

CAUSE OF SPAIN MEETS DISASTER

Weyler's Troops Routed on the Road to Death.

MARCHED INTO THEIR OWN TRAP

LONO'S COLUMN DEFEATED BY INFERIOR FORCE.

One Thousand Insurgents Fell Upon Two Thousand Spanish Troops With Bayonets and Machetes—Spanish General Took to the Sea—Cubans Regard the Victory as One of Great Importance.

New York, May 13.—A dispatch to the Herald from Havana via Key West, Fla., says:

Apparently reliable news of the most important insurgent success in months has just reached Havana. It appears that General Calixto Garcia and General Rabi fell on a Spanish force which was carrying food and supplies from Manzanillo to Bayamo early last week, captured the convoy, routed General Lono's column and pursued him to the coast with the remainder of his brigade and took a ship at Cabo de Cruz for Manzanillo. It is said that so severe were the losses and so thoroughly disorganized was his men that the Spanish general did not dare attempt to retrace his steps to Manzanillo by land, fearing that he would be again attacked and this time wiped out of existence.

This engagement, which is regarded by Cubans here as more important than any battle since Cacericaria, goes to show how helpless the Spanish are in the country where the rebels, which is well called Cuba Libre. What is known of the affair came in a private letter to a Spanish officer here.

This disaster, which is regarded by Cubans here as more important than any battle since Cacericaria, goes to show how helpless the Spanish are in the country where the rebels, which is well called Cuba Libre. What is known of the affair came in a private letter to a Spanish officer here.

General Lono laid a trap for the insurgents and was held with his own party. Believing that the convoy would be attacked he sent his main team ahead with a small escort, intending to flank the rebels or fall upon their rear with his main infantry while the escort held their fire. This force was said to have been composed of 2,000 men. General Garcia, with between 5,000 and 1,000 men, also waited for the convoy three leagues from Bayamo. He had a small force of 2,000 men, and a large Spanish force following the poorly patrolled mule train, and suspecting a trick, he allowed the party to pass unmolested at the time, and placed his men in an advantageous position to await the coming of General Lono.

The Spanish, eagerly awaiting the sound of firing ahead, which would tell the train had been attacked, matched straight into the trap. The column was within short range the insurgents opened fire. The effect was deadly. The Spanish returned the fire, but they were ambushed and saw by the gaps in their ranks that their enemy was in force.

They advanced in word, but another volley from the insurgents caused them some wavering.

Then arose the old cry, "Al machete!" and the ranks could be seen to close or a square formed Garcia's men were upon them. As has been generally the case, the Spanish infantry, having been ordered to march in heavy file, did not long oppose the machete with the bayonet. In a few minutes the retreat was general.

General Lono's troops made desperate efforts succeeded in rallying a few hundred men for another stand, but although they opposed the insurgent advance with a brave front, it was evident that the day was lost. Fearing that a movement among the Cubans meant an attempt to surround them, the Spanish broke and fled in confusion. The defeat became a rout. The insurgent forces were then divided, one division pursuing General Lono and the other going to capture the arms and provisions.

The last proved an easy task. The Spanish commander with the retreating main body was harassed by the militia. The only way he saw to escape with the remainder of his forces was to make for the coast at a point many miles from Manzanillo. The Spanish, nearly 40 miles, reached Cape Cruz and sent word to Manzanillo. A passenger steamer was pressed into the service and the Spanish soldiers were taken back to Manzanillo. So heavy was the fighting and so swift their retreat that they were able to carry off but few of their arms. The details are not yet learned. Indeed, officially there is as yet no report of any engagement between Garcia and Lono, but the news reached Havana nevertheless.

There was some firing on the outskirts of Havana at 2 o'clock last Saturday morning. About 10 shots were fired by a sentry, who, it is said, thought he detected insurgents. There had been no official explanation of the firing and the sentry was permitted no mention of the report that a party of insurgents had made midnight demonstrations in that quarter. Every effort was made to keep the matter quiet, but that there was considerable firing, followed by a rapid movement of soldiers from Manzanillo to Cape Cruz, where the firing occurred, there can not be the slightest doubt. As the rebels are very strong in Havana, the news that there was such a serious engagement caused considerable excitement. The next day inquiry was useless.

WILL TAKE NO ACTION THAT WOULD OFFEND SPAIN.

Chicago, May 13.—A special to the Times-Herald from Washington says an important conference held at the White House between President McKinley and Senators Davis, Foraker and Morgan of the foreign relations committee was the result of the decision reached by the committee not to continue the debate in the senate on Senator Morgan's resolution recognizing the belligerency of the Cubans until the exact policy of the administration had been defined. This was partly due to the semi-official announcement made by Senator Foraker that the administration had its own policy and would treat the Cuban question in a proper way when the time came.

The members of the committee plainly asked the president what he intended to do. In confidence he told them that it was not his purpose at the present time to change the attitude of the administration or to do anything which could be construed by Spain as a manifestation of sympathy with the insurgents. For that reason, he said, he declined from sending warships to Havana to protect the interests of American citizens. The president told the senators so long as the status quo was maintained and until overt acts were committed by the Spanish involving the lives or property of American citizens, the administration would not change its existing position. The senators asked for some official information about the affairs in Cuba and complained because this information had been held back.

The president replied that if the official reports of Consul-General Lee and military counts on the island made public they would inevitably provoke a riot in Havana. He said that it was willing to let the foreign relations committee have all the information in the possession of the government if it would be carefully guarded. This was really what the senators wanted, their interest with the president they visited Secretary Sherman for the purpose of arranging with him the means of communicating the information.

UNCOMPAGRE LANDS. HOUSE POSTPONES CONSIDERATION UNTIL MONDAY.

Indian Warehouse Removed to Omaha—Jerry Simpson Squelched—House Gave Him the Floor, but the Speaker Ruled Him Out.

Washington, May 13.—The Indian appropriation bill was disposed of by the house today with the exception of the proposition for opening the Utah gisette lands which was postponed until Monday.

The conference report, which establishes an Indian warehouse at Omaha, rattles the lease of the Seneca oil lands and adds one judge to the Indian territory courts, was adopted by a vote of 217 yeas and 170 nays.

Nearly two hours were consumed in a parliamentary squabble on the point raised by the speaker when Mr. Simpson renewed his attack upon the speaker for failing to appoint committees, and centering in a discussion of the constitution.

The Tribune and the Navy. The Tribune is after the navy again. In an editorial entitled "How to Obtain Seamen," that appeared May 13, that paper would make it seem the fault of the navy department that new ships are to be laid up and that men for the service were scarce.

Why not be fair and lay the blame, if there is any, where it belongs. Every intelligent American should know that the number of enlisted men in the navy, like the army, is restricted by the number of ships that are in commission. There was no trouble getting men for the navy many years ago, but the navy is now in a very bad way. The navy is now in a very bad way. The navy is now in a very bad way.
