

THE CALL TO ARMS.

FIRST MEETING OF THE BOARD OF MILITARY CONTROL.

The Full Limit of Seven Regiments Will Be Enrolled as Soon as Possible - Applications Are Flowing In.

To the great delight of some specimens of the genus small boy and some others of greater stature who are imbued with a desire to use the language of one of our Republican legislators—to wear "brass coats with blue buttons," a new flag was run up in front of the executive mansion yesterday, to give notice to the people of the city, and likewise the citizens of the United States, that Utah at last has a national guard. This does not necessarily imply that she has marching battalions whose tread shakes the neighboring earth, but that her available army, consisting of a commander-in-chief, a brigadier-general and seven colonels, has met and organized.

This momentous meeting of the board of control of the militia, the nucleus of the call which was published exclusively in The Herald, was held in the office of Governor West yesterday morning and were present, besides the commander-in-chief, who presided, Adjutant-General George M. Ottlinger, Inspector-General E. W. Tuttle, Judge Advocate-General A. D. Gash, Commissary-General Thomas J. Egan, Quartermaster-General D. C. Adams, Surgeon-General Allan Fowler and aides Nephew W. Clayton and Alex. Leob.

After reading the law and discussing its provisions it was determined by the board to utilize all the means provided by the Legislature and combine them with the patriotism and zeal of the young men in order to make up the National Guard of Utah. All companies will be mustered in up.

TO THE MAXIMUM NUMBER allowed by law, being three regiments of infantry, two of cavalry and two batteries of artillery. But all companies which are to be mustered in must agree to uniform themselves, as the inadequacy of the appropriation would forbid that it should be used for that purpose. A committee, consisting of Colonels Clayton, Adams and Leob, were appointed to make inquiries regarding uniforms and obtain information regarding the price at which they may be purchased.

A resolution was passed requesting the commander in chief to obtain permission from the proper authorities for the use of the unused portions of the Industrial home for offices of the adjutant general and storage of the arms and equipments that may be allowed by the government. The commander in chief was also authorized to ascertain, as soon as possible, the amount of arms and equipments that will be allowed by the government and to make requisites therefor.

Another resolution was passed authorizing the commander in chief to address letters to the mayors and city councils of the different cities throughout the territory, asking that they furnish armories and drill halls for the companies in their towns and asking also that they aid and encourage the officers of the militia in organizing the same. A resolution was also passed authorizing the commander in chief to ask the D. A. and M. society for the use of the unused portions of their other quarters can be benefited.

WILL SOON BEGIN. It was decided that as soon as the necessary papers and blanks could be obtained the companies that have already applied would be enrolled. The question of seniority is discussed and must be decided on later.

Leutenant William Lassiter of the Fort read a very interesting and exhaustive paper treating on the law and the steps necessary to be taken and received a vote of thanks. He had been consulted by the commander in chief and was present at his invitation.

The board then adjourned and will hold another meeting in the near future. After adjournment Gov. West, General Ottlinger, Adams and Leob and Stevens went to the Industrial Home and selected a suite of offices for the adjutant general.

There are now before the board applications from four companies of infantry, two uniformed and two not, and one battery of light artillery in Salt Lake, one company of cavalry and a battery of artillery in Ogden, and a company of infantry each from Provo and Brigham City. Companies of cavalry are being formed in Rich county, Bountiful, Davis county and Parowan. In some of the militia units arms has gone from one end of the territory to the other and the young men by hundreds are answering it.

HE PAID THE FINE.

A Logan Justice Liquidates the Penalty Imposed by Himself. Saturday Mrs. Eliza V. Nielsen Gnehm was arrested on the complaint of Mrs. Stahel, charged with stealing a necklace and jewel casket from her home. She was brought before the police magistrate, who heard the evidence pro and con, and took the matter under advisement until Monday. When Mrs. Gnehm was adjudged guilty as charged, and fined $5 and costs. When the sentence was pronounced, Mrs. Nielsen, Eliza's mother, began to abuse the justice, applying to him epithets which might be classed as indecent language, to say nothing of her liability for contempt of court. She charged him with being a falsifier, with desiring to persecute a poor innocent woman, and said: "We'll not pay a cent! We'll go to jail! Take us to jail! I'll go to jail and protect my daughter!" She went on in such an unbecoming way as to lead people to believe she was out of her head. Mrs. Gnehm has a child about two months old, and Mrs. Nielsen made use of that fact to abuse the justice, who, with more patience and forbearance than most people are blessed with, replied that he would pay the fine if she would keep still. And then he upbraided him, snapping out: "Well, you might have saved us this trip in the snow, anyhow." The justice dismissed the prisoner and paid the fine himself.—Logan Journal.

