EVIDENCE.

The correctness of the old idea that a law which is not enforced is worse than no law is being illustrated in Massachusetts, and in other New England towns. The Grand Army Post of Stoughton, Mass., held a fair last fall, and in connection with it announced a lottery; this latter was opposed by the clergy of the place, who, falling in their appeals to the Grand Army in the premises, asked the authorities to interfere and prevent the violation of the law. The community at once took sides in the controversy, and the majority of the "better element" stood in with the Grand Army, and the roughs and hoodlums threatened to burn the church if the ministers did not desist. The result was that the law was not enforced, and the drawing took place, the prizes being paid as promised. The capital prize of $1,000 fell to a club of school boys in Manchester, N. H., who had invested their dimes and quarters in a block of tickets. The news of the good luck spread, and it is now said that hundreds of boys in New England are terribly afflicted by the lottery craze; they are fairly mad over the business, spending all the money they can get for "chances," and in some instances have been guilty of stealing in order to obtain a few dollars with which to purchase tickets. The evil that the Grand Army lottery will cause can hardly be estimated, but it is not too much to say that many boys will be ruined by it. The enforcement of the statute against lotteries—which is one of the wisest laws in the land—in this instance should have been as strict as in the case of the Louisiana frauds or Kentucky swindles. The act does not run against a crooked lottery any more than an honestly conducted one; nor should it know the difference between a church lottery and the game of chance by which the sharp fellows of the south dupe the gullible. It is the petty violation of the law which is overlooked, the winking at the infraction of a statute by some favored or influential ones that brings law into disrepute with the masses. It would be better to repeal the laws against lotteries than permit the Grand Army, the charity associations and the churches to disregard them.

ANOTHER GRANT BILL.

Senator Edmunds, on Tuesday, introduced a bill authorizing the President to place on the retired list of the army one general who had commanded or been the general-in-chief of the army. The sole purpose of the bill is to provide a handsome salary for General Grant. In all probability it will pass the Senate, but it is not believed it can get through the House. If Grant or any of his friends can present a solitary good reason why he should be thus handsomely provided for at the public expense, all will unite in a petition to Congress to pass the bill and give him the money. It is not a sufficient reason to show that Grant is ignorant of the laws of business and finance, nor that he got caught in the net of his swindling partner. If the government were to step in to protect everybody who lost money through recklessness on their own part or swindling on the part of others, the talk of reducing the tariff and internal revenue taxes would soon be heard no longer throughout the land. The republic has been in no sense ungrateful to the General, and all these attempts to beat the public treasury out of money for his benefit are evidences of misdirected generosity.

SOME WEEKS ago it was noted in THE HERALD that a bill had been introduced in Congress for the reimbursement of Moses M. Bane, receiver of public moneys at Salt Lake City, for rent paid by him, and a correspondent wanted to know the true inwardness of the claim. THE HERALD has received a copy of the bill, which was introduced by Mr. Morrison, of Illinois, read twice and referred to the committee on claims, where it has since lain. The bill directs the Secretary of the Treasury to pay Mr. Bane, "for office rent in Salt Lake City for the years 1877 and 1878, and for the first quarter of 1879, the sum of $1,088, and the said sum for office rent having been advanced by the officer out of his private means." Our correspondent will now know as much of the matter as we do.

TAMMANY GONE.

The other day the great Tammany boss, John Kelly, sold his paper, the New York Star, which act must be accepted as a confession on his part that he regards his political power as broken and that he considers his day as a ruler of the metropolis and indirectly of the Empire State over. The New York Evening Post makes the sale of the Star the occasion for taking farewell of Kelly. It says: "The moment the County Democracy yielded to the citizen's committee's demands and accepted Mr. Grace's candidacy for mayor the doom of Kelly and also of Blaine was sealed. So complete was the overthrow of Kelly that even his stolid temperament was affected by it, and the man whose face, figure and conduct have for so long a time constituted the very personification of obstinacy in this city was confined to his house for several weeks by an attack of nervous depression."

Tammany is yet powerful, but it has passed the zenith, and is now on the steep down-grade, the kick that it received in the Chicago Convention being more than it could withstand. If the late election had done no more than break the back of that organization which has so long stood in the way of Democratic success, the victory would have been great, and worth all the effort that it cost. It was Tilden who began the earnest fight against Tammany, and the battle has continued until Cleveland had the honor of completing the good work instituted by the grand old statesman whose name will ever shine as one of the most brilliant in the Democratic firmament.

It is generally conceded that while Kelly, late in the campaign promised to be faithful to Cleveland, he was playing falsely, as he had done so often in the past. The vote in the city proved that he was unfaithful to the pledges that he had made; that he gave Tammany votes to Blaine, and in return received Republican votes for his candidates for mayor and aldermen. The treachery did not succeed, defeat and ruin overtook him, and what is better his defeat is final, for never again will John Kelly and Tammany be permitted to regain the power which they once exercised.

