Poor Rich and Rich Poor

If you have canvassed to procure Help for the worthy, needy poor, You surely have not failed to find The varied traits of human kind; How some, though poor are large of heart And with their last would freely part, To help a brother in distress And make his load of suffering less; While some, who hoards of riches know, Are loath to feel for human woe, And treat misfortune as it were A thing they ne'er expect to share. The poor rich man, however pressed For means, will always do his best To help a brother, should he see Him badly pinched with poverty. What makes his giving doubly good— He gives his mite in happy mood; He does not hold you up to tell How little stuff he has to sell, Nor prate about the taxes great He owes the county, town or state. Oh, no, such things he hides from sight When he is asked for what is right. No matter if his purse be slim, You'll always get a note from him; He knows that giving to the poor Will heav'n and earthy bliss secure. He pays his way without regret, And dreads no dunning bills for debt; The merchants look him in the face And shake his hands with goodly grace; His credit is as good as gold, His friends are warm and manifold. The rich poor man feels poor, indeed, And when approached for those in need, He hesitates and wants to know How much was paid by so and so. Then, with a grudging look and frown He lays his stined "Quarter" down With the remark that times are hard And that is all he can afford. His heart is in his purse so much That one can scarce his feelings touch. Though fat his purse, his heart's too small To answer to affliction's call; He lives but for himself alone, With sense of others' suffering gone; His heart is calloused to the core With greed and grasp, for getting more. The poor may starve, the sick may die, Their door he heedless passes by; Little cares he for others' woe; If he and his can comfort know; His debts, outstanding here and there, Give him but little thought or care; The needy merchant's dunning bills His selfish soul with anger fills; The poor day laborer that he hires Must dun him when the month expires. His hoarded wealth, yet just for gain, Make him the creature of disdain. Thank heaven, folks like him are few, Or, what, for help, could people do.

GENTLE JABS

Dance music stirs the sole to action.—The way out of trouble is rougher than the way in.—Some mothers spare the rod and spoil the slipper.—It's a pity we can't see others as we see ourselves.—A stitch in time may save a dozen unprintable words.—A bachelor is just as good as a married man—or just as bad.—Even a healthy kangaroo is nearly always on its last legs.—Satan takes a day off when a woman marries the wrong man.—Many a man would rather run for office than run into an honest job.—Every time a man adds another dollar to his collection he lays up a little more trouble.—Beware of the man whose dog crawls under the house when its master enters the gate.—If a man's head is filled with wisdom he doesn't have to use his mouth as a safety valve.—If our neighbor would only do things as we think they should, how much easier it would be to love them.—Of course it would be to love them.—Of course it would be to love them.—Did you ever notice how silent people are when you say anything mean about yourself?

LUCK AND PLUCK

A man is to be pitied who is too fearful and cowardly to go out and do battle for an honest living and a competence in the great field of human exertion, says an exchange. He is the man of luck—bad luck. Poor fellow, he lost his luck when he lost his pluck. Good pluck is good luck, but never while he had good pluck left. Men lost their luck by letting their energies eke through bad habit and unwise projects. One man lost his luck in his late morning naps another in his late evening hours, another in the bar room, one down by the river holding the boyish fishing rod, another in the woods chasing down the innocent squirrel. One loses his luck in folly, one in fashion, one in idleness, and a great many in bad management. Indeed, bad management is at the bottom of nearly all bad luck. It is bad management to train up a family into bad habits—to eat out one's living and corrupt one's life.

More Books For Library

New Donors and Their Books.—Need of Current Magazines.—Library Show at Orient.

Last week Clifford E. Young and E. A. Morgan of the Civic League, went to Salt Lake City and bought a new list of books for the free public library. The list in part appears below.

Mrs. Preston, the librarian, reports that over eight hundred library cards have been given out to the adults and children of American Fork, and most of them are using them to secure books. Next week Mrs. Preston will submit a list of new contributors and their books contributed.

Miss Downey, the state library secretary, was in American Fork Monday and spoke to the teachers and parents on library matters.

Wednesday night was library night at the Orient. Mr. Purrington, in a very commendable manner, offered his house for a special feature to the library committee at a very reasonable rate. As a result the committee made about twenty-five dollars with which to get new books. The committee is exceedingly grateful to the grade teachers for their loyal support in selling tickets to the children for the matinee. They wish further to thank all the high school girls, who worked so diligently in selling tickets to parents and patrons, and lastly the committee thanks the parents for their liberal support of so worthy a cause.

Any suggestions as to books patrons desire to be placed in the library, may be addressed to Mr. Morgan, chairman of the library committee, or to the librarian, and they will be given consideration according to the means at the disposal of the committee.

- The new books: Old Rose and Silver. Tess of Storm Country. Revolutionary Stories. Our Holidays. Indian Stories. Brave Dog Stories. Colonial. Lion and Tiger. Lost Prince. Twenty-fourth of June. Wonderful Adventure of Nil. Garden of Allah. Wood Carver Lympus. Hans Brinker. Mrs. Wiggs. Pinocchio. The Yesterdays. Music Master. The Danger Mark. The Turmoil. Scarecrow of Oz. Rab and His Friends. Grey Friars Bobby. Mary Carey. Amateur Gentleman. Enchanted Peacock. African Game Trails. Tales from Shakespeare. Macaulay's Essays. All the Children of All the People. Pride and Prejudice. Les Miserables. Eben Holden. Barrier. Soldiers of Fortune. White Fang. Red Rock. Life of the Bee. Little Sir Galahad. Emmy Lou. Types of the Short Story. The Shuttle. The Clansman.

PROFITABLE REMINDER.

Now is the time to begin to gather up the tools and machinery around the place and put them under cover for the winter. Don't throw away good hard earned money by leaving valuable machinery exposed to the weather.

The plows, harrows, and drills are about the only implements that will be in use this fall, from now on and the mowers, rakes, shovel plows, cultivators, binders, headers, etc., should be looked after. The European farmer is far ahead of us in this respect. When he gets a machine it lasts him a lifetime.