The New College Board.

The new board of Agricultural college directors met last Saturday in this city and elected W. S. McCormick to succeed himself. This was a deserved recognition of the gentleman's ability and interest in the college. Among other matters considered by the board was a request of Prof. Sanborn for leave of absence for a couple of months. He will be allowed to go east and look after his farm, while his salary here goes on. It certainly seems in view of the economy imposed upon the college at this time, that the board makes a mistake in allowing any member of the faculty to draw his salary while attending to other business in another place. A policy which will do this and cut down the salary of another is not economy.—Logan Journal.

The Logan Canyon Road.

It is probable that Logan may become a shipping point for the Bear Lake copper mines when they open up in the spring. The near completion of the Salt Lake copper works makes it probable that all the ore from this section will go there for reduction. It therefore behooves the people of this county to put the canyon road in good repair at the earliest possible date. We are informed that a good wagon road may be made to the Rich, Cache and adjoining properties by following Sink Hollow from Cole's old mill to the head of Hibbing canyon to the mines.

In another column will be found an estimate of freight cost.—Journal.

FROM SALLINA.

More Utah Horses Shipped to Scotland.

Sallina, March 20.—Farmers have been very busy for the last ten days plowing and sowing and it appeared as though we would have an early dry spring; but that thought is dispelled and today dame nature is clothed with a heavy mantle of white. Snow has been falling for thirty-six hours and still continues.

It is heavy and wet, and the complaint of our farmers that their bench land was too dry to sprout grain will no doubt be satisfied to the fullest extent. Our station agents, Mr. and Mrs. Bradford, have gone to visit the Middlesex fair and Mr. J. Hicks, of Springville, has come to take their place. Some "Scotch laddies" have just returned from Grass Valley with sixteen head of horses, purchased from Smith Parker and James Forchae. They put them on board of a palace car yesterday morning, destined for "The hand of cakes, where they will, no doubt, make trading records similar to that of "Alarmist" at the fair last fall, as they are of the same breed.

W. H. Clark, Sevier county's representative to the Legislature, returned from Salt Lake Saturday and went on to his home in Richfield Sunday loaded down with glory and honor, earned in the last Republican Legislature. The sugar factory was not visible but it is presumed he had it in his vest pocket, besides several other important items promised us during the campaign last fall. The Herald's special article on "Bass" general makeup was o. k.

J. W. Phillips, of this place, has just returned from the east whither he has been with two car loads of steers. He reports the market very dull and no prospects of it getting better. Still range venders continue to play their part through the country. It is estimated they have succeeded in getting the people's notes to the tune of $5,000 and upwards already. We are too old to learn down this way, it seems.

Territorial Items.

On the 15th, Andrew Peterson shot himself through the upper part of the leg, passing through the flesh in front. The pistol was out of order and accidentally went off after he had fired. A neighbor boy borrowed the pistol and accidentally shot a horse in the leg.—Richfield Advocate.

is almost exhausted. They are made of Ontario silver and present quite an effect on a coat lapel.—Richfield Advocate.

TUSCARORA SOCIETY.

THE BRAVES HAD A REGULAR FIELD NIGHT.

One Hundred and Fourteen Candidates Elected—The New Ritual Tried on J. R. Letcher—Delegates Elected.

The Tuscaroras tried their new ritual last night for the first time and it worked like a charm. J. R. Letcher was selected as the victim, and Grand Sachem, Powers, Big Medicine, Man Sommer, Keeper of Wampum Welch, Senior Scout Hoge, Chief Bird and Scout Ryan, together with other officials and the warriors of the tribe officiated.

The following candidates were elected and are requested to report at G. A. R. hall on Saturday evening, March 24, at 8 o'clock, to Big Medicine Man Sommer: M. E. McEnany, Frank Harris, H. W. Smith, Nephew W. Clayton, George E. Blair, Joseph Stoker, Joseph T. Richards, Caleb W. West, A. N. Cherry, R. C. Chambers, S. A. Kemner, John T. Calne, H. S. Laney, John C. Shipp, Wendell Benson, John W. Judd, Caleb W. West, Jr., O. P. HER REASON CLOUDED

MRS. M. E. POWERS WANTED TO SAVE THE CITY.

Thought She Must "Shut Off the Current"—A Run Through the Streets—A Crazy Painter.

