UNGROUND FEAR. SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 14, 1884. Editors Herald: A great many people are fearful that with the change of administration there will come a change for the worse to the poor of the land. Free trade, it is claimed, will hurt many industries and ruin a great number, and more particularly the mining interests of the country. Whether they have any foundation for their bugaboo ideas, or whether they say so because they only think so I can't say; but if you can tell them (and then at the same time) anything which will dispel these visions of bad times, please let us be told, and oblige, ONE OF THE PEOPLE.

Mr. Blaine went through the country crying to the people that Democratic victory meant free trade, and free trade meant the shutting down of the mills, the closing of the mines, the prostration of manufacturing industries; that the closing of the mills and so on meant suffering and starvation for the laboring people. The voters showed how much faith they placed in Mr. Blaine's promises and predictions, by giving an overwhelming majority against him, and electing a pronounced and well known Democrat as President. Governor Cleveland was elected upon a platform (approved and endorsed by him) which declared:

The Democracy pledges itself to purify the administration from corruption, to restore economy, to revive respect for law, and to reduce taxation to the lowest limit consistent with due regard to the preservation of the nation to its creditors and pensioners. Knowing full well, however, that legislation affecting the occupations of the people should be cautious and conservative in method, not in advance of public opinion, but responsive to its demands, the Democratic party is pledged to revise the tariff in a spirit of fairness to all interests. But in making reduction in taxes it is not proposed to injure any domestic industry, but rather to promote their healthy growth. From the foundation of this government taxes collected at the custom house have been the chief source of federal revenue. Such they must continue to be. Moreover, many industries have come to rely upon legislation for successful continuance, so that any change of law must be at every step regardful of the labor and capital thus involved. The process of reform must be subject in the execution to this plain dictate of justice.

All taxation shall be limited to the requirements of economical government. The necessary reduction in taxation can and must be effected without depriving American labor of the ability to compete successfully with foreign labor, and without imposing lower rates of duty than will be ample to cover any increased cost of production which may exist in consequence of the higher rate of wages prevailing in this country. Sufficient revenue to pay all the expenses of the federal government, economically administered, including pensions, interest and principal of the public debt, can be got under our present system of taxation, from custom-house taxes on fewer imported articles, bearing heaviest on articles of luxury, and bearing lightest on articles of necessity. We therefore denounce the abuses of existing tariff, and, subject to the preceding limitations, we demand that federal taxation shall be exclusively for public purposes, and shall not exceed the needs of the government economically administered.

Here the Democracy said what it meant and meant what it said. There is no reading between the lines. The tariff system will be reformed, but the tariff will not be abolished; it will be revised "in a spirit of fairness to all interests." It is not proposed to injure domestic industries, but rather to promote their healthy growth. Whatever change is made in the tariff laws will be in harmony with this fact and purpose. The tariff legislation of the Republican party has not been in the interest of the workingman, but for the benefit of the employer; its operation has been such as to build up and protect oppressive monopolies, who having the government between them and competition grind their workmen down to the last penny, and extort from the consumers, rich and poor, the high salaried man and the toiler for day wages, the highest price possible for their protected products. The protection thrown about American industries simply protects the proprietor, and enables him to charge the laborer two dollars for what costs but one; it operates to make the rich richer and to keep the poor poor. This Democracy has promised to reform this, and in line with that promise will not oppress industries, but it will enable the workingman to share the profits that are now gobbled by the protected monopolies.

ON ITS TRAVELS. The following paragraph is going the rounds of the newspapers as if it were something so important that all the people should be told of it. It had its origin in the News, of Portland, Oregon, a newspaper which comes about as near to being authority upon Democracy and the Mormons, as our morning contemporary; or in other words, no authority at all: "Utah is almost solid for Cleveland. If elected, he will undoubtedly keep the pledge of the Democratic party to the Mormons to admit it as a State, and shoulder polygamy upon the nation." Whoever heard of any pledge of the Democratic party to the Mormons to admit Utah as a State? When was the pledge given, and to whom and by whom? What was the agreement by which polygamy was to be "shouldered" upon the nation? How was the shouldering to be performed? What does Governor Cleveland know about the bargain? We might go on and ask questions of this character from now till doomsday, and neither the Portland News, nor any other paper could answer one of them, for the simple reason that there is absolutely nothing in the story that any bargain has been entered into between the Democratic party and Mormons. We doubt that any Mormon has had any communication with any member of the Democratic National Committee, or with Mr. Cleveland, since the Chicago Convention, and are positive that if there has been any such communication, it has in no way related to politics, to policies, or to Utah in connection with the matter of admission to the Union.

