EVENTS AND COMMENTS.

WIRES AND BARS are now produced direct from fluid steel by pressing it out through dies in a manner similar to the production of lead pipes.

IOWA FARMERS have discovered a new enemy which has been doing considerable damage to oats. It is a yellowish worm one-half to three-quarters of an inch long, which enters the stalk and eats rapidly toward the top, which it soon severs. Whole fields have been ruined in a day. The loss in two counties is estimated at $20,000.

A MAN who had tried farming in Montana for two years gathered together his goods and chattels, consisting mainly of a wife, nine low-headed children, and six lean dogs, and got himself hence. He left the following lines on the door of his dugout:

550 Feet to Water. 30 Miles to Fuel. 6 Inches to H-I. God Bless Our Home.

THE WATERBURY Times gives the case of a little girl who was dying with scarlet fever. She sent a "dying kiss" to a little friend, which was imprinted on a letter and a circle drawn around the kissed spot. The "little friend" kissed the spot when the letter was received, and shortly afterward became a victim to the disease. It was the only case in the place, and her physician believes the affection was communicated through the mails.

THE CONSUMPTION of pig iron is considerably larger than it was one year ago; and the demand for steel rails is brisk. All the mills are getting orders, and the price is advancing. The Pennsylvania merchant bar mill are full of orders, the sheet iron trade is prosperous, and a multitude of small orders are pouring in upon the manufacturers of iron for construction purposes. Those who think iron is the great barometer of trade should take courage from these facts.

THE WHEAT crop is now put at 375,000,000 bushels, making it the smallest one in eight years. The next smallest crop in that time was in 1881, when the out-turn was 350,000,000 bushels. The crop of 1880 was a large one, and there was plenty of wheat for exportation in 1881. The present situation is very similar. The small crop of this year is supplemented by the large surplus of last year, and we will have, as a nation, plenty of wheat to sell to the outside world.

THE ARCADE policy of King Christian, of Denmark, is likely to plunge him into hotter water than he has ever in before. He is not popular with the Danes, anyway, and has not been since his alleged treachery in giving up the "Dannevirksillingen" in the Schleswig-Holstein war. At that time there was an uprising which nearly cost him his head, crown and all. "Kong Christian den niende" has not one-tenth the love of the Danish people that his predecessor, "Frederick den syvende" had. The action of the present king is likely to result in some sort of a revolution against the reigning house in old Denmark.

In the recent Dublin convention, Mr. Parnell put in nomination Sir Henry Grattan-Bonham, Bart. of Ballynastra, County Wexford. Mr. Davitt opposed the nomination on the ground that Sir Thomas was a landlord and that it was impossible for a landlord to be a patriot. Whereupon, Sir Thomas appeared and made a strong speech in which he apologized for being a landlord, and fiercely denounced the landlord class as being the curse of Ireland. This completely changed Mr. Davitt's feelings, and he expressed his entire willingness to support Sir Thomas, who then went through with a hoop-la. Sir Thomas is but twenty-three years of age and is a great-grandson of Hon. Henry Grattan, whose services in behalf of Irish freedom a hundred years ago are fresh in the memory of Irishmen.

A word in regard to the practice of placing packages and papers on the top of mail boxes will not be amiss, and probably prove of service to the general public not posted in the matter. Letter-carriers are positively instructed not to take such papers or packages when it interferes with the delivery of first-class mail, and as they are nearly loaded with as much mail as they can carry, packages thus left often remain there until the following day. Their taking or leaving them is discretionary. Letters, papers, or packages are not mailed under the protection of the United States postal laws unless they are placed within the mail box or in the postoffice. People often leave valuable packages in this manner, laboring under the impression that the government is responsible for them. Such, however, is not

TIPS AND NOTES FOR ALL.

Glanders—Bog Disease—Good Sheep—Apple-Training—Lung Colds—Roup.

Tomatoes are very nice with cream and sugar. Wrap fruit jars with paper to keep out the light.

Gun-campfire kept near silverware will keep it from discoloring.

For burns, apply flour wet with cold water, as it quickly gives relief.

