

BUMPED "THE MASHER"

Swell Commercial Man Arrested For Insulting Ladies.

SCENE AT THE STATION

ALBERT ROSENTHAL WOULD NOT BE SEARCHED.

Then an Officer Bumped His Head Against the Door and He Dug Up the Amount of His Bail—Officers Charge That He Has Insulted Prominent Ladies.

"I'll give it to you. Let me go, officer. Don't, don't, here it is." Pedestrians along First South, in the vicinity of the police station, rushed in to see what was carrying on, hearing the childlike cries from a man, undoubtedly that of a man. They saw a big, husky fellow with a Jewish cast of features, light curly hair and dressed like a prince, having his head well bumped against a door by a policeman whose hands enclosed the other's throat. He was striving to get his cane uplifted or his pocketbook out—it is not certain which—but his walls sounded within the radius of a half block. And the officer went on bumping, while President H. Siegel of the Siegel Clothing company expostulated that it was an outrage, and was threatened with arrest.

The man who had his head bumped was Albert Rosenthal, a commercial man, and his arrest for insulting ladies was the cause of a scene at the station. Mr. Siegel is a friend of Rosenthal's, and was there for the purpose of putting up bail for him. In this way he was thrown into the difficulty.

Known as "The Masher." Rosenthal represents E. Stenhouse & Co., Chicago clothing store. He came over a week ago, and in the time made himself popularly known as "the masher." There have been only a few like him in Zion. His most recent alleged duplicitous act was in the city jail for insulting ladies on the street. The police have spied Rosenthal, watched him, and followed him for a week, and yesterday they believe they completed a case against him, and Officer Palmer picked him up on Main street.

The police declare they have established that Rosenthal makes a practice of standing on street crossings and accosting ladies who pass. It is alleged that he sometimes asks them to go to dinner with him, or offers to help them on street cars. If they refuse, he persists in forcing his attention upon them. He has been seen at numerous times, so the officers say.

He tried to pick up an acquaintance with the wife of a well known real estate dealer several days ago on the Kenyon hotel corner. It is alleged, and has approached other prominent ladies. He was rebuffed, and the officers have watched him make similar efforts, never failing to interview the ladies insulted, and they now propose to make it hot for him. He was booked on a charge of "vagrancy," and released on bonds of $50.

Rosenthal's indignation. Rosenthal was indignant when taken to the police station. He telephoned for Mr. Siegel, wanted a lawyer and a half dozen prominent citizens, but only the first named gentleman appeared. He said that Rosenthal would not run away, and suggested his release. "His bond is $50," responded Desk Sergeant Pratt, very decidedly, "and he will have to furnish it or go to jail."

A delay followed. Rosenthal relating how well he knows the law, made Salt Lake for fifteen years. He denied doing any wrong, and when talking with having accosted women, he said: "Why, I know all, to the best of my knowledge and belief, but I ever spoke to them. They are restaurant girls."

Sergeant Brown refreshed Rosenthal's memory in two or three instances, and Palmer, growing weary of the ratcheting, told Rosenthal to put up or go to jail. "But I don't want to give a bond," he said.

"Then come to jail," replied the officer, starting to search his man. Rosenthal demurred. "I won't be searched," he cried, "leave your hands off my officer."

Bumped His Head. Palmer tried again, and Rosenthal fell sprawling, simply looking him by the neck and buried his head against the door.

Mr. Siegel tried to stop the scuffle, which was all one-sided, by offering to put up "any bond necessary." He threatened to put a charge against the officer. "I never saw anything like it," he exclaimed, "it's an outrage on society. Leave him alone, sir."

You keep quiet, said the same and Sergeant Brown, in the same breath, "or you'll be locked up."

This was fury to the flames, and threats were made and forth. Meanwhile Rosenthal cried: "Oh, don't, here it is, here's the money. Stop it, I'll give a bond, oh, don't," and when the officer had released him Rosenthal produced a check for $50, and walked away with his friend. Unless he concludes to forfeit the amount he will appear in court today.

Rosenthal's version. Rosenthal was seen at the Globe rooming house last night with reference to his arrest. His version of what occurred varies from that of others present.

"The occurrence is unprecedented," he exclaimed indignantly. "Imagine a citizen of the United States being placed under arrest by an officious policeman and choked until he is black in the face, while talking to a friend. It was unprovoked, unprovoked assault. The officer, without a word, grabbed my watch and chain and jerked it, then caught me by the throat and choked me almost into insensibility, simply because I was talking to a friend. I have been advised to demand his removal.

DEATH OF MAN WHO BROUGHT THE FIRST EXPRESS TO UTAH

Death called another of Utah's pioneers and a man of sterling integrity yesterday afternoon, when Ammi Rumsey Jackman was called to the great beyond. His death was due to general debility, though he suffered greatly from cancer of the stomach.

AMMI RUMSEY JACKMAN.

Death called another of Utah's pioneers and a man of sterling integrity yesterday afternoon, when Ammi Rumsey Jackman was called to the great beyond. His death was due to general debility, though he suffered greatly from cancer of the stomach. He was born in his seventy-fourth year. Mr. Jackman has been ailing for six months past and it was felt by his family that he had started west at the time of the same journey six or seven times, either as a rider for the pony express or the first named organization.

