

ARRIVALS AND DEPARTURES OF MAILS at the Salt Lake City Postoffice.

Silver Quotations.

SPRING STYLES.

Youman's Celebrated Hats! Now in at Noble, Wood & Co's.

Leaders and introducers of Fashions in Men's and Boys' Hats.

Corner west from the Opera House, Second South Street.

LOCAL JOBS.

The Mexican Typical Orchestra at the Theatre to-night.

The Grand Jury met and adjourned this morning without doing any business.

Wells, Fargo & Co. to-day received shipments of blue button valued at $1,750.

Alfred West was brought up from the penitentiary this morning and set at liberty.

One hundred and ten passengers passed through Salt Lake from San Francisco this morning.

The Careless Opera Company's season begins on Friday evening with the "Pirates of Penzance."

George D. Donnell, of this city, was admitted to citizenship this morning in Judge Zane's court.

Next Friday is the day on which the legislators are supposed to see their shadows and take to their heels.

Only the minute clerks and ushers out of the numerous representatives of the Legislature are provided for from Territorial funds.

A family in the Seventh ward lost a child from diphtheria this morning, and several more of the children are down with the disease.

The Knights of St. Denis will give a grand ball next Thursday evening, at Olympic Hall, which will be the last of their series.

The Shating Pavilion was crowded Saturday night, and a roller revival seems to have taken place. Several attractions are advertised this week.

The chaplain of the House this morning in his prayer, introduced the following: "Oh, Lord, help and strengthen us to do our duty, pay or no pay."

The case of George W. Ogilby vs. Daniel Danz was submitted in court to-day through the failure of the plaintiff to be present or represented.

Geo. S. Bailey and John Crocker were arrested yesterday and are both detained in the city jail awaiting trial for drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

McCormick & Co. to-day received Hanover bullion, $9,450; Pascoe bullion, $1,950; Stormont bullion, $2,450; silver and lead ore, $9,600; total value, $25,000.

The case of diphtheria in the Fisher family, in the Twelfth ward, terminated fatally yesterday morning. The child had a severe attack and was carried off quickly.

The Southern Utah Times says: Bradshaw and Lincoln districts keep up their liek, so that although heavier than usual, the country is quiet, and is producing pretty well and preparing for a year of prosperity.

The funeral services over the remains of the late Janet Sharp took place in the Twentieth ward meeting house, yesterday. The deceased lady was the widow of John Sharp, formerly of this city, and brother of Bishop John Sharp.

That unfortunate team of Charlotte Smith's has again been dragged into court. The lady again failed to attend court to-day to recover $250 from Marshall Ireland and S. C. Paneko, under whose direction the team was sold at auction some weeks ago.

Judgment for $83 and interest was given Mrs. J. W. Mackintosh this morning in court, in her suit against C. P. Young, executor of R. T. Young's estate. Mrs. Mackintosh brought suit on the promissory note when she was known here as Mrs. Lizzie V. Brown.

One of the most popular stations on the "Underground" is the Herald editorial station. A. M. Mendenhall is the editor in charge there, helping the editor to grind out abusive articles on the penitentiary. Mendenhall may be required to eat some more of that "stinking meat" ere long.

Harry Wood was buying himself in the Marshal's office today telephoning around to get his bonds renewed. He had not succeeded at a late hour this afternoon. The renewal of the bonds was made necessary on account of the withdrawal of Mr. J. Q. Leavitt as one of the sureties.

The Herald published in its issue of yesterday a card from George Romney and four or five other Mormon inmates of the penitentiary, endorsing John Nicholson in reference to the good management of the penitentiary, and protesting against the Herald's unwarranted abuse of that institution.

The Rev. Mr. Lamb, whose lectures on the "Unauthenticity of the Book of Mormon" last spring created so much interest, is preparing the material for another series to apply to the ancient antiquities of this continent. Mr. Lamb thinks he has something that will effectively crush the evidence taken from these antiquities to substantiate the verities of the book.

The Odd Fellows will give the third of their series of balls in the Odd Fellows Hall next Wednesday evening, for another session. The lodge-room is now receiving an elegant renovation by J. P. Keats, and the walls and ceiling will present an entirely changed and most pleasing effect by the night of the ball. No more pleasant evenings are spent than on the occasions of these popular parties.