Try hard cider in wineglassful three times a day, for ague and rheumatism.

See any kind of insect or bug in the ear, wet your finger in the camphor and rub the inside of the ear just as though you was washing it.

An exchange speaking of giving red pepper in food to fowls says: We do not advise its use except in very small quantities, and seldom. Ground ginger is just as cheap and much better.

It is dangerous to French horses or other animals with glass or stone bottles, as pieces are liable to be chipped off and swallowed. Saw the small end off a good sized horn and pour the medicine through this.

For cold on the lungs, take a quart of soft water and put in it one teaspoonful of ammonia: have the water as hot as you can bear your hands in it; then wring out flannel cloths and apply to the chest. This will give speedy relief.

The Scientific American says this mixture faithfully applied is a sure and certain death to bed bugs. Mix together two ounces of camphor, four ounces of spirits of turpentine, one ounce of corrosive sublimate and one pint of alcohol.

Mr. Savage, a Kansas fruit grower, says that a pruning will produce large apples stung with codling moth, while a large crop of apples has less damage from codling, but might result from moderate pruning.—Tribune and Farmer.

Everyone should take advantage of the remaining fine weather, before winter storms set in, to finish up all outdoor work; repair stables, barns, sheds and corrals so that cows and all other live stock may be protected from inclement weather.

Prepare one dozen sweet apples the same as to bake; place in a kettle and sprinkle one large spoonful of sugar over them; pour on enough water to cover, and cover close and boil until a fork will go through them easily; take them out carefully with a fork, drain well and place on a plate; leave your kettle over the fire and boil your juice down to a thick syrup and pour over the apples. Best food.

Quite a passable cattle stable may be built with rough boards, by hearding up inside also and filling in between with straw. To save lumber, quite large spaces may be left between the inside boards. If boards are used for the roof considerable care is necessary in battening the joints to prevent leakage. In all cases where the earth forms the floor straw should be liberally used for litter. The warmth of such a shed will be greatly increased by banking up the outside with earth, leaving a shallow ditch to carry off the drippings from the roof.—E.

It should be borne in mind, in breeding horses, that good and bad qualities are alike hereditary. It is just as important then to have a well-bred mare as to have a well-bred horse in order to raise a good colt. This fact is not regarded as much importance as should be with the farmer. Too many think that if the horse is all right there can be but little question in regard to the results, and then when a failure occurs, the blame is all laid at the door of the sire. Owners of good stallions should guard carefully the reputation of their horses by prohibiting inferior mares from being bred to them.—E.

This clipping is explanatory of a disease that is devastating the swine in several Eastern States, where they are dying by the hundreds.

The disease is thought to have originated by the hogs eating the carcasses of glandered horses, and it is very contagious and spreading rapidly. The disease shows itself by the hogs refusing to eat, the eyes and ears swell up and break out with red blotches, the ear is hollow, a high fever prevails, and the afflicted animal suffers much pain. Death takes place in a few days. The liver, lungs and lungs are much affected and soon mortify. Fat hogs and young pigs suffer most; short and broad hogs hold out best against the disease. It is unlike anything else ever known in this locality, and no remedy is known.

Owners of sheep will do well to read and consider the following from an exchange: Suppose you start in with a flock of ewes which were the lambs of pure Merino mothers, and a pure South-down or Shropshire-down father. These pure half-blooded ewes should get their full development before breeding, and drop their lambs when two years of age. The ewes used must be pure South-down or Shropshire-down, as before. The ewe lambs of these ewes, being one-quarter Merinos, are the desired and most profitable breeding stock.

At the age of two years, between the middle of January and the middle of February, they should drop their first lambs. When properly handled and fed, these lambs will be fat and plump in May, weighing perhaps sixty pounds each. This year such lambs sold for $3.50 per head, while lambs of pure South-down, etc., have to be kept until June before being fit for sale. This year's prices have been much lower than in former years.

