Another Frightful Runover. On Wednesday evening an old gentleman named John Williams, was run over, and received injuries which, it is feared, will prove fatal. He had been visiting the home of his daughter in Mill Creek, who had died, and was returning home, and while in the road, saw a man driving furiously towards him. The old gentleman endeavored to avoid the team, but the driver, who was intoxicated, whipped up his animals, and it is said, seemed to endeavor to run over the old gentleman, which he succeeded in doing, striking him full in the wheel and several times dashed to the earth, the right side of his leg being broken in two places and his left leg fractured, while he is severely injured in other respects, and it is seriously thought he will never recover.

Soldiers Snow Bound. By last evening's train from the states, Major Bryant, commander of the Fourteenth Infantry Company, of Fort Douglas, was quartered at the White river agency, returned to Utah on a brief furlough. He states that during the whole of the long months that he has spent since the company was detailed to go on duty, they have lived in idleness, in camp, without having so much as seen an Indian. They are now, he says, snowed in for the winter; but as Uncle Sam has kindly kept up their supplies of ration, there is no doubt that they will fare as well as they would if quartered at Fort Douglas.

Fashionable and Nobby. We have just received by express the LATEST STYLES of HATS. L. & A. GOLDBERG.

The Ogden Iron Works. We learn that it is the intention of the new board of directors to confine their efforts to the manufacture of railroad iron, for which our territory offers an almost unbounded market. The recent rise in the price of this article throughout the United States, and the exorbitant freight tariff to all points in the west, combine to make this industry of great and promising importance to the people of the western interior. We believe the era has arrived in our history when this enterprise, which has so long remained dormant within close proximity to mountains of the finest iron ore in the world, will be revived and prosecuted to a successful and gratifying completion.—Junation.

What an Englishman Thinks of the American People. He says "they hurry, they eat quick, they gulp, they belch, they have stomach ache, headache, liver troubles and bowel complaint; they fret and they scold, they get cross at nothing and without cause; they look sallow and hollow-eyed; they look hungry and can't eat; they spit up food; they have wakened night. They die easily because they disregard the true principles of correct."

Probably a Fatal Accident. On Wednesday afternoon a boy, who was riding one of our blooded stallions, met with a serious accident. The animal has usually been considered very quiet and has shown that such was his disposition. However, he seemed to feel very frisky, or something annoyed him on Wednesday, and he backed and threw the boy, the shock rupturing him on both sides. He was carried home yesterday and it was found necessary to cut open both his groins in order to bind him, and one of his testicles had to be removed. He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital, where he now lies in a precarious condition, and we sincerely hope, as his life is despaired of. Even were he to recover, he would be a cripple for life in many respects.

Counterfeiter Arrested.

A couple of days ago a man named George Craighead went into Tribe's store, Ogden, and purchased an overcoat for $9, paying for it partly in half dollars, which he placed on the counter in piles of one dollar each. Mr. Tribe was busy at the time, and after seeing that the amount was correct, placed the money in the drawer without examination, and Craighead departed with his overcoat. A short time afterwards, one of the clerks in the store, while making change, discovered some counterfeit half dollars in the drawer, and called the attention of Mr. Tribe to the fact. The latter at once recollected the circumstances given above, and immediately gave information of the facts to Sheriff Brown. A diligent search in the city failed to discover the counterfeiter, but information was received which led to the belief that the person wanted had some north. The matter was then placed in the hands of Marshal Young, who discovered that the party wanted was in Brigham City, whither Mr. Young went, and at a late hour last night succeeded in capturing his man at that place, together with the dies used in the manufacture of the counterfeit, and a quantity of the counterfeit money. Craighead was brought to this city. He formerly kept a saloon in Brigham City, but his license expired and the counterfeiting was carried on in his old store. The dies, which are in the possession of Marshal Young, are of crude workmanship, and the counterfeiters themselves were easily detected. He succeeded in passing them by placing a genuine half dollar on top of a counterfeit, so that a person not examining both would not notice the spurious coin. He will have a hearing on Saturday.—Dispatch.

SALINA SHOOTING.

A Most Remarkable Case.

The young man, Rupert Taylor, who shot himself at Salina, a couple of weeks ago, the ball entering the forehead and passing into the brain, is still alive. The particulars of the affair were published in the HERALD in full, and at last accounts the young man was at Provo, in charge of Dr. Pike. Dr. Benedict went south to visit him on Wednesday, when he made a further examination of the wound, in the course of which he passed his fingers through the aperture in the centre of the forehead, where the ball entered, and followed its course through the brain, as far as the instrument would reach. When the forces had gone in that far the point was almost against the middle of the cranium, about six inches above, but the ball had not been reached, and has probably passed to the back of the head. The patient is doing well, and gives every prospect for a recovery. This is one of the most remarkable cases ever known, even more so than the Landis case mentioned heretofore, as the patient, it is said, suffers no unusual pain and is steadily mending; besides this, it contradicts the generally acknowledged theory that a ball passing into the brain brings about instant and always certain death. In addition to the ball, there are also embedded in the brain two or three pieces of the bone of the forehead. The result of this case will be watched with interest not only by the young man's friends, but by the medical world.

