GUITEAU.

Continued from page 2. At 10:20 he took his bath and dressed himself for the execution. Dr. Hicks, after his visit, said that when he left Guitau the latter was calm, being thoroughly sustained by his idea of inspiration. When he first entered the cell the assassin wept copiously and explained the tears and emotion by saying that he was filled with joy at the prospect of the nearness of his relief from his persecutors. Yesterday afternoon, prior to Mrs. Scoville's visit to the jail, she sent him a bouquet, which without the knowledge of the warden or his deputy, was carried into the cell. Deputy Warden Russ passed through the corridor room afterwards, and noticing the bouquet, asked who had given it to him. "My sister," curtly replied the assassin. The warden was about to pass on when he concluded the bouquet was worthy of examination, and he took it from the cell. It was handed to Dr. McWilliams, the jail physician, who carefully examined the flowers, and declared they had been drugged, impregnated with some poison. He took the bouquet to a chemist, at 2 o'clock, this morning, for analysis, and in answering it has not been returned to jail. Before 10 o'clock the crowds had begun to assemble before the jail. Entertaining vendors of lemonade, peanuts and cakes sat up their booths under the shade of trees, and did a thriving business with the hot and thirsty crowd. The roads leading to the prison were thronged with stragglers of all ages, sexes and conditions. One old couple, whose legs had been amputated below the knees, hobbled along on a pair of wooden pegs. Colored men and women composed the greater part of the spectators, and as the space from the jail gradually filled the sight-seers placed themselves on the sandy hills fronting the jail and enduring the excessive heat, prepared to wait until the excitement of the hanging should be over. Guitau showed great nervousness and appeared greatly startled when he heard the rattle of muskets on the stone floor of the rotunda. From that moment Guitau appeared thoroughly overcome with emotion. He wept freely and seemed to be in great anguish. The scene in the rotunda, while waiting for the prisoner, was one long to be remembered. Soldiers were drawn on one side, and a long line of spectators on the other. It was understood that Guitau was very much depressed, and it was expected his passage to the gallows would present a very distressing sight. The movement of officers about the jail doors was watched with eager attention. After the death warrant was read by the warden, the prisoner became more composed, and turning away began to brush his hair. At 12:20 a loud steam whistle was blown at the work house which is near the jail. This whistle, usually blown at 12 o'clock, and by it Guitau was in the habit of gauging time. The whistle, to-day, was, by special arrangement delayed, so that its startling summons might not come before the officers were ready. Two minutes later the iron gates at the end of the corridor clicked, and then Warden Crocker made his appearance, and a moment later the familiar figure of Guitau was seen. His face was pallid and the muscles about the mouth moved nervously. Other than this there was no sign of faltering. The procession moved quickly to the scaffold, and Guitau ascended the somewhat steep steps with as much steadiness as could be expected from a man whose arms were tightly pinioned. At the last step he faltered for a moment, but was assisted by the officers, who walked up on either side. Upon reaching the platform, Guitau was placed immediately behind the drop, facing the front of the scaffold. Capt. Coleman stood upon his right, Robert Strong upon his left, and Woodward directly behind him. Jones took a position on the north side near the upright of the beam. Warden Crocker took his position at the southeast corner of the structure. There was a slight delay, while the spectators were pushing and jostling through the door leading from the rotunda to the corridor, at the lower end of which the gallows was placed. Guitau meanwhile gazed upon the crowd, looked up at the beam over his head, and quickly made a survey of all the dead paraphernalia. As soon as the crowd gained access General Crocker waved to them to uncover and all heads were bowed. Dr. Hicks then prayed in these words: "Father, out of the depth we cry to thee; hear our supplication for the sake of Jesus Christ, Savior, who made full provision for us. Behold this, thy servant, who humbly pray that thou wilt deliver him at this supreme moment of his life. Let Thy light descend upon him; liberate his soul from the person that he may appear before Thee absolved by Thy great mercy. From blood-guiltiness deliver him and us, Christ, have mercy on us! Lamb of God, that takest away the sins of the world, have mercy on us! Amen and Amen!" During the prayer Guitau stood with bowed head. At the conclusion, Dr. Hicks opened the Bible and Guitau, in firm tones, said: "I will read a selection from the 10th chapter of Matthew from the 23d to 41st verses inclusive." He then read in a clear strong voice and with good intonation, showing little, if any nervousness. Dr. Hicks then produced the manuscript which was prepared by the prisoner this morning, and held it before him, while Guitau read. While Dr. Hicks was arranging the manuscript Guitau exhibited slight nervousness, and moved several times from one foot to the other. He soon recovered his composure, looked over the sea of upturned faces and said: "I am now going to read to you my last dying prayer." He then read in a loud tone and with distinct and deliberate emphasis the prayer before given. At several points he had paused and endeavored to impart increased emphasis to his words by the peculiar facial expression so often observed during the trial, when he was angered at something which was said or done. This was peculiarly noticeable when he alluded to President Arthur, and when he declared that this nation would go down in blood. When he had finished reading his prayer, he again surveyed the crowd and said, still with firmness, "I am now going to read some verses which were intended to indicate my feelings; at the moment of leaving this world, if set to music, they may be rendered affective. The idea is that of a child babbling to his mamma and to his papa. I wrote them this morning about 10 o'clock. He then commenced to chant these verses in a sad/doleful style: I am going to the Lord; I am so glad; I am going to the Lord, I am so glad; I am going to the Lord, glory hallelujah! Glory hallelujah! I love the Lord; With all my soul, Glory hallelujah, and that is the reason I am going to the Lord. Glory hallelujah, glory hallelujah, I am going to the Lord. Here Guitau's voice broke, and he bowed his head and broke into sobs; but he rallied a little and went on with his chant: I saved my party and my land, Glory hallelujah! But they have murdered me for it, And that is the reason I am going to the Lord; Glory hallelujah, glory hallelujah! I am going to the Lord. Here again his feelings overcame him and he leaned his head on the shoulder of Dr. Hicks and sobbed pitifully. Still he went on: I wonder what I will do when I get to the Lord; I guess that I will weep no more when I get to the Lord; Glory hallelujah! Here there was another interruption caused by sobs and emotion, which he was unable to repress. He wept bitterly and then with quivering mouth and mournful tones he went on to finish his ditty. I wonder what I will see when I go to the Lord; I expect to meet splendid things beyond all earthly conception, When I am with the Lord, Glory hallelujah! Raising his voice to the highest pitch that he could command— Glory hallelujah! I am with the Lord. This closed the chant. Rev. Dr. Hicks gave Guitau his final benediction and farewell, saying: "God, the Father, be with thee and give thee peace for evermore." The attendants then pinioned his legs, and carefully adjusted the noose about his neck. Mr. Strong placed the black cap over his head, and as he did so, Guitau called out, in loud tones: "Glory! glory! glory!" Instantly the trap was sprung, the body turned partly around, but there was not the slightest perceptible motion of the limbs. When the drop fell a yell was sent up by the persons inside the jail. This was re-echoed outside by a thousand or more people who hurraed lustily. There was a general onslaught by the populace upon the jail door; the officers were unable to withstand it, and a hundred people crowded into the office. For several seconds after the drop fell the body hung motionless. Then there was a slight motion of the shoulders and legs, due to muscular contraction. Three minutes after the drop fell the body was lowered, to be examined by the physicians. There was decided action of the heart for fully fourteen minutes, and the pulse fluttered two minutes longer. When the body had hung with the feet just touching the ground over half an hour it was lowered into a coffin which was waiting for it under the scaffold. The physicians decided the neck had been broken. When the body was lowered, the black cap was removed and the face exposed. The features were pallid and composed, and about the mouth was considerable moisture. After the body had been arranged in the coffin, Warden Crocker ascended the steps of the scaffold and addressing the crowd, said those who desired could view the body. Then the crowd of spectators was formed into a line, and passing between the scaffold and wall of the jail, viewed the remains. Some jail officers, two or three physicians and Dr. Hicks stood about the coffin. John W. Guitau fanned his dead brother's face to keep away the flies. John W. Guitau did not go on the scaffold, but stood during the scene just within the line of the officers at the bottom of the steps. When liberty was given to the crowd to view the body the scaffold was at once filled with people who curiously examined every joint and bolt. At 1:40 p.m. the lid of the coffin was put in place and the body borne to the jail chapel, where the physicians who were to make the autopsies were assembled. After the body was taken to the chapel arrangements were made to let Mrs. Scoville view it. Guitau, just before the trap was sprung, dropped a paper from his hand. This paper was given him by Warden Crocker, to be dropped by the condemned man as a sign that he was ready. John W. Guitau said to the reporters, just after the execution that he was glad it was over. "What will be done with the remains?" asked the reporter. "We will bury them here in the jail, where he will be safe," said Mr. Guitau. "He will not be taken out of the jail." The spot indicated by the warden as Guitau's burial place is in the same court as the gallows, four yards from it. Guitau, when he came out of the rotunda, looked calm and collected, but very pale. His arms were pinioned behind, and he held his head erect. He gazed upon the crowd without flinching. He wore a black suit of clothes, and instead of a collar, a handkerchief was thrown loosely about his neck. Those who expected a "sickening" or distressing scene were disappointed.