The old ewes shear from five to seven pounds of wool which is graded as a good "medium," and sold this year for twenty-two to twenty-three cents. A good plan perhaps is to dispose of the ewes after they have raised their lambs, as it would not be advisable to raise more than five lambs from one ewe, before selling her for mutton.

such "questionable chaps" as to completely deceive many who are inexperienced. They will, perhaps, treat for every ailment except the correct one. It is usually caused by a discharge of the nostrils, which is easily discernible. It is, as a rule, accompanied with hoarse breathing, the comb changes color, and the fowl droops. The beak will be open if breathing is very difficult, and a foul odor will prevail in the coop, or will be given off by the bird. In light attacks, a sneeze, or an occasional "pip" may be heard, but the great danger is from cases accompanied by the foul odor and hoarse breathing. The first thing to do is to remove the phlegm, which should be done gently with a soft mop, dipping the mop in a solution of Larrabarque's chlorinated soda, to be had at any drug store. Repeat this once a day until the bird is well. Feed either in a slight cold or in the shape of a pill, a mixture of equal parts of asafoetida, ground ginger, gentian, and boric acid; allow a teaspoonful of the mixture to every ten fowls. It may be given night and morning. A dry, warm place is essential, as roup is caused by cold and dampness. A spoonful of kerosene oil in the soft food for ten hens, will assist in preventing the disease, while the drinking water should be changed often to prevent contagion.—E.

The presence of several cases of glanders now existing in this city, makes interesting the following from an exchange: Glanders is a term that really includes the term farcy. These so-called diseases are really one and the same thing, the one readily giving rise to contagion to the other.

The disease, as every one knows, is a most loathsome one among horses and is sure death, and liable to be communicated to man, also to most of the lower animals. In the horse it occurs in an acute, also in a chronic form. In the chronic form, which is quite as much to be dreaded as the acute form, or perhaps more so, as the symptoms are not so readily recognized—it may exist for a long time without being suspected by either a man or a horse, and be mistaken for almost any other nasal discharge. Any continuous discharge from either one or both nostrils, be it ever so slight, is to be looked on with suspicion, or even an occasional slight discharge of blood from a nostril. The lymphatic glands on the inside of the jaw bone are usually enlarged or if the discharge is from only one nostril, the glands on the corresponding side will be affected. An acute glanders, and he in apparently good health and condition for a long time with these symptoms, and yet be unmistakably glandered, and equally liable to communicate the disease to man or other animals as if he had a more acute form. The distinctive and marked symptoms of glanders, are the nasal discharge will, in the latter stages increase in quantity, be thicker, bloody, and have an exceedingly offensive smell. The lymphatic glands on the inside of the jaw bone will usually be, from the first, enlarged and hard. One great danger from this disease is that it is readily communicable to man. During the summer of 1883, there were a great many deaths in Illinois from this cause; and it is sure death. There is no known remedy for that disease either in the human or the lower animals. No treatment whatever should be attempted, but that the animal should be killed, the carcass burned or buried, and every possible means taken to prevent the spread of the disease, by the destruction or thorough cleansing of stables, stalls, harness, etc.; in fact of everything that can by any chance be capable of retaining or conveying the contagious virus.

An Efficient Remedy

In all cases of Bronchial and Pulmonary Affections is AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. As such it is recognized and prescribed by the medical profession, and in many thousands of families, for the past forty years, it has been regarded as the invaluable household remedy. It is a preparation that only requires to be taken in very small quantities, and a few doses of it administered in the early stages of a cold or cough will effect a speedy cure, and may, very possibly, save life. There is no doubt whatever that

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Has preserved the lives of great numbers of persons, by arresting the development of Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, and Pulmonary Consumption, and by the cure of those dangerous maladies. It should be kept ready for use in every case, when the first symptoms of a cold or cough are observed, as it is a medicine far superior to all others in the treatment of Croup, the alleviation of Whooping Cough, and the cure of Colds and Influenza, ailments peculiarly incidental to childhood and youth. Prominent in its action, it relieves all the distressing symptoms of these diseases, and the use of a single day may, in many cases, avert the fatal consequences. Do not wait previous time in experimenting with medicines of doubtful efficacy, while the malady is in its early stages, but take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, as it is the most certain cure.
