

THE DAILY HERALD.

Salt Lake City, Utah.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 5, 1886.

LOCAL BRIEFS.

WELLS, FARGO & Co.'s shipments yesterday were: base bullion, $31,001.

THE UNIVERSITY Shakespeare Club spent the day in a picnic at Lake Park yesterday.

THERE is a message at the Western Union telegraph office for Janet Anderson and Mrs. J. Jackson.

McCONNICK & Co. received yesterday, Hanauer bullion, $4,970; Queen of Hills o. e., $2,680. Total, $7,650.

THE FOURTH of July committee has made Mrs. Governor Murray a present of $75 mirror.—Haley Inter-Idaho.

IF MARK C. PRATT, of the Twelfth Ward, will call at Young Bros., he will hear of something to his advantage.

THE TWO witches which were stolen at Lake Park a short time ago, were returned yesterday and the reward, $50, paid.

T. R. JONES & Co. received yesterday two cars Germania bullion, $5,069.84; lead and silver ores, $1,797.95. Total, $6,867.79.

PROF. MOONEY opened his dancing academy on Friday last. Arrangements can be made with him by applying at the Hall between the hours of 12.30 and 4.30 p. m.

THE SALT LAKE Building and Manufacturing Company are doing the wood work on the new elegant residences of Mr. Joseph R. Willis, First Street, and Mr. J. C. Conklin, South Temple Street.

HELD'S OPERA concert attracted a large crowd at the Deseret Bank corner last evening. The selections show continued improvement and the Pirates potpourri, was particularly well rendered.

THE KNIGHTS of St. Denis give a party at Lake Park on Wednesday evening, and members of the Opera Company it is stated will join them. The last evening train to leave for the Park will be a special at 7 p. m.

THE HERALD acknowledges the compliments of the Bingham County Agricultural Association, for Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, September 28, 29 and 30th. The fair will be held at Eagle Rock, Idaho.

NO MAIL from Ogden last evening, hence our Ogden Department fails to appear this morning. The mails are evidently being tampered with by some one, and if the present state of affairs continues, it will be necessary to find out who that person is.

DR. HESSEL'S select school, 56 N. Second West Street, will open tomorrow, September 6th, at 9 a. m., with classes in English branches, languages and music, for both ladies and gentlemen. Dr. Hessel has a practical experience of fifteen years and comes to this community well recommended.

KENNETH BURTRICK, late United States Deputy Surveyor, who came to Utah with General Solomon, was examined by the Probate Judge yesterday with a view to commitment to the asylum. He gave the first indications of un-soundness of mind about March 1st and was then treated for catarrh in the head. He has gradually become worse, until it was thought necessary to bring him before the court as related.

MISS SADIE ASPER, for the last two years and a half an employee of this office, has resigned and will attend the University during the coming year. Miss Asper can justly lay claim to the distinction of being the quickest and most expert lady compositor ever known in this section of the country, and she has won the hearty esteem and good will of the entire HERALD force, who part from her with regret.

IT is understood that the committee appointed to examine applicants for the vacant place of reporter in the Third District Court, will meet at the Court chambers on the 6th inst., but one of the committee (Judge Sutherland) will be engaged in trying a reference case on Monday. The committee will not meet till 7 p. m., when they will fix upon the order of examination, which will continue from day to day, until all applicants can have a chance to present their qualifications.

FRIDAY EVENING witnessed a pleasant gathering in the Twentieth Ward Schoolhouse, where the members of the ward had assembled to express their feelings of appreciation of the labors of the retiring Bishopric of that section—Bishop Strip, and Counsellors Dunbar and Puzey. Speeches were made by the recent officials, and also by the present incumbents of the offices, as well as Messrs. C. R. Savage, William Salmon, S. P. Teasdel, William Eddington and a number of others. There were also a number of songs, instrumental music and recitations, and refreshments were served during intermission.

THERE are said to be somewhere in the neighborhood of a score of applications for the position of court reporter, so long filled by the late Adam Patterson. An attaché of the court yesterday informed a HERALD reporter that he understood there was one application from California, one or two from Idaho, and a small army from the city and suburbs. To cap all, it is now stated that Judge Powers has written a letter recommending a gentleman from Michigan, and requesting that no appointment be made until the distinguished recipient of his favor arrives. Next!

FRANK SANCKLEY, a young fellow about 21 or 25 years of age had been brought from Denver to Ogden by a couple of cattle men, who had engaged him to work for them. During the night Sanckley arose, took a couple of pistols, a pair of blankets, $15 in money and some other clothes, and walked to Kayville. There he took the train to Beck's Hot Springs, and then came to town in a wagon. A description of the fellow was telephoned to the police, and in the evening Officer A. M. Smith, who had previously located the fellow, arrested him at the Overland House. Sheriff Belpap having arrived on last evening's train.

