Another Garfield Memorial.

Chicago, 28.—In spite of the rainy night, an audience which completely filled the Central Music hall, assembled shortly before 8 o'clock this evening, to participate in the memorial services of the late President of the United States, James A. Garfield. The audience was made up from all classes of society, and they all, by their respectful attention, showed the motives which brought them together. The hall was appropriately trimmed with flowers and draped with flags, and immediately back of the platform was a large portrait of him whose memory the company assembled to honor. Among the floral decorations was the wreath sent by Queen Victoria and the emblem from the empress of Brazil. The meeting was presided over by Gen. Joseph B. Leake, the United States district attorney, who sympathetically with the late President in all his acts particularly fitted him for this office. General Leake said: The assembly had come together to express the sorrow of the people for the loss of their President, as a man, a legislator and a friend. He lacked egotism. All the honors he reaped were thrust upon him. He achieved all his work completely to the end. In his profession as a teacher was thorough. He was once made president of the college. He was not to remain in quiet. Carried off to the war as a colonel of his regiment he was sent for to plan the campaign and take supreme command. So he was again called from the army, and by the will of the people sent to Congress. He came to Chicago to urge the claims of another great man, when again a new and unsought-for labor was thrust upon him, and he was elevated to the presidency of this great nation. When the terrible calamity came to him the news struck into the hearts of the people with overwhelming sorrow, a sorrow which developed above all a marvelous outpouring of prayer throughout the nation, to consecrate which feeling the present meeting had been called.

There followed sacred music, including Garfield's favorite hymn: "Ho, Reapers of Life's Harvest."

Mr. Emory A. Storrs was then introduced and spoke in substance as follows: Mr. Storrs began by saying he was not here merely to give utterance to his love and regard which he himself entertained for Garfield while living, nor that admiration of his pure and lofty character which he had for him now that Garfield was no more. "The fame of our dead President," said the speaker, "is too great, his achievements too large and splendid, his character as a man, a citizen, too lofty to be appreciated by any one man or any set of men. The custodians of Garfield's fame are not found within one party nor one sect, and they embrace all parties and all sects." Mr. Storrs then eloquently related Garfield's eventful and wonderful life, and to do how he advanced step by step by the sheer force of his intellect, reinforced by his spotless conscience, from a humble rank in life to the loftiest summit of honor and achievement. Speaking of him as a politician, Mr. Storrs said he used party not as an end, but as a means to an end. He was never owned or controlled by a machine, but was too practical a statesman not to know that in church and state an intelligently controlled machine is indispensable to success. "He perished," said the orator in conclusion, "with the conflicts of temporary excitements raging around him, involving more of persons than of principles. The whole world loved him because he loved the whole world."

The chairman read a letter from Mrs. Garfield, saying: "I pray receive my thanks for the kindness of your invitation, although my great heart-breaking sorrow forbids its acceptance."

Criminalities.

Belleplaine, Iowa, 1.—Ira Husted and B. Toby, two counterfeiters, who successfully plied their trade for fifteen years, were arrested yesterday.

Denver, Col., 1.—The Republican furnishes the following: Morris Noel, who came from Indianapolis two years ago, and has since been employed as a book-keeper for Giddings & Wood, embezzled about $8,000 from his employers. Twelve hundred dollars of the money was paid for a house and lot, and a large portion is still supposed to be in possession of Noel who, it is thought, is at present in Indianapolis. He is said to have wealthy relatives, and was given until yesterday to return the money, but the house and lot, which was transferred to the firm for $1,400, is all that have been paid.

At Longmont, last night, Willis Pullam was shot and dangerously wounded by a man named Berry; Cause, a quarrel at cards.

A Radical Change.

New York, 28.—A special election to fill the vacancy caused by Wagner's death occurred today, and unexpectedly resulted in the choice of Baucus, democrat, who beat Stanford by 1,000 majority. The district embraces four counties, three of which are usually republican, one always heavily so, and one usually democratic. Oddly enough all the republican counties, to-day, went democratic, and the democratic county went republican. There was also another element in the contest. Saratoga, the most populous and heaviest republican county, has been dissatisfied because the senator has so long been selected from other parts of the district. To-day, therefore, her usually splendid republican majority of 2,500 is changed to a democratic majority of 650, and Mr. Stanford is defeated.

Riddling Robbers.

Chicago, 28.—Polk Wells and Bill Norris the Iowa outlaws who passed through here last Sunday en route from Randolph, Wis., to Riverton, Iowa, in charge of Sheriff's Constable and Wilson, attempted to escape from the officers while on the train. The officers were asleep, but the movement of the prisoners waked them, and they at once opened fire. The men were taken from the train at Sidney, Iowa, for treatment, but there is little chance for their recovery, both men being literally riddled with bullets. These desperadoes took part in the Manhattan, Kansas, and Riverton and Sidney, Iowa, bank robberies, the Winston, Missouri, train robbery, and numerous smaller robberies, as well as several murders in Iowa, Missouri and Kansas.
