In End Collision

Another Bad Accident—Provo Man Narrowly Escapes

This city came near being the scene of another railroad accident when a passenger train from Provo was derailed at the crossing in which Provo was killed, the engine pulling a gondola car and the engine with two passenger cars. The head end of the train struck the east end of Provo and the passenger cars were going at full speed when they struck each other. Reverse motion was set, but the engine with its loads made a great smash up. The dead fireman, Provo, M. E. Barlow, an engineer lived in the city of Salt Lake, was killed. The other men were not injured. The passenger car passenger came on the scene as a most put both engines out and blocked traffic for the evening. The cars had to exchange passengers and the wreckage was cleared. Investigation was made and the blame was laid on the driver of whom were several orders, contrary to published rules of the port from Curtis Green rapidly recovering. He has a shoulder and ankle sprained on his right leg.

Thursday Tom Singleton and his wife and daughter were coming towards Pleasant Grove in their auto. George Hammer and a friend were following close behind in a big Buick. A good place to pass, Hammer tried to the left. Just then Singleton turned to the left to turn up a lane. Hammer seeing that he was about to smash into the little Ford, quickly shot over the rails and ties, missing the Singleton machine by six inches. A railroad tie was split in two, but other than a half dozen people having their hair stand on end, there was no damage done.

Over Mountain and Plain

A single telephone connected with no other is about the most useless thing in the world; but connect it with one other and both at once become serviceable.

The more telephones connected together through an exchange, the more valuable is the service of each individual telephone.

Likewise, the service of a telephone exchange having no connection with the exchanges of other communities is of very little value.

To furnish service of the highest efficiency and greatest value every exchange must be connected by Long Distance lines with every other exchange, and every telephone with every other telephone.

These Long Distance lines, in this western country, must necessarily traverse rugged mountains and desert plains—lines expensive to construct and costly to maintain.

In the territory of this company, 82,916 miles of Long Distance lines connect our 367 exchanges and 237,000 telephones.

That is what makes possible Universal Service. That is what makes YOUR service valuable.

ARE YOU HELPING?

Salt Lake Herald-Republic—The best way to form an impression of a neighboring city is to look at its newspapers. If these journals are poorly printed and sloppily written and if there is little advertising, the community is run down.

If the newspapers have a clean typographical appearance and show the expenditure of money for good reporting and writing, if the advertising columns are well filled, the community is going ahead.

People who may consider a given town as a place of residence send for copies of its newspaper, first to see what is going on there; second, to learn how much public spirit the town has. The residents are continually sending away the home paper and in so far as it is a good appearing journal it makes friends for the town and spreads its good reputation.

Newspaper publishers are generous with any growth of business they may gain. Nine-tenths of such growth is always put back into the paper in enlarging plant and increasing the force of workers. The moral is, that if you want a good impression of your town spread abroad, help the home paper to enlarge and improve its facilities.

Show the outside world that your heart is set for the upbuilding of your town, and the home trade that you merit their patronage through the support of the home paper and the solicitation of their trade.

The San Francisco Chronicle says: The codfish lays a million eggs, While the helpful hen lays one; But the codfish does not cackle, To inform us what she's done; And so we scorn the codfish coy, But the helpful hen we prize; Which indicates to thoughtful minds It pays to advertise.
