh, I'm so glad of that," cried the child.
"Why, dear?" queried the mother.
"Why," said Hannah, "I've spilt it all over the library rug."—Boston Herald.

The Women of Belgium.

No one can travel in Belgium without being struck by the extraordinary activity and prominence of the women. Over the doors of shops of all descriptions the name of the owner or owners is frequently followed by "Sisters" or "Widow." You find them proprietors of hotels and restaurants. They are often custodians of the churches. They are employed to tow the boats along the canal banks. They cut up the meat in the butchers' shops, and they are even to be noticed shoeing horses at the forge.—Liverpool Mercury.
