Fifty Boys Ascend Mt. Timpanoogas

On Wednesday, August 19th, the Boy's Agricultural Club, under the direction of Messrs Mark Greene and Thom. Broadbent, planned a canyon trip which will forever remain historical in the memories of the boys who ascended the mighty peak of world fame.

The boy's outing began at 4 a. m., when all the boys met at the City Hall ready to leave for American Fork canyon. So zealous were the boys about their anticipated pleasures that someone rang the bell, calling some of the slumbering fellows, telling them that it was time to leave. The call was rather deceptive, when within a few seconds, the members of the fire department, together with a number of town folk, answered the call thinking of course there was a fire. Soon all were back to bed slumbering while the boys were on their way to the canyon.

At daylight the rugged canyon presented views that could be found in no other spot in the world, with such splendor and grandeur. Soon the canyon of the South Fork was reached, where the three teams were fed and where the boys prepared breakfast.

It was a sight never to be forgotten to the looker-on, in seeing ten fires over which the boy cooks were cooking their ham, bacon, eggs, potatoes, corn and tomatoes.

After breakfast was over and camp cleaned the boys prepared a lunch for their mountain meal. Soon they were seen wending their way up the zigzag trail, through groves of quaking aspens, over the roll off and up Bear canyon, continually crossing a stream of ice cold water fed from the snows above.

At noon the big snow banks below the cliffs of the peak were reached. Here the boys eat lunch and rested for the steep climb that was yet to come.

Again they ascended, soon reaching the beautiful falls below the summit. At 3 p. m. they were on the point of the second highest peak in Utah, one of the highest in the world, viewing a sight that could not be excelled by all nature. A perfect panorama of the country could be seen for miles. The city blocks of Salt Lake City, Heber and all Utah county towns showed very distinct.

The descent was made readily, and as the sun was about to dip under the western mountain, camp was reached. Here supper was cooked after which the tired, happy boys were on their homeward journey, reaching their destination at 10 p. m. Everyone saying that it was the best day they had ever spent.

The educational features of the trip were: 1st—The study of irrigation and drainage of the valleys. 2nd—The study of rock formation, erosion, faults, foldings, glaciers, rivers and lakes. 3rd—The study of the farm by virtue of its location. 22-11

STRANGE MAN WAS DEMENTED YOUTH FROM MURRAY

The young man who caused considerable excitement over the lake last week by his strange appearance and peculiar actions, turned out to be a half witted youth from Murray, named Wm. Kemp. It developed that he had hired the rig from Henry Thame's livery stable at Murray, and started south bound for nowhere. After the peculiar actions noted in our last issue, he went to Jones' ranch, secured supper and slept in the straw stack over night. Early the next morning he drove to Mosida and was reported to have gone on south.

City Marshal John S. Evans and George Hammer started for Elberta, down the east side of the lake, and finally located their man up to Mosida again. While on their way home they met Officer Sam Whittle and Mr. Thame and turned the man and out, fit over to them.

On his way down Kemp tried to sell the outfit to Oliver Cedarstrom for $50, but the cheapness of the offer made Cedarstrom suspicious.

The memory of Lopez, in connection with Kemp's actions, caused a high tension condition to exist among the lake shore residents till after the Murray authorities came down and got their man.

A BEAR STORY

G. A. Goates returned Sunday from a ten day's outing on the Weber River. He left Mrs. Goates and Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Peterson there. There are some bears on the Weber. A brother-in-law of Mr. Goates was sleeping on the ground on the north side of his wagon when he was awakened by something heavy on his legs. An examination in the moonlight revealed a good sized cub which ran away when the dogs were whistled for. Another member of the party was watching two cubs climb a tree, when the mother bear appeared on the scene and chased the two legged intruder into camp. A third one to have an experience was a lady member of the party, who went a short distance from camp to gather some wild raspberries. Coming onto a sudden raise, the lady and Mr. Brain came face to face and but a few rods apart. The bear was standing on its hind legs lazily eating the ripe, juicy berries. Needless to say, the lady was the first one to beat a retreat. While bears in that locality are very numerous, they seem to be harmless unless their cubs are attacked.

THRILLING EXPERIENCE OF GIRLS ON LAKE

Two young ladies from American Fork had an experience on Utah lake that they will not care to repeat. They had been visiting at the pumping plant south of Saratoga and Sunday were taken across the bay, a distance of about one mile to Saratoga, and a male escort doing the rowing. The girls thought it would be good sport to row the boat back to the pumps themselves, though neither of them had had experience in rowing.

When they left Saratoga the surface of the lake was smooth, but before they were half way on the return journey, a regular gale was blowing and the boat tossed by the high waves was drifting helplessly out to sea and threatening to be capsized almost any moment. To add to their danger the boat was also leaking, and required one girl's constant effort to keep the water bailed out. When the girls were about to despair, one of them began to pray, and strange as it may seem, the sea soon became calm and after a lot of hard work with blistered hands they pulled into port two of the most thankful girls that ever stepped onto dry land.

Anxious friends at the pumps watched the girls thrilling experience but were helpless because of having no boat, and corroborate the sudden coming up of the squall, also its equally sudden cessation.

Oh Where Is My Girl Tonight

The attention of this paper has been drawn a number of times of late to the freedom permitted the young girls of American Fork, or for that matter those of the surrounding towns also. Within the past ten days Justice Hunter has bound over two young men to answer in the district court on statutory charges. The unfortunate young ladies are hardly old enough to be out of high school, yet will soon become mothers, and besides causing their fond parents' hearts to be filled with grief, the effect of their indiscretion will go with them to their graves. The two young men and two young women include the four towns of Lehi, Alpine, American Fork and Pleasant Grove. The evidences in the cases goes to show that the girls had too much freedom. They were permitted to go to dances without escorts, and that often hours would intervene between the close of the dance and the time when the girls would arrive home. Last Sun. night two boys and girls drove up to the school property. One of the boys went around the building and when he returned was heard to say, "drink, it wont hurt you." The liquor strangled her, but the other seemed more used to it. As the empty bottle was tossed out of the buggy, it was picked up and found to be labeled a certain brand of whiskey sold by a local dealer.

The testimony last week before Judge Hunter showed that after returning from a party the couple were in the habit of calling at a certain local club where liquor would be obtained, and after being drunk there could be but one result.

It appears that of late there has grown up a custom of allowing young girls a freedom that a few years ago was undreamed of. We don't pretend to say just what steps should be taken, but we do think that the parents of young girls should know where their girls are at all times, at least till after they have passed the high school age, and it appears that the old poem "Oh Where is My Boy Tonight," could give way to one of modern origin, "Oh Where is My Girl Tonight."

Now is the time to sing "In Rose Leaf Time." You will find it at Brown's. 8-11

Because the fly is small and does not roar like a lion or devour its prey at a mouthful, mankind pays little attention to it. But the fly is as deadly a foe to civilization as any of the pests of more fearsome aspect, which man makes it his business to exterminate.

Some people never hand in an item of news for publication, but if we happen to miss an item in which they are interested they are sure to hand us a north pole stare that would freeze the liver of a polar bear.