The collection of exhibits forwarded to the New Orleans Exposition by the colored people of Utah and which it will remember, were brought back last July and held on a return freight bill, has just been released through the efforts of Mr. F. H. Grieco, who superintended the collection at New Orleans. The release has been secured without any cost to the individual exhibitors, who, of course, are glad to get their exhibits back, as each exhibit represents much work, trouble and considerable ingenuity. The thanks of the colored people are the Messrs. Nash and Cape for their interest in the matter.

Having ascertained that the desperate John Smith is not a very responsible affiant, the Herald now proceeds to dig up an old petition and protest, indited by A. M. Mendenhall and sent to the Marshal and Warden by the worst of the lowest convicts. The Herald, while acknowledging that no Mormon signed the protest, which made reference to stinking meat, etc., still insists that it is better evidence than the affidavits of Messrs. H. B. Hanson, J. C. Watson, George Romney, John Nicholson and others. It is not very complimentary to these gentlemen to have their testimony go down before the courts in the name of the highway robber Smith and others of his kind.

IN SECRET SESSION.

A Little Caucus of Prominent Mormons Held on Saturday.

A secret meeting of several hundred prominent men of the Mormon Church was held in the Assembly Hall Saturday morning, and a large force of special police and several of the regular forces were posted at the gates and corners of the Temple block.

Chas. Smith, the blonde tenor of the Tabernacle choir, and late book-keeper of the Herald, was stationed at the north-east corner of the Temple block, and the first glimpse he got of the deputy he got down the sidewalk and in the gate at breakfast speed.

Mr. Jones was prominent among our young men, and it was vain the crowd was scammed for Treseder, but he was not to be seen anywhere.

Of course the purpose of the meeting is not very generally known, but it is presumed by many that a series of resolutions and instructions were prepared for the guidance of the ladies in their mass meeting the following afternoon.

AN INTERESTING WAR PAPER.

Station and the Part General McCook's Division Acted.

Among the many war papers that have appeared in the Century Magazine treating on the famous battle of Shiloh, there have been few indeed more interesting than the contribution of General Don Carlos Buell, which is given in the Century for March.

Of course it views the field from General Buell's standpoint, and is, therefore, as might be expected, slightly at variance with General Grant's recitation of the details, but, in the matter of important facts, offers no particular difference.

The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field.

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

The writer, in commenting on the reports of General Sherman and others, says: "The conclusion to be drawn from these several reports is that, at this stage of the battle, McCook's division reached across and practically connected the army of the Ohio with Wallace's division, which formed the extreme right of Grant's force, and that its steady valor and effective services, not without the co-operation of McClernand's, Hubert's and Sherman's commands, decided the issue of the conflict on that portion of the field."

ONE MORE UNFORTUNATE.

F. A. Cooper Decides to Live His Religion and Go Six Months in the Pen.

The first business of importance that came up before His Honor Judge Zane this morning was the sentencing of F. A. Cooper, of West Jordan. Mr. Cooper was requested to stand forth, and the Judge said: "You are aware, Mr. Cooper, I presume, that you have been found guilty of the crime of unlawful excommunication, and that to-day you are appointed for your sentence. Are you able to say that you will obey the law in the future?"

"I can't say exactly what I shall do in the future. I expect to take care of my family as I have done in the past." Judge—I suppose you know that you are liable to arrest again after you come out of the penitentiary. The court will fine you $300 and all costs and commit you to the penitentiary for the term of six months, during which you may reform while you are in the penitentiary.

Mr. Cooper manifested some anxiety to have his bondsman released, and the anxiety was fully shared by the bondsmen themselves. In the Marshal's office it was ascertained that they had become sureties on only one of the three indictments, and they were exonerated without further process.

Cooper maintained a jolly good humor, and wanted to know what he was to do about dinner, his brother interposing the timely information that the prisoner had become "a good liver and always takes his meals regular." Somebody present suggested that it was a good time right now to begin to train for the "barbarous grub" and "stinking meat" which he would get at the pen, to which Mr. Cooper promptly replied: "Oh, I don't believe a word of that talk. I don't believe all the lies I read."

He entertained the Marshal, District Attorney and others by telling in a very amusing way how impossible it was for him to turn his back on his family by promising to obey the law, thus leaving his children fatherless, and his wives, whom he had married twenty-two years ago, unprotected. He was taken out to the Pen early this afternoon.

