NEW YORK.

The Conkling Mess—His Reception at Albany.

A Dastardly Assault.

Chicago, 24.—(Journal's Washington: Blaine's visit to New York is not believed to be on personal business as announced, but is directly on the Conkling mess. It is believed he is consulting with anti-Conkling leaders and will have a hand in arranging the campaign. This cause weakening here among Conkling's friends.

New York, 24.—Mrs. Fanny Mordant of Troy, N.Y., residing in Brooklyn, was the victim of a dastardly assault last night, being nearly blinded with red pepper. The lady was in terrible agony all night, but it was this morning. Some person came to the rear door of her residence at 10 o'clock, and knocked loudly. Mordant hastened to the door to see who was there, and found a man who had been crawling near the fence, and suddenly threw a handful of pepper in her face, a large portion of which went into her eyes. The fellow then fled and the neighborhood. The description corresponded with the appearance of Sergeant James Campbell, twelfth precinct, who was off duty at the time. It appears that Sergeant Campbell had been on intimate terms with Mrs. Mordant three years ago, but she severed their friendship. He said he had spent the evening in a larger beer saloon and had not been near Mrs. Mordant's house. This story, as also several others he told, were proven false, and he was looked up.

Albany, 24.—A feature in the day's events in Albany was the arrival of Senator Conkling, who was accompanied by Vice President Arthur. They arrived in Albany at 2:40 p.m. It was announced that Senator Conkling would be made the recipient of a serenade, to which he would respond in one of his most powerful speeches. Whether this report had a tendency to excite a desire to see the leader and hear him or not, it is certain but little interest was taken in the legislature. Immediately after it was generally known that Conkling was on the way to this city, even the New York street cleaning bill was put through in very short time, followed by the Troy police bill, a political measure of equal interest, and the senate adjourned at an early hour.

When the train reached the depot quite a number were present. Congressman Crowley stepped on the platform, followed by Conkling and Platt. Conkling recognized several persons in the crowd, and shook hands with them, when cheers were called for and they were given, being repeated twice. The reception was cordial, though not as enthusiastic as Conkling has received on former visits; neither the cheering nor the applause. Men who were members of the legislature, and some of the party were present. Police Commissioner French, of New York, and ex-Assemblyman Hamilton, Jr., they proceeded to the Delavan House. Shortly afterwards Governor Cornell drove up to the hotel, proceeded to Conkling's room and had a brief interview. The guests departed the afternoon quiet private interviews with members of the legislature.

There having been some talk about the demoralization of the legislature siding with one or the other, Conkling was again denied to-day, and so emphatically that they sought to be set at naught. The demagogue had made a declaration of their own to vote for, and will vote for him only.

The canvass in both houses, reveals no change of sentiment. Men who last week declared they could not vote to return the resigning senators made the same declaration to-day, and those who resisted the caucus and returned, repeated their opinion. So also with regard to the caucus.

Albany, 26.—The following letter was sent to Senator McCarty this evening: Hon. D. McCarty, Chairman Republican Senate Caucus Committee.

Dear Sir,—I beg to call your attention to my letter of yesterday, inviting your committee to unite in a joint call for a caucus on Monday, Thursday evening, therefore, seems to be the latest time to which a caucus can be postponed.

Asking your early attention to the expediency of the caucus, and the room in the Delavan, and would be happy to meet you for consultation.

Very truly yours, G. H. SHARP.

D. McCarty replied to Speaker Sharpe that he would call a meeting of the caucus committee at the earliest possible moment.

Albany, 24.—Senator Conkling held a levee all the evening at the Delavan House. The room was constantly crowded. He shook hands with everybody presenting himself, and to each said a pleasant word.

