AFTER MORE SEMINOLES

Thirst for Vengeance Unabated in Oklahoma.

FRIDAY'S GRIM WORK STILL IN EVIDENCE

Bodies of the Two Victims Remain Chained to the Oak Tree.

Additional Details of the Horrible Execution and the Crimes For Which the Indians Yielded For Their Lives—Grave Fears of an Outbreak Among the Indians—Probability of a Repetition of Friday's Doings.

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 9.—(Charred and burned beyond all semblance of human beings, the remains of Marcus McGilsey and Palmer Simpson, the two Seminoles Indians who, a few days ago, murdered James Simmons, are still resting in chains against the blackened trunk of an oak tree in the Seminoles nation, where, on Friday night, they met their death in the most horrible manner conceivable, at the hands of an Oklahoma mob. The flesh is burned from the bones and lies in greasy and ill-smelling particles in the ashes on the ground. The fingers and hands are burned from the frames, and the ghastly skeletons, bereft of feet and ankles, stand on blackened bones in the ashes on the ground. Every vestige of hair and flesh are burned from the heads, and the clinched teeth of the dead men show the great determination to endure their awful punishment in silence, in which condition the bodies were found when the messenger left Sunday, and it is probable that at least part of the quartette have by this time paid the penalty decreed by the maddened populace.

WERE SMOTHERED TO DEATH

RESULT OF AN EXPLOSION IN A KANSAS MINE.

Condition of the Bodies Brought Up From the Shaft—Some Were Horribly Burned.

Pittsburg, Kan., Jan. 9.—The bodies of John Posing, Charles Winters and Anton Weinberger, the miners whom it was last night thought were alive in the Mount Carmel coal company's mine were brought up from the shaft today. Neither Weinberger nor Winters showed signs of having suffered any violence and it is believed they were smothered to death. Posing was horribly burned and was almost unrecognizable. James Zimmerman, who was last night reported as among the rescued, was the last man taken out today. Although badly burned, he will recover. Posing was 23 years old and leaves a wife and three children. Winters, who was 25 years of age, was the sole supporter of aged parents. Weinberger was single. The bodies were removed to the company morgue. An inquest was begun but adjourned till tomorrow.

REDMOND IN NEW YORK.

An Address That Made the Blood Tingle in Irish Hearts.

New York, Jan. 9.—John E. Redmond, the Irish patriot, received a rousing popular welcome in the Broadway theatre tonight. Every seat was occupied, and as Mr. Redmond stepped upon the stage, a deafening cheer greeted him. Among those upon the platform and in the boxes were Recorder John W. Gurley, former congressman Charles C. Smith, William Astor Chandler, Congressman William Sulzer and O'Donovan Rossa.