The Mexican Orchestra.

The Los Angeles (Cal.) Times says of the Mexican Typical Orchestra: It is fair to say that the fame of this company which had long preceded them was not a whit overdrawn. They produce some most exquisite melody, and it is, withal, so novel that it fairly captivates the listener.

It may be said that the audience fairly went wild in listening to the performance, applauding in the very intervals of a piece and demanding a repetition of each. The playing of Professor Encarnacion Garcia on his ninety-nine stringed instrument, which much resembles an accordion, was especially melodious.

The clarinet solo by Senior Adrian Galarza was rapturously encored and a repetition insisted on. Senior Carlos Curti's xylophone also made a great hit. The Mexican dance, "El Jarabe Mexicano," was immensely and enthusiastically demanded a repetition and stayed to see it.

Lovers of genuine melody cannot afford to ignore the Mexican troupe, and their opening engagement at the Salt Lake Theatre this evening will doubtless prove an event of interest to the musical portion of our community.

Married at Sea.

The last copy of the San Francisco Post to hand, contains the following information, which will prove interesting to many Salt Lakeers to whom Miss Stonehouse was well known, and by many of whom she was greatly admired: Emmet E. Curtis, telegraph editor of the Chronicle, and Miss Stonehouse, daughter of the late T. R. H. Stonehouse, for years the New York Herald correspondent in this city, were married at sea yesterday.

The ceremony was performed by the captain of the steamer, and was witnessed by the youth of the bride. The wedding party went out on the tug "Edith." D reconciliation with the family took place to-day.

St. George Officers.

The St. George election returns filed in the Secretary's office show a total of 141 votes polled at the recent election, and certificates were to-day issued to the following officers: Mayor, R. C. Lund; Aldermen, Haratio Peck and Joseph B. Bentley; Councilors, John T. Woodbury, Isaac C. Macfarlane, A. W. Ivins, Richard Morris, Ephraim Wilson; Recorder, J. M. Gates; Treasurer, Joseph C. Bentley; Assessor and Collector, H. H. Morris; Marshal, Samuel Judd.

Mining on Snake River.

The Mexican Gold Mining Company and their big claim near Eagle Rock is an assumed fact. From one to two hundred men are now working on it. A large force of men are putting up a boarding house for the use of the employees of the company. Mr. Donald McLean, who is known as one of the best miners of this country, is the superintendent, and before another week will have the mine in such shape that Eagle Rock and vicinity will have more the appearance of a thriving city than a town. One or two cars of lumber arrive nearly every day and are being hauled to the works.

Twenty-five carpenters arrived in town Tuesday, and the boys having so reported to the buildings and machines of the McLean Gold Mining Company.—Idaho Register, 6th.

Increase in Overland Travel.

The Virginia (Nev.) Chronicle says: There is constant increase in overland travel over the C. P. R. since the big cut in fares. East-bound trains passing Reno are said to carry from 250 to 300 through passengers daily. Prior to the reduction the daily averages did not exceed one-tenth of that number. The east-bound overland express passing Reno this morning was in two sections. The first section contained six coaches and five Pullman cars and the second three sleeping cars and five coaches, well filled with through passengers.

Down at Silver Reef.

Vegetation has been green for two or three weeks. Prickly pears, alfalfa, timothy and manzanita are in blossom. The brimstone flies make their black and kicks up the dust with her bare feet, along the avenues and boulevards. The ever-industrious housewife is tacking the balls and garben saws with a butcher knife, while a fat squaw with fourteen beaded loaves are watching a washing do itself. In fact, everything in nature, including the dust, is intrinsically green.

The Elk Saloon.

Newly renovated and opened with the choicest brands of wines, liquors and cigars. Salt Lake City Brewery Beer on tap. Daily opposite the Theatre. Every thing first class. Give us a call.

White House.

For the best meals and rooms go to the White House. Everything first-class and low rates.

White House.

For the best meals and rooms go to the White House. Everything first-class and low rates.

White House.

For the best meals and rooms go to the White House. Everything first-class and low rates.

White House.

For the best meals and rooms go to the White House. Everything first-class and low rates.

White House.

