State School Superintendent Follows Lehi's Lead

Several months ago the Lehi school board decided that in order to make more efficacious the lessons of agriculture being taught in the public schools, it would supplement the work by hiring two instructors to supervise the work of the boys in the fields during the summer. Accordingly Professors Bennion and Banks were hired to devote one-half of their summer months to the work. The professors' services will also be at the command of the farmers generally, who desire to obtain their views and advice. Mr. Banks' efforts will be largely with the boys' clubs, while Mr. Bennion will be more in the fields.

State Superintendent Matheson, evidently getting his inspiration from the Lehi schools, has issued a general circular to all the school boards of the state. His article gives such a thorough support to the Lehi board's action that we print his article in full. It follows:

To the Public School Boards of Utah, in Agricultural Districts:

For a number of years agriculture has been taught both in the common schools and in the high schools of the state. Experience has demonstrated that agriculture is a subject which cannot be taught effectively by employing only the long established methods of the school room. The study of a text book, work in the laboratory, and recitation in the class room are all valuable aids in acquiring a knowledge of this subject, but these alone do not give a young man a full or fair opportunity to learn well this important science. In addition he must participate intelligently in the work on the farm.

There is considerable discussion these days about educational readjustment and vocational training, here is widespread conviction that the school would do well to make some of its work a little more concrete and practical. We feel sure that this result can be secured in agriculture and that school boards have it largely within their power to bring out this desired result. In the rural districts of our state by far the largest part of vocational education must necessarily mean education in the science of farm life. To be the direct means of improving this important part of school work would be a distinct credit to our school boards.

Should Be Practical.

The boy who studies agriculture should be given an opportunity, under skillful direction and supervision, to put the theories and information which he acquires in the school room into practice on the farm. The teacher or supervisor should be with the boy on the farm in summer, as well as with him in the school room in winter. The boy would thus pass through a thorough-going educational process in his study of agriculture. He would be doing productive work which would also stimulate his interest in school work and add to his determination to succeed therein. To bring about such an opportunity, I respectfully recommend to school boards, at least in high school districts where the finances will permit, that they engage the services of their teachers of agriculture for the calendar year, instead of for the school year, i. e., for twelve months instead of for nine months of the year. During the summer months the boards should have this teacher supervise the farm work of all school boys within the district, take charge of agriculture club work, and with the boys work out the projects and problems of the farm. Due care should be exercised in the selection of the teacher. He should, if possible, be a man whose knowledge of agricultural science has come from actual participation in farm life, and from a comprehensive course of instruction in one of our best agricultural colleges. He should, moreover, be in entire sympathy with all meritorious school work and see clearly the relationship of his work to all of the activities of the school. Such a man would cooperate readily and happily with parents and would give valuable guidance and demonstrations to the boys. Furthermore, his instructions could not fail to be, at least incidentally, beneficial to the fathers of the boys.

Will Help Entire State.

The schools, I am sure, can be very effective agencies in bringing about improved agriculture throughout our state. The countries whose schools have taught most effectively and most generally the subject of agriculture, have given ample proof of the truthfulness of this assertion. Denmark, for example, is only about one-eighth the size of Texas; it has nearly three millions of people; over 60 per cent of its population is rural. Largely through intensive cultivation of the soil and the establishment and successful operation of co-operative enterprises, this vast population is sustained in comfort on this small tract of land. Similar cultivation of the soil in Utah would not only result in increased production, but it would also provide homes of comfort and plenty for many of our young people who too often think it necessary to remove from their home state to find profitable employment and suitable homes elsewhere.

I sincerely trust that the school boards of the state, especially the high school boards, may give careful consideration to the question of employing their teachers of agriculture throughout the entire year.

Very truly yours,
A. C. MATHESON,
State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

FORECLOSING OPPORTUNITY

Furious diatribes and vigorous invective against the "demon drink," proceeding from apparent fanatics upon the subject, are not nearly so convincing as the following plain, matter-of-fact, presentation from the Saturday Evening Post:

"As usual when old acquaintances meet after a long interval, the talk soon turned to companions of other days; and on that score we compared notes. That one was flourishing notably. This other now held a tip-top position—married; three children; a success. That one was doing very well. So in running over more than a score of names and a score of years it seemed that fortune had been very kind to the particular bunch of cubs we were discussing.

"Two, it is true, had died of natural causes. One had committed suicide. Another—well, he was just keeping along, with his head slightly above water, but mostly submerged. And of the suicide and the failure there was but one explanation—drink.

"It is not good to lie about drink, and like everything else in the world, drinking is comparative. Some men's constitutions will withstand an appalling quantity of alcohol. Some men can drink pretty hard and pretty steadily, and yet succeed. Many men can drink moderately without ruining themselves.

"It is true, however, that drink is a great handicap. Whoever drinks habitually undertakes to win a stiff race with a hundred-pound weight strapped to his back. Possibly he can do it; but that is a poor condition for racing. To drink is to erect a barrier to opportunity—to set up hurdles for yourself to jump.

"Liquor greases the way for all other vices. The experienced employer hardens his heart against the young man whose breath smells of whiskey—not because he is sentimental, or even moral; but because he does not want handicapped men on his force."

Results Tell

There Can Be No Doubt About the Results in Utah County.

Results tell the tale. All doubt is removed. The testimony of an American Fork citizen.

Can be easily investigated. What better proof can be had? Mrs. Stephen Shelley, Third North and Third West Sts., American Fork, Utah, says: "One of my family had rheumatic pains and lumbago for years. He always felt the trouble worse before a storm or in damp, changeable weather. A neighbor advised him to try Doan's Kidney Pills. He didn't take them as regularly as he should, but they proved very satisfactory. The pains in his back were relieved. Whenever he feels out of sorts, he takes a dose or two of Doan's Kidney Pills and they fix him up all right. I am just as willing to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills today as I have been in the past."

Glass of Salts If Your Kidneys Hurt

Eat Less Meat If You Feel Backache or Have Bladder Trouble.

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headaches, dizziness, your stomach sour, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will act fine and the bladder troubles disappear. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

OPEN THE WINDOWS.

He who sleeps with his windows closed makes his bed in a coffin.

There is no reason to be surprised when tuberculosis comes along and fastens down the lid.

If all mankind could live out of doors all the time, and not too closely together, tuberculosis would die out in one or two generations. Since this ideal condition can not be achieved, not even for the sake of baffling humanity's worst enemy, the next best thing is to bring as much out of doors as possible into our houses, and especially into our sleeping rooms.

There is nothing which so quickly lowers vitality to the point where the tubercle bacillus can get in its work as breathing stale, close, lifeless, impure air during the hours of sleep. There is nothing which builds up the resisting powers of the body more quickly than an abundant supply of fresh air, particularly at night.

If sleeping out of doors will cure consumption, as it has done many a time, surely it will go far toward keeping a healthy person from getting consumption. It is not always possible for city dwellers to take their beds out of doors, but at least they can open windows and let out of doors come in.

He who sleeps with his windows closed makes his bed a coffin. He is taking a lazy, cowardly and highly unclean way of committing suicide. Remember these points.