A RAILROAD PROJECT.

The newspapers of the 6th instant contained a dispatch from Washington, announcing the introduction into the House of a bill to incorporate the Utah, Santa Fe and Gulf Railroad Company. A copy of the bill has come to hand; it is a formidable document of 20 pages of 25 lines each, suggesting that perhaps it is to be largely a paper railroad. This suggestion would be entirely consistent were it not for the circumstance that the names of some good men and some rief of money appear among the incorporators. The incorporators are Edward E. Holman and W. W. Jackson, Washington; L. Bradford Prince, Giles Otis Pearce, and Walter V. Hayt, Santa Fe, New Mexico; Calvin D. Van Name, J. F. Chesebrough and Charles Nickerson, New York City, and Edward E. Culp, Salina, Kansas. But when we come to trace the project, and consider what the objects and purposes of the company contemplate, all idea of a paper road must vanish. When it is stated that the road is to begin at the Gulf of Mexico and end at Portland, Oregon, with some thousands of miles of branches and feeders, the reader will understand how feasible and probable the scheme is. The line is to commence at the "north end of Mustang Island," in the Gulf of Mexico, and run thence to Santa Fe, thence to Salt Lake City, thence "by the most direct and feasible route through Nevada or Idaho, to be selected by the said company to the ship's channel of the Columbia river, at or near the city of Portland, State of Oregon." The branches are to run from the Muscalero Indian reservation, N. M., to Socorro, San Antonio, or San Marcial on the Rio Grande, thence to Escudilla Mountain Peak on the Arizona line, thence to Phoenix, Arizona, thence to San Diego; another branch is to run from Aubrey Landing, Arizona, to Pioche, Nevada, then to Frisco, this Territory, and so on north to a junction with the main line near this city. Work must be begun within three years, but nothing is said about the time of completion. This latter being a wise omission on the part of the framers of the bill.

When we hear the toot of the locomotive whistle we will believe the Utah, Santa Fe and Gulf railroad means something more than the idle pencil trace of some imaginative genius across a western and southwestern map.

In New York, last week, Judge Poland, of the Utah "bill" fame, said about this Territory, that the time of the national House of Representatives would be so fully occupied for the remainder of the session that Utah affairs would receive no consideration. "At all events the Senate bill which passed at the last session will be totally ignored, as it is a measure not against polygamy but against the Mormon Church. Polygamy should be punished by whomsoever committed, but legislating for or against churches, is not in the province of Congress." As Poland is among the most pronounced anti-Utah men in Congress his declarations above may be accepted as authoritative that the Territory will not be molested this winter by the law-making branch of the government. A year's rest is worth a good deal to a territory that has known no peace for twenty years or more.

And poor Schuyler Colfax has gone the way of all flesh, dropping dead in a Minnesota railway station yesterday afternoon. His death twelve or fifteen years ago would have created a profound sensation throughout the nation; now, it can only recall records and revive memories that were better buried with him.

JAMES JACKSON, Chief Justice of Ga.

AN AGED BAPTIST MINISTER.

Two More Important Cases. Your agent being in Columbus, Ga., a few days ago, and meeting the venerable brother, J. H. Campbell, we asked him for the news. His reply was, "I have two more important cures effected by Swift's Specific to report." This venerable man is known far and wide for his unremitting labors of love in behalf of the poor of Columbus. It will be remembered that the Swift Specific Co. has donated quite an amount of their famous medicine, to be distributed by Mr. Campbell among the poor of the city; hence his remark. He said:

"I have just seen a lady who has been greatly annoyed by a Tetter in one of her hands. It had given her much trouble and pain. She said she had been treated by several physicians during the past three or four years with the old remedies, but without giving any relief. I suggested Swift's Specific, and she took four bottles and is now apparently perfectly well. Her hand is smooth and not a single sign of the disease left. It is marvelous how this medicine counteracts the system."

"What about the other case?" "Well, that was a lady also. She had been affected with the eczema for four years. Her face, hands and arms, as well as her body, was covered over with sores and scabs. It was one of the worst cases of this terrible disease that I have ever seen. The suffering of the poor creature was beyond expression. She tried every remedy in command, including mercury and iodide of potash, but she only grew worse. She was in this condition when I first saw the case. I soon had her taking Swift's Specific, and she has now only taken two bottles, but every mark of the disease has almost entirely disappeared. Her strength and general health have greatly improved. It is one of the most remarkable cures that has come under my observation."

"Mr. Campbell, you have had a long and varied experience in mingling with men, and observing their afflictions and the remedies used—what is your opinion as to the merits of Swift's Specific?" "In a ministry of sixty years I have mingled with every class of society, and have observed closely the varieties of diseases which afflict humanity. Blood diseases are the most numerous and the most difficult to remove. It is my deliberate judgment that Swift's Specific is the grandest blood purifier ever discovered. There is nothing comparable to it. There is nothing too good to say about Swift's Specific."
