GEN. SIMON CAMERON IS DEAD.

He Died at 8 O'clock Last Night—Chief Engineer Hunt's Death—A Boulangist Meeting—Salvation Army Troubles.

(Special to THE HERALD—Examiner Dispatch.)

New York, June 26.—The coming marriage at the cathedral, Sunday next, of Mr. John Dabgreen, son of the late Admiral Dabgreen, and Miss Elizabeth Drexel, daughter of the late Joseph Drexel, will be an event of much social significance.

The wedding dress will be of thick white satin tulle, draped in rare point d'Alencon lace, 150 yards old and worth about two thousand dollars, and the entire dress represents something like $5,000. The paraffin of the drapery is orange blossoms. The square cut corsage is edged with heavy white braided cord with long tassels ends. The neck is trimmed with point d'Alencon lace, and the veil is of the same delicate material, and will be arranged on the head with a magnificent tulle of diamonds, all of which will be secured with sprays of orange blossoms fastened with pearl buttons. White satin slippers with diamond tips. White satin gloves with pearl tassels. The bride will wear a crown of diamonds, and a beautiful bouquet of white roses and a beautiful prayer book bound in velvet and ornamented with roses, a sash and anchor of diamonds, rubies and sapphires.

The bride's train will wear similar gowns with white point d'Alencon lace and white tulle. Her hair will be dressed in the latest style, and will be adorned with white flowers and ribbons. The bridesmaids will wear similar gowns with white point d'Alencon lace and white tulle. The bridesmaids will wear similar gowns with white point d'Alencon lace and white tulle.

Some of Miss Drexel's gowns have been made here and some have come from Paris. The entire train has a delicate look on account of everything, from the selected silk wares, lace trimmed over and under skirts, waists, handkerchiefs and gloves, with the exception of a traveling dress and one or two elegant costumes, being in white.

The traveling dress is of gray check English suit, made in English style, one patterned white skirt, and a double breasted jacket, the bottom is of rich tulle. Each costume or gown has stockings, shoes and gloves to match, and those to be worn with this costume are gray silk stockings, gray shoes and gloves, and a white tulle jacket.

A handsome gown to make calls in its black and white striped silk, made with plain capote skirt and Josephine jacket, with slanted back, and a heavy white cashmere jacket, high up to the waist. The collar and cuffs are white, white and turned down. Several pretty morning dresses are of white serge and muslin, made with plain skirts, long sleeves and high collars. A simple but pretty reception dress is of white tulle silk. The skirt is accordion pleated from the belt to the hem, and the waist is in simple effect, and trimmed with lace. Several handsome parasols and a number of dainty fans, lace fans, under sleeves, under collars, cuffs and chemises help to make up a trousseau which probably represents something like $25,000, exclusive of jewels.

Among the presents a notable gift is that of the groom to the bride, a diamond and emerald ring set, which he betrothed Catherine von Horn. It is a curious looking, large, wide silver ring with rubies at the top, and is the original of a gold one which he has been in the Dabgreen family since the year 1823. The open work designs are emblematic of the passions. The presents which include diamonds and other jewels, silver and gold articles, valuable handkerchiefs, and numerous articles of bric-a-brac, represent something like a million dollars or more.

POLITICAL POINTS.

Congressman Foran, of Ohio, on the Democratic Outlook.

PHELPS GETS THE GERMAN PLUM.

The President Gives it to Him as a Reward—Sexton Before the Parnell Commission—Colored Republicans.

(Special to THE HERALD—Examiner Dispatch.)

WASHINGTON, June 26.—Congressman Martin Foran, of Ohio, who dropped in to the city yesterday morning, feels very confident that the Democrats will carry both the governorship and the legislature in Ohio next autumn.

"It is not one thing that will defeat us. If, after the county conventions have been held, it should be demonstrated that the candidates for the assembly were nominated in the interests of the money kings, who will contest among themselves for the United States senatorship, then enough of our people will go fishing on election day to lose us the state."

Calvin S. Brice, who is really a resident of New York and can no longer be called an Ohioan, John H. McLean, of the Cincinnati Enquirer, who is at all intents and purposes a citizen of Washington, and L. E. Holden of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, none of these gentlemen have any claim to the senatorship, except so far as their money enables them to secure the election of members of the legislature.

"If these gentlemen say that they will carry their hands off, you think you will carry the state."

"I have no doubt of it." Mr. Foran replied. "We almost invariably carry the state in the off years. Does it occur to you that our understanding Ohio is a Republican state? For over thirty years continuously the Democrats have had one or two Senators? First there was Thurman, then Pendleton, and now Payne. The conditions are unusually favorable to the Democrats' success this year as we are entitled and the Republicans are not. Foraker will probably be nominated at Columbus. He is the most popular Republican in Ohio with the exception of the one who is opposed to him, and this opposition will make itself felt next November, not by bolting the ticket, but from apathy."

"What are the Ohio Democrats saying about the presidential nomination in 1892?"

"Public sentiment on that point has not crystallized. Cleveland is strong with the free traders, or rather the extreme low tariff party, who use all their energy to mass the declaration of a Democratic when the President was showing himself not to be one endorsed him in the affection of our people. Whitney, also, is popular here, but rather weak for his nomination than that of any man I know."

The Sale of Denney's Third Base Man. (Special to THE HERALD—Examiner Dispatch.)

WASHINGTON, June 26.—Baseball circles here have been somewhat excited over the report in circulation yesterday that the Indianapolis management had offered to sell Jerry Denney, of California, the clever third baseman of the Hoosier combination, to the Washington club. It is true that a proposition of this kind was received from the Indianapolis club on Friday last, but since that time the Indianapolis people have withdrawn it. President Hewitt of the Washington club, however, thinks that the deal will be consummated within the next ten days. The reason given for Denney's sale is that the Indianapolis club is losing money and will relinquish their franchise at the close of the present season.

This amount will be entirely supplied from the surplus profits of all the companies whose lines are affected.
