Devey Beet Topper Success

Three Machines Now Operating in Fields.—Work Equal to Hand Work and Several Times as Fast.

John Devey of Lehi and associates have now realized success with their beet topping machine, upon which they have been working for the past ten years. Three of their latest type toppers are in operation, one at Pleasant Grove, one at Spanish Fork and one at Garland. All fall, even during the recent storms, they have been proving their success on beet fields of these districts. The beets topped by the machine compares very favorable with those that are hand topped comparison shows.

The topper has been changed considerably from the original one with which Mr. Devey made his first demonstration in Lehi in the fall of 1912. The trouble experienced then was in cutting just enough of the top off. On the late machine this is regulated by a catpillar roller which precedes the revolving disc knife, raising or lowering the knife according to the height of the beet. The distance between this roller and knife is regulated by a lever, enabling the operator to cut just as little or just as big a slice from the beets as is necessary or desired. In the hanging of the roller and knife it is so arranged that they work out of proportion, that is, when a high beet forces the catpillar up the knife does not rise as high and consequently cuts a deeper slice from the beet. This feature is a big part of the success of the machine as high beets generally have a deeper crown than the lower beets and need more cut from them. The lowering of the roller works opposite to the raising, thus trimming less from the small beets.

Power from the two drive and supporting wheels propels the roller and slicing or topping disc. Two horses handle the machine which is operated from a riding seat by one man.

The cheapening of the harvesting of beets by the use of the machine is demonstrated on the William Green farm just north of the Pleasant Grove cutting station. These farmers are putting beets onto the wagon at a cost of about $1 per ton.

Their system of digging the beets is to top any number of rows, one at a time, with the topper. One man and one team does this together with harrowing the beets, five rows at a time, to relieve them of the dirt that adheres to them. Another team and man removes the tops from five rows at a time, with a side delivery hay rack. This same man and team plows the topped beets. Then six boys pick up these beets, which have been harrowed by the first man and team, and throw them into a wagon. These two men and teams and the six boys, with the help of the machines, top, pull and load onto the wagons from 25 to 35 tons of beets per day at a cost of $31.00 per day. This allows $8 per day for man and team and $2.50 per day for the boys. This is said to be considerable less than it costs to harvest the beets by hand.

Attraction Extraordinary

Beautiful

Edna Goodrich

Herself in Person and Company in

"Sleeping Partners"

A Comedy adapted from the French of Sacha Guitry by Seymour Hicks.

The original production direct from 7 months run at the Bijou Theatre, New York.

A Garden of Eden episode in three acts.

Miss Goodrich will be seen as the charming and wilful French wife and never in her career has she had such an opportunity to display the supreme taste in gowns as in this play. No other actress on our stage can nearly approach the wealthy Parisienne in jewels, gowns and furs. The scenery and costumes are fresh and new and the cast is most notable.

FIRST APPEARANCE IN LEHI

OF A BIG STAGE STAR

WITH A NATIONAL REPUTATION

IN A BIG ROAD SHOW

Miss Goodrich and company are playing Salt Lake Theatre all this week.

The management wishes to impress on the theatre-goers here that this is the only company on tour in this play and that it comes here direct from a season of success in New York and Chicago.