A Tramp Abroad.

The announcement that Mark Twain is about to present a companion volume to his most popular book "Innocents Abroad," will be heartily greeted by the reading public of America. The prospectus of the new book, styled "A Tramp Abroad," is out, and the work itself will be issued early in February. The material for this new contribution to the humorous sketch literature of the day was gathered by the author during his last sojourn in Europe. Those who have read "Innocents Abroad," and who have not known how much fun can be squeezed into a page, and how much humor he can find in ordinary things and very commonplace events. The "Tramp Abroad" is to be a "gossamer record of the author's tour through Germany and other parts of Europe during the past two years. The work will be written in the same genial and humorous style which characterized the many strange scenes he beheld, and the people he met and mingled with." This volume will be profusely illustrated in the peculiar, unique style which characterized his expressive and suggestive pictures in his other books.

The Bicycle Conundrum.

SALT LAKE CITY, Jan. 8, 1896.

I observed a communication in your paper, this morning, signed by "Ben Loudon," which I think needs a little comment from someone better posted than he appears to be on the bicycle business. Your correspondent claims to be a professional expert and perfect roadways, whereas they can be driven with advantage on any road where a horse can trot with a buggy. The subscriber has ridden a distance that would wear out three horses. A machine that enables a man to do this should not be despised, and it evidently is not, as hundreds are in use in this country, and the numbers are increasing rapidly. There are upwards of 150,000 in use in England alone, to say nothing of the numbers used in the rest of Europe, while in France 2,700,000 trips are made at the rate of ninety-two miles per day, over the ordinary roads, and the great majority of these will be watched with interest not only by the young man's friends, but by the medical world.

CHIPS.

King Thaw is still chief.

A hen never lays an egg. Diphtheria continues its ravages. W. Watson was fined $10 for being drunk yesterday. Members of the Legislature have already commenced to arrive. There will be a grand William! matinee on Saturday afternoon. One thing is noble about this tramp—he never strikes a job—when it is down. A new filing of an old saw—"Never look up your horse after the stable is stolen." It is only the female sex who can rip, darn and tear without being considered profane. The conference of the Y. M. M. The announcement that Mark Twain is about to present a companion volume to his most popular book "Innocents Abroad," will be heartily greeted by the reading public of America. The prospectus of the new book, styled "A Tramp Abroad," is out, and the work itself will be issued early in February. The material for this new contribution to the humorous sketch literature of the day was gathered by the author during his last sojourn in Europe. Those who have read "Innocents Abroad," and who have not known how much fun can be squeezed into a page, and how much humor he can find in ordinary things and very commonplace events. The "Tramp Abroad" is to be a "gossamer record of the author's tour through Germany and other parts of Europe during the past two years. The work will be written in the same genial and humorous style which characterized the many strange scenes he beheld, and the people he met and mingled with." This volume will be profusely illustrated in the peculiar, unique style which characterized his expressive and suggestive pictures in his other books.

Soldiers Snow Bound. By last evening's train from the states, Major Bryant, commander of the Fourteenth Infantry Company, of Fort Douglas, was quartered at the White river agency, returned to Utah on a brief furlough. He states that during the whole of the long months that he has spent since the company was detailed to go on duty, they have lived in idleness, in camp, without having so much as seen an Indian. They are now, he says, snowed in for the winter; but as Uncle Sam has kindly kept up their supplies of ration, there is no doubt that they will fare as well as they would if quartered at Fort Douglas.

The Ogden Iron Works. We learn that it is the intention of the new board of directors to confine their efforts to the manufacture of railroad iron, for which our territory offers an almost unbounded market. The recent rise in the price of this article throughout the United States, and the exorbitant freight tariff to all points in the west, combine to make this industry of great and promising importance to the people of the western interior. We believe the era has arrived in our history when this enterprise, which has so long remained dormant within close proximity to mountains of the finest iron ore in the world, will be revived and prosecuted to a successful and gratifying completion.—Junation.

What an Englishman Thinks of the American People. He says "they hurry, they eat quick, they gulp, they belch, they have stomach ache, headache, liver troubles and bowel complaint; they fret and they scold, they get cross at nothing and without cause; they look sallow and hollow-eyed; they look hungry and can't eat; they spit up food; they have wakened night. They die easily because they disregard the true principles of correct."</