During the evening the Grant club of this city and country entered the room in a body and presented the following: To the Republicans:

The Grant club which has the largest membership of any political organization in the State, and which has for its guiding principle has been fidelity to party organization and loyal support of regular nominations of the republican party, in the present political excitement, call your attention to several plain facts which seem to point out the path of duty and honor to every republican who believes in the great principles of the party and desires to see its organization and success perpetuated. No one can forget the room and darkness which settled like a nightmare upon the party when James G. Blaine, humbled and defeated in his own State, was powerless to give one gleam of hope, one ray of light. The great leaders who could rally the party to battle, had been insulted, maligned and ostracized, and the masses were dissatisfied and almost hopeless. Then it was that U. S. Grant and Roscoe Conkling, casting aside the indignities and insults which had been heaped upon them, guided only by loyalty to party organization and love for the grand old party which had been so long the champion of the nation, entered into the conflict and came to the rescue of the country. Hope took the place of despondency, from one end of the nation to the other, and the ranks closed up; party hosts, with delight responded to the clarion calls of the leaders in whom they had confidence. In Indiana and Ohio the tide of battle was turned. Who among you can forget the services of Grant and Conkling in the memorable contest in those States; nor can you forget the timely and invaluable service of that shrewd, able and tireless political leader of our own State, Senator Thos. C. Platt, in the capture of Indiana, Indiana, and James A. Garfield was saved the possible mutilation of defeat in his own State Ohio.

Republicans of New York held the post of honor and danger in New York last fall was lost. Tasson began the most brilliant and successful canvass ever waged in the annals of the State. Who were your leaders then? Who marshaled the hosts and directed the columns which marched on to victory? Grant, Conkling, Arthur, Cornell, and Platt rendered the service then which should ever make the republicans party their debtors. The Indiana and Ohio victories were secured and were deservedly and freely showed upon these great leaders who had rendered victory a possibility in the State of New York, and with victory in New York came victory to the Union; and the hearts of the republicans all over the land were made glad.

The new republican Administration was inaugurated. The great Empire State was represented in the Senate by two of the most able and faithful leaders in the ranks of the republican party. The Administration owed much to the republicans of New York. The President to see, at least, respectful consideration and treatment to the most honored and honorable representatives. That consideration and treatment has not been accorded to them. With a most unworthy motive, James G. Blaine has sought to mislead the President and strike a blow at the representatives of the republicans of New York. He sought an internal war in the ranks of the republican party, and by attempting to break down the influence and power of those whose brilliant and triumphant career he is jealous and envious, charged as he is with his own most miserable failure and defeat.

Governed by honorable self-respect and guided by a plain sense of duty, your senators have refused to do so, and now remain for the representatives of the people to decide whether the gallant leader under whose leadership the republicans of New York and of the Union have marched to victory, shall be stricken down, or be sustained.

It is in obedience to a demand of the council and corrupt solicitations of thousands who delight to follow where Roscoe Conkling leads, be and his late associates appeal to the republicans for vindication and approval. Shall they have it? In the present crisis we appeal to all those who appreciate honest public service; who believe in fidelity to friends; who hold the interests of the republican party higher in esteem than the losses and honors to be gained among our public servants; who would rebuke political trickery and ingratitude, to rally around men who have won our victories, upheld our principles, and saved the life of the republican party. Let no man be ashamed of the name of stalwart. Stalwart leaders who have so often sustained you and let the Maine dictator understand all New York ails, is respectful treatment and proper consideration of its representatives.

Conkling received the paper saying he would not be able to read it at present. The chairman of the club informed him he could read it at a future date, and that no response was expected. He thanked the chairman, and then the club bade him, when he shook the hand of each member.

There is a diversity of opinion among those who have watched the effect of this. Some contend it has strengthened the chances of the ex-senator, while others contend it has weakened them.

There are reports that the Administration has gained assemblymen, and the stalwarts have gained a senator, but when the names are given, and that has been in rare cases, the parties were not to be found. Thus, verification is almost impossible.

There were about 500 people in the streets adjacent to the hotel, expecting a speech and a speech from Conkling, but he had declined the honor of a serenade before he came, and would not change his determination.

MINING NOTES.

From the Park City Record: The Rebellion hands have all been discharged.