Small-Pox. San Francisco, 30.—A quarantine officer, to-day, discovered twenty-two more cases of small-pox on the steamer Belgic, and seventeen doubtful cases. Chinese and white cabin passengers will be quarantined in separate hulks, and the Belgic, after disinfection will be docked.

IT IS TRULY WONDERFUL. To see what improvement now exists as compared with railway travel only a few years ago. To become convinced of this, one has only to select for his route East, the popular and well known CHICAGO & NORTHWESTERN R.R. You are landed by the Union Pacific Railroad in the Union Depot at Council Bluffs, where stands the C & N-W. Palace Train, composed of Pullman Hotel Cars, Pullman Sleeping Cars, Elegant Day Coaches, Smoking, Baggage, Postal Cars, etc., ready to convey its passengers through Iowa and Illinois, and into Chicago. Gliding smoothly along over the superb track of steel rail through thriving cities and villages, comfortably seated in this train, one scarcely discover the high rate of speed which he is riding. Trains of this road are always on time, connections sure, and passengers seeking pleasure, comfort, safety and easy in traveling, will find the "North-Western" in excess of their expectations, and the greatest of all routes to Chicago and the East. Insist upon Ticket Agents selling you Tickets via this Road; all agents sell them. Examine your Tickets and refuse to buy if they do not read over this Road. If you wish the Best Traveling Accommodations, you will buy your Tickets by this Route, AND WILL TAKE NO OTHER.