If Republican editors didn't have something to lie about, they would be at a loss to fill their columns; if they couldn't attack the Democrats and the Mormons, how dreary their papers would be.

UNGENEROUS AND UNJUST. "We'll nominate no Jim Blaine next time" is the threat from which the Republicans are trying to derive comfort and hope. Somebody must be blamed for every failure that occurs, and in this instance it is only natural that fault should be found with Mr. Blaine. As a matter of fact he is only one of those upon whom the responsibility for the defeat rests. If we were to apportion the responsibility, it would fall upon Republicans generally, in proportion as each has had a hand in shaping the policy of the party and in directing its operations? It is true that on the 4th instant the people repudiated James G. Blaine, but they none the less declared against Republicanism—against Republican methods and practices. Blaine figured only as a unit, and the war was made upon a horde; the struggle was against principles more than men. As regards Blaine personally, he was unquestionably the strongest man in the party. His nomination demonstrated this, and his campaign confirmed it. There is no denying the fact that he is a "magnetic" man, however much the term may be played upon. He wins men, carrying them against their own judgment. There is no other man in the Republican party who could have made the campaign that Blaine did; there is no other man who could have electrified the people as he electrified them, or who could have rallied them around a banner of which they had for years been growing sick and tired. It was undignified and vulgar for the Presidential candidate to make a personal canvass, and appeal directly to the people for their support, but without that personal canvass Mr. Blaine would have been snowed under. He may be criticised and condemned for going about the country as a circus in spangles and tinsel, but that hippodroming attracted the voters as nothing else would have done. Democrats know and intelligent Republicans admit that if Blaine had not gone into Ohio and called the people around him the Buckeye State would have given a Democratic majority in October. His visit to West Virginia came near depriving the Democrats of that State, and if he had kept out of New York the plurality against him there would have been ten times what it is. It is nonsense, besides being cruelly unkind to talk about the Republicans having to carry the "load" of Blaine. For Blaine carried the Republican party and carried it farther and better than any other man in the party could have done. It is true that he was weighted down by a bad record, but his "drawing" and managing powers were so much better than those of pretty nearly any other man in the party, that he was able to move under the burden and still help the cause along. The defeat was of Republicanism, more than of Blaine, for Blaine "ran ahead of his ficket" in the language of elections. If Republicans were just, not generous, they would admit the truth of this, and give their standard-bearer credit for making the funeral of his party at least respectable in the matter of attendance.

DEMOCRATIC JOLLIFICATIONS that come now are cold and spiritless. The Democrats who wouldn't jubilate ten days ago when joy and jollification filled the very atmosphere are Doubting Thomases, and Doubting Thomases are too timid and tender to be good Democrats. There is a time for everything, and the time for jollification was when people felt like it.

THAT SWEET-CAKE of Idaho, Governor Bunn, was pretty anxious during the election, and continued to grow more and more so as he read the Associated Press telegrams. Finally, on the 9th he could endure the awful suspense no longer, and from the wilds of his colony sent the following dispatch to that independent, reliable paper the Philadelphia Times.

BOISE CITY, Idaho, Nov. 9th. The Times, Philadelphia: Please give me your candid opinion of situation, not that I am anxious, but I fear for the Territory. WM. M. BUNN.

To which the following reply was wired: TIMES OFFICE, Philadelphia, Nov. 9. His Excellency, Governor Bunn, Boise City, Idaho: Cleveland has New York by over 1,200; Indiana by 6,000; Jersey by 4,100; Connecticut by 1,200 and the South. Blaine and Johnny Davenport are kicking like steers, but it's no use. Sorry for the Territory. THE TIMES.

There was a good deal of information in the answer, but there wasn't much comfort for one who must pack his grip-sack next March, and lie him to pastures new.

ONE REASON why the people of Utah rejoice over the election of Cleveland, is that the Federal judges will be in the procession that will depart from the Territory next March. It is snarlingly said by some that we may have a worse lot, but that is impossible—no worse are made.

THE VILLAIN

Still pursued her! With hatchet poised (in air) over the frail limb whereon the maiden trembled, he screamed and "A HA! A HA! I have thee now—ow-ow! But he was off his base, for at that moment (simultaneously) a man who had just finished decorating the yawning abyss with the legend, "Valley Tan Cough Remedies knocks a Cough cold quicker than any preparation in the market; Sold by Z. C. M. I. Drug Dept.; Price, 50 cents; Try a Bottle;" (for which he got four dollars), was seen upon the scene. With a smile (and) he flung the remaining point into the eyes of the base villain, drew from his pocket a step-ladder, and caught on to that maiden in less time than you could say that Valley Tan Liniment cures Rheumatism and all aches and pains.