The Ontario Mill will start up again on Monday. The Pinyon is working eighteen men, and is sacking ore for shipment.

Things will be in readiness to resume sinking at the Lowell about the first of the month. The 175-foot station at the Hawkshaw is being enlarged to make room for a reserve pump.

A vein of fine looking galena was discovered in the Bible-back tunnel last week, and the owners are re-organizing a tunnel to develop the Worthington. Manchester and Black Crook in Picoletto Gulch. They have a well-defined vein, and a splendid showing.

The tunnel in the Golden Age, in Red Pine Canyon, is being pushed in rapidly. It is now nearing what is thought to be the main ledge. The rock is similar to that of the Glenora, and some of it is even better.

This tunnel will develop the Golden Age, Fourth of July and the Silver Age.

The work of resetting the machinery at the Lowell will be complete on Tuesday or Wednesday of next week, and the water will be taken out inside of forty-eight hours after the machinery is started. The work of cutting the station at the 200 level will be resumed as soon as the water is out, and sinking will probably be resumed at the same time.

The first of the week, the Pinyon had restraining order served on the Climax, and later the Climax re-entitled by having an injunction served on the Pinyon. The last order, however, was modified so as to allow the Pinyon to continue to take out ore to the surface. On Friday night the Climax company got out another restraining order on the Rebellion Company, and consequently no ore is being shipped from the hill at present. All the mines are working their usual forces of men, and the ore taken out is lying on the dumps awaiting a settlement.

The following new advertisement now appearing in some of the mining journals, will be of interest to our citizens, some of whom it will be seen are directors and officers of the company: "The North Horn Silver Mining Company, organized under the laws of New Jersey. Mines situate at Frisco, Utah. Capital, $1,000,000; shares, 40,000; par value, $25 each. Stock full paid and non-assessable. Offices: Camden, N. J., and Frisco, Utah. Exchange building, Third and Walnut streets, Philadelphia. Directors: E. W. D. Cope, J. Whitaker Wright, Charles E. Wright, Thomas J. Hurley, William Smedley, Phillip L. Orth and Thomas Couch. Officers: President, E. W. D. Cope; vice-president, J. Whitaker Wright; treasurer, W. Smedley; secretary, George L. Smedley; general manager, Thos. Couch, at Frisco."

On Thursday last the working shaft of the Horn Silver Mine reached a depth of 406 feet and the work of cutting out the fourth station was begun. Crosscutting to the vein from this point will commence immediately and will be prosecuted with the greatest possible speed. The immensity of the ore body on the third level continues to be the wonder of the camp, and from the time the fourth level begins, our citizens will await with breathless interest the result which will settle beyond a doubt, the future of our camp. Major H. C. Hill, under whose able management the property is improving so rapidly, is still sojourning at Little Cottonwood, and the probabilities are that the furnaces will be blown in early next week. Two hundred tons of ore will then be required every twenty-four hours. The bullion shipment for the week has aggregated eleven car loads.

Superintendent Wetmore informs us that the whim and gallovs timber have been raised and placed in position at the South Horn Silver Mine, and that sinking the shaft 200 feet further to make a total depth of 325 feet, will be begun early next week, the shaft will be straightened and timbered from the top down.

Prof. J. S. Newberry, of the Columbia College School of Mines, New York City, is about to make another trip to southern Utah, and while there will study the formation of the Cerro Gordo property, near the Horn Silver Mine, at Frisco, with a view to making a report for New York investors.

Hon. A. H. Cragin, who has become interested in the Cerro Gordo Co., at Frisco, Utah Territory, was for many years in the United States Senate, and connected with important committees, one being on mineral lands.

E. E. Wood, of Chicago, has placed 100,000 shares (control) of the Cerro Gordo and Minnesota Co. Mining Company's stock in New York, making one of the most important transfers of the season.

The merchant Schwartz paid a recent visit to his claim in Beaver Lake district and let a contract for sinking to a point from which to drift to cut the ledge, some splendid carbonate ore has been taken out and the outlook is very favorable.