Mrs. M. E. Powers, a middle-aged woman who, it is understood, has been separated from her husband for some time, not long ago took up her residence on State street, near Seventh South. She lived alone, and her neighbors saw but little of her. Quite recently, however, her strange actions attracted attention to her, and the impression prevailed in the neighborhood that she was not exactly sound in her mind. Yesterday morning Mrs. Powers created something of a sensation by starting from her home barefooted and thinly clad, and running through the streets as fast as she could until she was exhausted. Mrs. Carter, a neighbor, took her in and cared for her until the officers came. By this time she had quieted down and was removed to the county jail. From her own disconnected statements it would seem that the woman has seen a great deal of domestic trouble, which, together with ill health, has affected her mind. She is insane on the subjects of electricity and spiritualism, and yesterday morning conceived the idea that she must "shut off the current" in order to save the city from destruction. It was to perform this duty that she started on her mad-race through the streets.

The unfortunate woman was examined by the physicians in the probate court yesterday afternoon. The facts noted above were gathered from her own statements, and in addition, she said that after being taken to the county jail, she had turned up all the money she possessed, $20, and thrown it into the water. She appears to be harmless, and the physicians decided that the wisest plan to pursue would be to keep her in the county jail for a few days, and see what proper medical treatment would do for her. Mrs. Powers has no children.

A Crazy Painter.

Edward Clay Brooks, aged 35 years, a painter by profession, was adjudged insane by the probate judge and a board of medical examiners and will be taken to Provo today. For some time Brooks has been making life a hollow mockery for the members of the police department in particular and the public in general. He claims to have been employed as a detective to shadow a carload of burglars who are working in this city.

DENVER'S PRIZE FIGHTERS.

Jimmie Sharen Takes a Shot at Ed Smith. Denver's effort to grow prize fighters has always resulted calamitously. The industry began with John Clow for a foundation, and scarce had he developed when Frank Marshall came along with a big gun and out went his light. Then came along Ed Smith, who went against the Australian, the ridicule of the nation, and who woke the following morning with his star high up in the firmament. Ed wandered back to Denver and the city of tiny people began to grow again. Ed branched out as a breeder of prize fighters, and the wheels of the ill-fated industry began to revolve again, however, when along came Jimmie Scharen, who determined to crush it in its infancy. He opened his attack on the foundation, and drawing a bead on "Denver Ed," would have shot his eye out on Monday night had it not been for the stogger's clever ducking. Scharen is an ex-convict and as tough as a customer as ever evaded a hangman. Long years ago he was well known to the "Fly Bobs" of this city who gave him the usual notice to leave, and entrusting his steps he began to work the circuit of mining camps. At Leadville he came to grief by picking the spark from Howard Chapin's immaculate shirt front. Then he drifted to the capital again and began his short-lived career as a highwayman. Caught up with, he went to Canon City where he obtained his refreshments for four years, finally making his reappearance in Denver, where he obtained work at the same bar before which Cliff Sparks bit the dust. Some time ago Jimmie engaged in an altercation with Mike Ryan, which threatened to end in bloodshed, but as he drew his gun the pugilist interceded and knocking the ex-convict's arm aside probably saved a life. Since that episode Scharen has been quietly sneaking for an opportunity to pump a leaden bullet into the champion, and entering Smith's saloon on Monday night, began to fill up with beer. Ruffled up to the purpose that urged him on and thirsting for the life of the man who had prevented the taking of another's, the ex-convict opened fire. He sent a shot in the direction of the slugger, but in another moment he had been disarmed and thrown in jail upon a charge of assault to kill, while Smith was receiving congratulations on his luck. Jimmie is probably under the impression that a prize fighter's life is veiled for naught in Denver anyway. And he has the lesson in the Clow tragedy. In that case the pugilist, who had incurred the wrath of his slayer during a spree, was standing in the same saloon in which Sparks met death, when Frank Marshall entered and without a word of warning blazed away. The authorities didn't appear to recognize it as any serious crime, and in a few moments the slayer of a man who was successively champion of Colorado, Wyoming and Nebraska, was enjoying his liberty. Perhaps these facts emboldened Jimmie.

Denver, however, is yet alive and tooting as vigorously as ever at the heels of his superiors.

Boiled the Sand Glass.

Appropos to egg boiling is a recent dinner story, with the stupid servant as the heroine. A guest told of her cook, who could not tell time by the clock, and to whom she gave a little three-minute sand glass, telling her to boil the eggs with that, and when the sand had all run out the eggs would be done.

The mistress was surprised to find, on eating the egg, that it was still raw. She determined to crush it in its infamy, and drawing a bead on "Denver Ed," would have shot his eye out on Monday night had it not been for the stogger's clever ducking. Scharen is an ex-convict and as tough