MRS. CLEVELAND'S IDEAS.

The Decollette Craze—The Upper Ten—Exhibitions That Would Shame the Heathen—Notes.

SALT LAKE CITY, Sept. 4, 1886. From Our Own Correspondent.

While the National Legislature is in session, Washington, D. C., is undoubtedly one of the most cosmopolitan of cities. This is certainly true so far as the gathering together of politicians, would-be politicians, office-seekers, dead-beats, cranks, swindlers, thieves, dudes, colonels, majors, captains and judges is concerned. Such a concentration of the various phases of human nature, from the most intellectual to the most imbecile, it would be difficult to beat in any city in the world. Of a surety there is no city in this country that can begin to compare with it. In Washington can be found the elite of society. The President and his Cabinet; the judges of the Supreme Court; the members of the Senate; the members of the House of Representatives; the foreign ministers; the officers of the army and navy; the great political leaders of every sect and party; the great lawyers of the country; the great newspaper editors and correspondents of the country; the great literateurs of the country; the great painters, sculptors and architects of the country; all these attract men and women of similar tastes, and during the season entertainments and parties are held nightly to suit the taste of the most cultured. There is no mind of a refined nature but can be accommodated. Wealth, position and influence all tend to the consummation of worldly enjoyment. Night is turned into day, and day into night. King Society holds sway, and his satellites are all around.

But there are various kinds of society. Only a privileged few have an entrée to the distinguished classes I have named. Only a few can get a peep at the gatherings of the "upper-ten." Only a few are permitted to enter the sacred portals. As a professional reporter I have attended many such society receptions, not in this country, but the old. I have sat near to princes, princesses, lords, earls, dukes and sirs, but I have yet to remember the time when I was invited to either their good looks or their exemplary behavior. After a great military review, I have seen a Prince so drunk that he could scarcely tell his own name. He certainly could not stand upright without assistance, and many an Earl, Duke and Sir have I seen leave a race course in a similar condition. I do not, however, mean to say that at the most distinguished gatherings that can be named, "all is not gold that glitters."

During my residence in Washington through the last session of Congress, I met many distinguished newspaper correspondents, male and female, and from these I learned many interesting particulars—especially from what are known as "Society Reporters"—in regard to the inner life of society in Washington. It is no better, it is no worse than I expected. I had long since learned that so-called society is rotten to the core; that the surface is fair and beautiful to look upon, but that the body will not bear probing for fear of scandals being unearthed that would astonish the world. In Washington every night there are instances of women who, from force of habit, brought on by late hours and an ever-present supply of intoxicating drinks can scarcely resist the temptation of imbibing more than is good for them. This is a melancholy state of affairs, yet it is nevertheless true. It is no fancy picture. It can be verified any day in the week. But not only is this taste for liquor among society women to be deplored; there are other things among them to be equally regretted. There is a tendency to demoralization. One is utter abandonment in dress—what is known as the decollette style—the low necked fashion of dress, by which the shoulders and the bosom are laid bare to the gaze of a whole multitude of people. Right bravely, while she was mistress of the White House, did Miss Rose Elizabeth Cleveland discountenance such a fashion, much to the disgust of a great many so-called female society leaders. She felt that Washington was getting outrageous on this subject, and she had the courage to forbid such a fashion at her receptions. If I mistake not, Mrs. Cleveland, now the First Lady of the land, is of the same opinion, and, if reports be true, she will do her utmost to compel society ladies at her receptions to wear dresses becoming their sex.

This decollette style of dress was approaching a craze. Here it has been confined to the young and the beautiful, perhaps some people would have felt inclined to condone the offence; but when it became more prevalent among the old dames, the mothers of three score, and three score and ten, and the young, when these old wall-flowers—no matter whose wives they happened to be—began to appear at parties and receptions exhibiting their singular, skin and bone, unshapely, shrivelled shoulders, it was thought the time had arrived when there should be a "let up." Just fancy some old woman with wizened features, cadaverous eyes, a long nose, (handicapped with gold spectacles) appearing at a White House reception in a low necked dress! It is a sight that is disgusting in the extreme, and it is well that such a fashion should be frowned upon in all society both by the old and young. Miss Cleveland has right when she put her foot squarely down against such a style.