For the best meals and rooms go to the White House. Everything first-class and low rates.

LEGISLATIVE PROCEEDINGS.

The Council.

MARCH 6, 2 p. m.—H. F. No. 71, prescribing location of mining claims to extend 200 feet each side of the lode; was passed.

The Committee on Claims, on the petition of Wm. Reeves, ex-collector of Davis county, asking for $39,011, uncollectible taxes, recommended that $421.72 be placed in the general appropriation bill, for his relief, providing he pay into the treasury within five months the balance, amounting to $517.29. Adopted.

The same committee reported on the petition of S. S. Walker and others, asking an appropriation to encourage fish culture, and recommended that $2,000 be placed in the general appropriation bill for that purpose, provided A. Milton Musser have the handling of the money and that the same be expended, and $1,000 be expended for the term of seven years. The conference committee on H. F. No. 59, court reporters, recommended that the Council recede from its amendments, thus leaving the fees of reporters for transcribing, fifteen cents for 100 words.

After half an hour's recess, the amended appropriation bill came up for further action.

Mr. Page moved to place in the bill $2,000 to pay Utah county for the use of the Court House, in 1884-5 by the First District Court. Referred.

The bill then passed as amended, with a prospect of more additions hereafter.

After another recess, a concurrent resolution from the House, regarding the disbursement of the school and District University reports, was concurred in.

7:30 p. m.—The House amendments to C. F. No. 24, city charter of Nephi, were concurred in and the bill referred for enrollment.

Agreeable to report of conference committee, the item of $478.29 in favor of Samuel Casier, expenses in bringing the Moss Brothers to trial, was restored in the general appropriation bill.

H. F. No. 77, lessening the term of imprisonment, for good conduct in the Pen, was read and passed.

The general appropriation bill on being brought in with amendments, the items named were accepted. Another item was added for $1,000 to be expended in draining the road at the point of the mountain west of the city. The bill then passed.

It was nearly 10 o'clock when an adjournment was had till 10 a. m. Monday.

The House.

MARCH 6, 10 a. m.—The general appropriation bill was taken up as unfinished business. The Council amendments were read and concurred in, except the item of $478.29, Sheriff Casier's claim for capturing the Moss Brothers.

Mr. Hatch moved to insert in the bill the item of $40,000 for jurors and witness fees in criminal cases, for which the territory has no special credit. This was the amendment was strongly opposed by King, Creer, Thurman and others, and was advocated favorably by McLaughlin, Hatch and Howell, but when put to vote was lost by a showing of 7 to 10.

The substitute for H. F. Nos. 40, 12 and 17, on the subject of the Pen, came up on its third reading under suspension of the rules and passed, McLaughlin, Howell and Young voting no.

The general appropriation bill was taken up and subjected to a few amendments, some of which it passed, McLaughlin's being the only opposing vote. This was H. F. No. 76, changing the boundary lines of Rich county, was passed with five opposing votes.

H. F. No. 77, to lessen the term of imprisonment of convicts for good behavior, was passed by a majority of two. This is the new bill that is intended to conform to the Governor's objections made to the old bill.

The substitute for C. F. No. 24, incorporating Nephi City, was passed without an opposing vote.

H. R. No. 22, relating to the distribution of the 1,500 educational reports, as amended by the Council, was passed.

By a unanimous vote, Mr. Creer was allowed to introduce a bill authorizing the incorporation of the railroad depot company with certain rights, powers, obligations and restrictions. Read first and second times by title, and ordered printed.

Pending the consideration of the Council amendments to the general appropriation bill at 4:50 a recess was taken until 7:30 o'clock.

Evening Session.

The House convened at 8 o'clock with barely a quorum present.

The Committee on Counties reported that they had examined the accounts of the various county courts in their disbursements of the appropriations from the territorial treasury for roads and bridges, and had found the said accounts accurate and correct. The committee recommended that the reports be published in the compiled journal of the House.

The appropriation bill was "monkey" with for about two hours. The items of $549.45 for Clerk Emerson's fees in the First District Court; $1,515.16, the Deseret News' bill for legislative printing; $19,000 for purchase of land for and contingent expenses of the Territorial Insane Asylum, and a few other amendments were inserted in the bill. It was then exchanged back forth in the Council and House for concurrence in amendments, and it was