The Average Price of Refined Sugar Abroad.

STEALINGS OF THE SUGAR TRUST

A Gigantic Robbery Under Cover of Law, Keeping All Those who are Opposed to it in Any Way.

Whoever imports raw materials for sugar into the United States must pay a tax averaging 2 cents a pound to the government.

Whoever imports refined sugar must pay a tax of 3 1/2 cents a pound to the government.

Whoever imports both must pay both the 2 cents on the raw sugar and 3 1/2 cents on the refined sugar; there is no connection between them.

The total protection the sugar industry enjoys is 2 cents on raw and 3 1/2 cents on refined sugar; the first is to protect the cane planters; the second is to protect the refiners.

Here sugar, "properly known as melacha, tank-bottoms, and cane juice," is nearly all imported.

No refined sugar is imported for table use; a few pounds are imported for experiments.

The government gets 2 cents on each pound of raw sugar imported; the refiners import the raw sugar and pay 2 cents duty on each pound.

The refiners get the 3 1/2 cents on each pound of sugar they refine, by adding 3 1/2 cents on each pound they sell, above the world's price of refined sugar in the open market.

The government gets none of the tax on refined sugar, for no refined sugar is imported.

The average price of refined sugar abroad for the last two years has been under 4 1/2 cents a pound, for loaf, powdered and granulated. All the sugar any American offers to buy will be delivered at our ports at from 4 1/2 to 5 cents.

The average price of refined sugar in this country is from 8 to 10 cents a pound. The refiners are authorized by law to charge 4 1/2 cents more per pound than the sugar is worth, and as much more as they can get.

The refiners of this country export refined sugar and sell it in the countries at the world's market price, 4 1/2 to 5 cents; that is, they can afford to sell to foreigners at from 3 1/2 to 5 cents a pound cheaper than they can afford to sell to their own countrymen. Just ask the housewife how much she paid for the sugar she used in preserving fruit last summer.

In 1887, according to the eleventh statistical abstract, 180,672,154 pounds of refined sugar were exported from this country and sold to foreigners. When the refiners export sugar, 90 per cent. of the duty they had paid on the raw material is paid back to them. The object of paying back the duty is probably to make a present of it to the foreign purchaser or to the refiner.

If we deduct the revenue tax of 2 cents a pound on raw materials, from the bounty of 3 1/2 cents a pound that is paid to the refiner, there is a bounty of 1 1/2 cents on each pound of sugar sold, over and above the tax they pay on raw materials.

Mr. Stagner gives the amount of sugar sold in one year in this country at 3,000,000,000 pounds, which, multiplied by 1 1/2 cents, makes a total of $45,000,000 paid in bounty to the sugar trust, out of which they kindly let the laborers have $4,484,300. They stole over $40,000,000 of the money entrusted to them to pay wages; a steal of more than 90 per cent. of the money given to them for that purpose only.

The sugar refiners admit that their profits last year amounted to $10,000,000; and it is believed that they did not tell the whole truth even then.

The total wages paid in sugar refining is 1 1/2 cents for each ten pounds of sugar made, or only one-tenth of the money the people give to the refiners to pay their employees.

This industry, which has had absolute control of the home market for twenty years, which gets its labor free of all cost, which gets its tax on raw sugar paid by the people, and part of it refunded a second time in the rebate of exports, which employs only 3,000 persons, and whose small wares, which exact a black-mail, allowed by law, amounting to $45,000,000 a year from the sugar bowls of Americans, which is the only example of ripened fruit the "protection" tree has yet borne, and which is, therefore, exactly what every protected industry expects to be—a gigantic robbery under cover of law, that ruins any single firm that dares to compete with it. This industry raises its head in Utah for more protection, asking that one cent more per pound be added to the price of all the sugar it will produce here.

Facts are wasted on Mr. Stagner. For a dismal tale of days I have labored to convince him that if Utah is a good country for producing sugar, therefore we ought to pay more for our sugar than if we did not have such facilities. I have tried to show him that unless we import the products of cheap labor, we must pay low wages to make these products, instead of high wages to make the things we exchange for them.

I have tried to show him that it is more wages we want, not more work and less pay; he will not believe it. I have labored to illustrate to him that if farmers will make twice as much at growing cane as they do at growing potatoes, all he has to do is to offer them the increased pay for cane, and they will go at it quietly enough; and that if the sugar trust will not freeze him out he need not wait for extra bounties, but start up at once.

I deem it unnecessary to answer Mr. Stagner's statement that Utah farmers cannot earn a dollar a day; or to answer his calling me a "falsifier," to put it mildly, in five variations; or to answer his insinuations about my professional ability; or to answer his talk about non-producers, further than to say that he is as much in error on these points as he has been proved to be on all the others.

The best sometimes your course to restrain. And charitably let the dull be vain.

But the bill has passed now, and the industry is established. Now is the farmer enriched, the poor fed, the mechanic provided for, the banker reassured. The era of plenty is upon us. Now stand by and watch the sugar industry boom, saving a million a year to the territory, scattering widecast the blessing of plenty and causing the whole land to rejoice.

Summer-time brings cold and stomach-ache. Simmons Liver Regulator cures it.

They know how to cure rheumatism in Pennsylvania! Mr. J. F. McElghan, a Pittsburg cigar dealer, awoke one morning with an attack of rheumatism in his right arm. Working around the store during the forenoon made it worse. By noon the pain was so severe that he could not raise his hand to his head and had to carry his arm in a sling. One of his customers, on learning the facts, went across the street to E. E. Heck's drug store, and at his own expense procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and persuaded the cigar dealer to try it. It eased the pain and reduced the swelling so that by the next morning he could use his arm, and by the second morning was entirely well. This is only one of the many severe cases of rheumatism that have been cured by this valuable remedy. Fifty cent bottles for sale by Z. C. M. I. Drug Department.