But what of the men I enumerated at the beginning of this article? What of the would-be politicians and office-seekers—an aristocracy of another kind—a class that claim to have helped President Cleveland to the Executive Chair? These, too, help to swell the ranks in Washington during the session of Congress. They are an ever present part of the community. Within the last nine months, in the capital city, I have met, of the above type, some of the most curious specimens of humanity on earth. No pen can do them justice. The would-be politician—the man who fancies he is the best stump speaker in a political campaign—is generally a loud-mouthed, consequential individual. I have seen many specimens of the man in and around the various large hotels in Washington. As I have said he is ever present. You can't get quit of him. He will insist upon quoting passages from some of his best speeches. He will bore and button-hole you about to death, and finally the whole business will wind up by his asking if you have any loose change in your pocket that you could lend him for a day or two—just until he receives a certain sum of money which Senator this and Representative that has owed him for a considerable time. In this way money is often tendered out of pity. It can easily be seen that this type of man has seen better days. He is intelligent and smart, but through dissipated habits he is threatened with losing clothing that is threadbare; a hat that has seen better days; a pair of boots that are thin in the uppers and down in the heels. From a man of responsibility and position, he has descended to what is known as a "dead-beat." He is in Washington, of course, looking after some office, which he is as likely to get as the man in the moon. Yet he lives in hope. He borrows from his Congressmen or any body else who is likely to him, and runs a long account with his landlady, and his food he picks up at the various free lunch bars. With five cents, with which he purchases a glass of beer, he can pick and pick until he manages to get, not a hunger meal, but enough to appease his hunger for the time being.

But all office-seekers are not of this class. Thousands of respectable people come to Washington to seek a position to better their condition in life. Many, however, are greatly disappointed. They leave home with a considerable sum of money and upon their arrival in Washington they put up at some respectable stopping place. They feel assured, from what they have been told by their Congressman, that they will soon get a position of some kind, and they feel perfectly content to walk around for several weeks. By and by they begin to think that after a month or two has passed away, and no position has been obtained, that President Cleveland is too slow, that he ought to wave up and turn out Republicans to make room for Democrats on the principle that "to the victors be long the spoils." Many a disappointed office-seeker of this class have I met in Washington, men of ability and respectability. They now get very low, and the prospect of obtaining a position even at the end of two, three or four months was no brighter than it was the first day they arrived in the city. Ultimately such a person gets disheartened, and as soon as his money is done, he strikes for home with no good feelings towards the Administration, or the heads of departments, as the Democrats may be called. He has been badly treated, and threatens all sorts of vengeance against the Democratic party, President Cleveland in particular. The office seeker, of course, has no use for civil service reform. In his opinion every Democrat ought to fill the office now filled by Republicans. In this, perhaps, he is not far wrong, but it should be remembered that it takes time to bring about such a revolution. Cleveland has done a tremendous amount of work since he entered the White House; and so far as removals are concerned I believe he will do something sweeping in that line before the meeting of Congress in December next. The Democrat leaders are bringing great pressure to bear upon him in this direction, and in view of the fall elections, and the absolute necessity of having a Democratic majority in the House, he may be moved to display greater activity in the next few months than he has displayed in the past. Party differences will have to be healed up and a liberal distribution of the offices will go a long way to fill up the breach. At present President Cleveland is enjoying a well deserved holiday. All business at the White House is suspended, and probably will be for some weeks to come. His work will be full when he returns but with the assistance of Col. Lamont, one of the most capable of private secretaries in the country, he will soon clear the tables of accumulated correspondence and get down to solid business. He is a terror to work, and at the same time has a pleasant word for every one who is fortunate enough to have an audience with him. His manner, however, is sometimes very sorry tried. He listens to a great many things that do not legitimately belong to his department. He is safely guarded nevertheless, from "cranks," a good many of whom are always floating about Washington. They come from all parts of the country and are imbued with the idea that unless the President follows the line of policy they will mark out the Democratic majority will go to pieces. Several of these half demented people have got into the White House, but as soon as they were asked by the attendant to state the nature of their business, it was instantly discovered that their minds were unbalanced and that they had better be handed over to the tender mercies of the police, and their friends as soon as possible. The Gaiter tribe are not at all dead yet. The President, however, seems to have no fear for his safety. While in the city he drives all around in the company of his wife, every afternoon. Sometimes Mrs. Cleveland drives out alone for the purpose of doing some shopping, but the mobbing she has received when recognized in a store has made her visits on the street very few. It appears she is very fond of birds. One day while the President was out of town she had the coachman dress in plain clothes and drive her down to a bird store on Pennsylvania Avenue. She had scarcely got into the store before some one on the side walk recognized the coachman, and the "cat was out of the bag" immediately. A crowd gathered around the door and she had to use some kind of stratagem to get away. While the public mean no disrespect, yet such a display of curiosity must be very distasteful to Mrs. Cleveland.

