Great Cast in Production of "The Thief."

In casting the production of "The Thief," which will be shown at the Royal theatre on June 16 and 17, it was the desire to secure for the role of the frivolous and finally repentant wife an emotional actress capable of plumbing the intricacies of the part; which calls for an artist of no ordinary talent. It runs the scale of a woman's nature from her butterfly-like attitude toward life in the earlier scenes, to the great denouncement when husband and wife face each other, and her deceptions fall from her like a garment and the high character man to whom she is mated learns what manner of woman she is and learning still forgives. Miss Dorothy Donnelly whose "Madame X," was without doubt one of the finest emotional interpretations within a decade, her work in the photo-play version of "The Thief," in which Marguerite Hillington and Kyrle Bellow played for two years at Frohman's Lyceum Theatre, New York City, amply sustains the deep impression that Miss Donnelly has already made in parts calling for subtlety and a high interpretative genius. In her present vehicle Miss Donnelly obtains an opportunity for the dramatic expression of which she is a past-mistress and of which she has taken full advantage with striking results. Supporting Miss Donnelly, is Richard Buhler, a leading man of distinction and ability who has played many important parts in notable productions. Mr. Buhler appears in the part of the unsuspecting husband who, unaware of the crash of the fool's paradise in which he has been living, has been blind to the fact that it is his own wife who is the author of a series of thefts of which a young fool who is head over ears in love with her has been suspected. Other well-known people in the cast are Iva Shepard, Edgar Davenport, Henry Spangler and George de Carlton. That the production was made under the direction of Edgar Lewis, speaks for itself. In staging "The Thief," Mr. Lewis has made use of every device of his wide experience as a director, and the result upon the screen is a drama that thrills and holds with a tension that never relaxes till the last great scene.
