Section Director.

A NEW YEAR'S EDITION.

The New Year's edition of The Herald will be a paper worth getting and filing away.

It will contain a general review of the business interests of the state and of adjacent states.

It will contain the very best matter for advertising the varied resources of the state that can be put out.

It will help to bring people this way, for the policy of The Herald is not to frighten would-be investors, but to encourage them to locate here and put their money in Utah property.

The way to advertise the resources of Utah and to give strangers a favorable impression of the state will be to send copies of the New Year's Herald far and near.

HOW BUSINESS IMPROVES. In some localities times are better than they have been for some time.

These controlling influences are as follows: The relaxation of capital which invariably follows a panic.

MINISTERS AND MISSIONS. A circular has been received showing the number of Protestant preachers and missionaries now in the field.

Numbers of societies engaged in work, 242; stations, 4,779; out-stations, 14,814; missionaries, 11,823; native helpers, 5,754; communicants, 1,488,851.

Some are inclined to criticize this outlay and this expenditure of effort abroad on the ground that it means a corresponding neglect of evil and ignorance nearer home.

Not long ago a number of New York clergymen got together a resolved that something would have to be done to keep their number from increasing too rapidly.

A prominent Philadelphia minister, in a letter to the New York Post, said that "the competition has reached a point in church affairs where many self-respecting preachers absolutely refuse to make any effort to obtain more satisfactory positions than they occupy."

This shows that the missionary work done among the benighted heathen of the world is not robbing the local field of usefulness or talent it could well employ.

SOME GOOD, SHORT STORIES

A Susceptible Cleveland.

The man who used to manage boxing shows at a town on one of the great lakes told the following story of a well laid plan going wrong.

"Well, there were some fellows there who wanted to make a little money, and they knew that the whole town was ready to back Peter; so they put up a scheme to doze him.

"There was a big crowd out to see the scrap. Just before the two men stood up the fellow that was handling Peter said: 'Take a good drink of this.'

"The referee called 'time' and the two men came up. In just seven seconds after they had their drinks, Peter landed a right hand swing on the jaw and the Cleveland fellow didn't wake up for two days.

"But about this yere party yesterday?" put in the steeplekeeper.

"Well, he seems like wuz ter be a quotation party. The widder sent out invites, an' on 'em she said that everybody must bring a quotation.

"The Lord loves a cheerful giver." "Wuz the rest of them thought that she was ainkin' reflections on them, as they made them mind, an' they ain't got over talkin' about hit yet.

"How to make 5,000?" he cried again. "By this time twenty people were halted about him.