MARRIED THE WIDOW!

Regardless of the Fact of Another Wife Living.

REV. MCKNIGHT OFFICIATES.

A Little Piece of Work That Will Probably Send Another Man to the Pen.

There was a case somewhat out of the ordinary run of things before Commissioner McKay yesterday morning, when Henry N. Hawthorne was arraigned on a complaint, sworn to by John F. Wood, alleging that while the defendant was married to one Jane Doe Hawthorne, he had, on the 24th day of August last, married one Mary Jane Warn, and had since lived with her as his wife, etc., etc.

The case was opened with the testimony of the complainant, who said that he had known Hawthorne for some time, and the defendant had told him that he had a wife living in the east whom he was very anxious to hear from. I was quite familiar with the latest wife of the defendant, and I have nothing against her except that I do not like to see a woman imposed upon. In answer to further queries, he said that he was once engaged to defendant's wife, and had done some work for her about one month ago.

Jewett B. Francis' testimony was to the effect that he and the defendant roomed together prior to the marriage of the latter; that defendant had told him that he had one of the sweetest women that ever lived somewhere back in Connecticut. I understood him to say that he had married her in England; that she was an only daughter, and that he had left her in the east, while he came to Utah in search of employment. Defendant read a part of one of the letters he received from her. She alluded to him as her darling husband and intimated that she was in need of money, and would like to have him send her some. I believe he said she was at Danbury, Conn. Later on he received another letter from her in which it was stated that she was in New York, that she was out of money, and was going home to her father in England. It was understood that she was in a delicate condition and was going home to be confined. This was about six weeks before his last marriage. Defendant received another letter shortly after that, and in it was the information that she had arrived home in safety. On the night of August 24th, I missed defendant from my room, and the next morning I was somewhat astonished to learn that he was married. I questioned him about it, and he admitted that he had married a widow named Warn. I asked him how he thought his other wife would feel about it, and he said that it would not trouble her much, as she did not care for him.

Carrie J. Curry said she was present in the same room, although not in the same room, when the defendant was married to the widow Warn; was invited to the wedding, but did not go. She heard him say he had a wife previous to this marriage. A man named James McKnight performed the ceremony.

The alleged new wife, Mrs. Hawthorne, was then called. Her testimony was simply to the effect that she had married defendant a week ago Tuesday, and the prosecution rested. As a point of fact Mr. McKay placed the bonds at $1,500.

The latest Mrs. Hawthorne says she does not believe the stories about the defendant having another wife, and seems to be perfectly willing to stand by him "through good and evil report." The defendant claims that he has been a bank note expert, and that he has not in the same room, when the defendant was married to the widow Warn; was invited to the wedding, but did not go. She heard him say he had a wife previous to this marriage. A man named James McKnight performed the ceremony.

Prof. Mooney's Success.

The Salt Lake Dancing Academy was opened for the season on last Friday night with an invitation party. "Music Sweet" was furnished by Professors Titus and Olsen. Professor Mooney will begin the organization of his dancing classes to-morrow. He can be seen at the Hall, formerly known as Sheldon's Dancing Academy, from 12.30 to 4.30 p. m. daily.

The Professor is an artist in his profession, and we predict for him a prosperous season. We understand that he proposes renting out the hall to private parties on certain evenings—thus filling a want much needed. He has made arrangements to furnish music to private and public parties.

DRIED FRUIT PROSPECTS.

Some Valuable Hints that Should be Taken.

Desirous of knowing something of the prospects for the coming season in regard to Utah dried fruit, a HERALD reporter yesterday called upon a gentleman who has handled many a carload in the past, and from him it was learned that the demand of late is not nearly so great as was that of two or three years ago.

"To what do you attribute this?" was the query. "Simply and solely to the fact that our people are not as careful in drying peaches, apricots and plums as they should be. In order to obtain the best results, so that the fruit may have a bright and clean appearance, the peaches should be cut and dried before they are fully ripe. If they are taken when ripe the action of the sun turns them black, and this is a very objectionable feature, so much so that I find it absolutely impossible to dispose of them. Another mistake is made in that of quartering the peaches, and this practice must be abolished. I shall be compelled to refuse a consignments of quarters, and must insist that the fruit be dried in halves. Care should also be taken looking to the protection of peaches, apricots and plums from the rain, for once wet they are forever spoiled, and cannot be disposed of at any price. Apricots and plums should also be halved, and particular care should be taken to put the apricots in cotton sacks just as soon as they are dried in order to protect them from the moths, which otherwise play havoc with them, and thus materially reduce their value. Apples and pears should be fully pared, as there is no sale for those dried with their skins on, and it will merely be a loss to those who may thus dry them. The whole fact of the matter is that our Utah fruit growers have become very careless in regard to the methods used in drying our excellent fruits, and have almost commenced to think to judge from their actions, that anything would do, so long as it was for sale. This careless and indifferent manner has resulted in the production of some inferior goods, and as a result our reputation in the market for dried fruit is not nearly as good as it was wont to be in the days gone by. I look for a fair sale of dried fruits this year, however, although, of course, it is a little early yet to press just what the result will be."

"About what is the revenue from the dried fruit crop of the Territory?" "It will vary, I believe, from $50,000 to $100,000 a year, and when this is stated it will be at once seen that it is an important item of home industry that should be fostered and encouraged by every means within our power. This cannot be done, if the fruit is put upon the market in an inferior manner to that supplied by the east and west. To regain our reputation for the best dried fruits in the United States, it is only necessary that our fruit growers should remember the following: First—Cut peaches, apricots and plums in halves only; cut peaches before they are too ripe, and thus preserve the bright and attractive appearance. Second—Protect all fruits from the rain. Third—Thoroughly peel all pears and apples. If these directions are followed producers will have no difficulty in disposing of their dried fruits and obtain a fair and reasonable price for their labor."

THE TEACHERS.

Barnes & Co. Get Away With the Text Books on Physiology.

The district school-teachers of Salt Lake county met yesterday in the Fourteenth Ward Assembly Rooms to reorganize their association. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President—Supt. W. M. Stewart. First Vice-President—Prof. C. F. Wilcox. Second Vice-President—Mr. D. R. Allen. Secretary and Treasurer—Mr. C. M. Sorenson. Assistant Secretary—Miss Mabel Young. Chorister—Mr. R. S. Horne. Assistant Chorister and Organist—Mr. A. S. Decker. Program Committee—Messrs. J. B. Moreton and Wm. Bradford, and Misses Cecelia Sharp, Ruth A. Reese and Annie Lynch.

Purchasing Agent—Mr. J. H. Parry. Prof. Evan Stephens kindly offered to organize the association into a class and give instructions in vocal music, free of charge. Every teacher in Salt Lake County should certainly take advantage of this opportunity to learn something of music from such an efficient teacher. The secretary read a communication from Hon. L. John Nuttall, Territorial Superintendent of District Schools, calling the attention of the county superintendents and the teachers, to the law of Congress relating to the teaching of the effects of alcoholic drinks and narcotics on the human system, and recommending the adoption in our district schools of the Pathfinder Series of text books on Physiology.

A resolution favoring the adoption of the Pathfinder Series (Barnes, publishers) signed by the superintendents of eight counties of Utah Territory, was read and approved by the unanimous vote of the teachers present. A resolution recommending the adoption of Barnes New National Readers into the district schools of Salt Lake County, to be used as supplementary readers, was laid upon the table for consideration at a future meeting. President Stewart called the attention of the teachers to the merits of the new school register prepared by Trustee John N. Pike. The Association adjourned till 11 a. m., Saturday, September 18, 1886.

More Commissions Issued.

Secretary Thomas issued the following commissions yesterday: E. A. Smith, Probate Judge, Salt Lake County. J. H. Moyle, Prosecuting Attorney, Salt Lake County. F. K. Clayton, Probate Judge, Beaver County. Henry Emmerson, County Clerk, Beaver County. Jesse Baldwin, Sheriff, Beaver County. C. P. Bird, Treasurer, Beaver County. Edward Tolton, Recorder, Beaver County. Joseph J. Josephs, Selectman, Beaver County. Enoch E. Cowdell, Prosecuting Attorney, Beaver County. R. Maeser, Superintendent of District Schools, Beaver County. J. F. Tolton, Surveyor, Beaver County. Geo. Fennemoer, Justice of the Peace, Beaver Precinct, Beaver County.

Let's Make it Boom.

About four months ago, when the finances of the Olympic Club were at a very low ebb, and when the outlook for its existence was anything but encouraging, Mr. J. W. Reckhart assumed the management of the club, and by devoting to it almost his entire time and attention has succeeded in reviving the interest of old members and securing many new ones, and the club is now in a fairly prosperous condition. During all this time Mr. Reckhart has never received anything for his services, and now the members of the club, and his friends generally, intend to give him a grand testimonial benefit. The boys say they will give such an exhibition as has never been witnessed in the city before. Some novel and interesting features will be introduced, and every effort will be made to make the entertainment especially attractive to ladies and children. Mr. Reckhart deserves a rousing benefit, and we hope he will get it. Due notice of the time and place will be given.