SAD STORY OF POVERTY DISCLOSED BY A DEATH

In Mount Olivet cemetery yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the Salvation Army, a little child was buried. The funeral was as simple and as inexpensive as the baby's life had been short, for the child's death brought to light a story of poverty and misery such as is rarely witnessed in Salt Lake.

On Sunday G. S. Snyder applied to Adjutant Crawford of the Salvation Army for assistance. He said that his 4-year-old baby had died and that his wife and family were in great distress. An investigation showed that Snyder and his family had started to drive from Iowa to California. They reached Salt Lake penniless about ten days ago and started to live in a tent near the Warm springs. Then Mrs. Snyder became ill and it was necessary to move into an abandoned house back of St. Mark's hospital.

The woman was confined. She had no fire and no attention of the right sort. The child was buried yesterday. The father, in the meanwhile, had secured a job shoveling coal for the Rio Grande Western railway. He will not be paid until Dec. 15, and on the death of the child he turned to the Salvation Army as his only refuge. There he found friends who did what they could with their slender means.

Carries 50 Per Cent. Colonel Milner and his associates have a big slice of the good things there and have secured twenty-one claims on iron mountain, which contains as fine a product and in as enormous quantities as anything in the entire world. There are several miles of rich magnetic and hematite iron ore. The judges crop out of the earth in places hundreds of feet high and appear on the surface for 500 and 1,000 feet in width.

A NEW HOTEL. Don Porter has stood manfully behind "The Kenyon" since its opening, a year ago, pouring out money like water to make it the best. But Mr. Porter was an hotel man previous to this successful venture, which is now a delightful reminiscence that will "point a moral and adorn a tale, and the project of a great pleasure in organizing and analyzing things, and pointing out how each EFFECT naturally grows from appropriate CAUSE.

IRON COUNTY'S BOOM

Army of Iron and Coal Experts on the Scene. BRIGHT FUTURE AHEAD LOCAL CAPITALISTS INTERESTED IN DEVELOPMENTS.

Colonel Milner, Who Is Part Owner of Twenty-one Iron Claims, Returns From Cedar City—Figures That He Has Five Millions In Sight—Railroad Certain.

A surprising amount of interest is shown in Cedar City by local investors and extensive investigations are going on in regard to the coke, coal and iron resources of that country. L. B. Rogers, who has been more or less familiar with the wealth of the country for years past, said last evening:

"The development of the Cedar City country is no poor man's proposition. It would be folly for any man or company of men to dream of going in there without from seven to ten millions of capital. To run business there successfully would mean smelters, iron foundries and a railroad to the coast. This means money and lots of it. But it is coming. Steel rails are being imported from abroad now, in spite of $2.84 a ton tariff, because the mills in this country cannot supply the demand. This condition will naturally force the development of the iron industry of the west and there is no better place anywhere than Cedar City."

Those in touch with the London syndicate being organized to push this great enterprise say that everything is moving satisfactorily, but will give out none of the plans or details.

Army of Experts. Colonel S. B. Milner, who has been on the ground during the past week, says the country about Cedar City is alive with iron and coal experts representing outside capital. There are several men in to tie up the iron and coal lands. At the same time, prospectors are scouring the country, locating the best places to find any coal or iron. The experts who have gone in the coal, says, are careful to keep their identity concealed and none of the parties are divulging the location of their property. There are several parties from Denver and a contingent from Cripple Creek has been conducting a series of examinations. It is known that the Colorado Iron & Fuel corporation has O. Land, one of the corporation's consulting engineers, on the ground, and only a short time ago Mr. Hills, that company's chief geologist, was here to examine further the conditions there. Mr. Hills returned to Denver and it is presumed that his report was so satisfactory that the company decided to proceed further and dispatched Mr. Ladd to the scene again, his mission here being to secure more lands.

Secured Good Claims. Colonel Milner and his associates have a big slice of the good things there and have secured twenty-one claims on iron mountain, which contains as fine a product and in as enormous quantities as anything in the entire world. There are several miles of rich magnetic and hematite iron ore. The judges crop out of the earth in places hundreds of feet high and appear on the surface for 500 and 1,000 feet in width.

The extent of the great deposits, Colonel Milner asserts, is almost beyond calculation. On the claims owned by himself and his associates he estimates there is enough iron ore in sight to cover one full claim to a depth of 200 feet with solid ore, which he asserts, on a rough estimate would represent 22,000,000 tons.

This vast amount would represent a tonnage of pure iron, after being smelted, of at least one-half that. The ore, it is said, will run about 20 per cent iron, and is of a quality superior to many iron companies in the east, that of paying a royalty of a certain amount per ton, usually from 20 to 25 cents a ton on the ore, and the iron country product appears, the ore in sight would represent a value of at least $5,000,000.

Thomas Taylor's claims, which are adjoining Colonel Milner's property, are being worked by the Englishmen. It is said, were bought by the Englishmen for $400,000. It will mean an immense undertaking.

Colonel Milner thinks Iron county is rich in iron. In one of the most important sections of the western states. He predicts that the establishment of great iron smelters and rolling mills there will eventually make it a great manufacturing as well as a railroad center somewhere near Cedar City. With the probability that the Utah & Pacific will be completed to the Rio Grande Western extension, an outlet will certainly be made. A city will grow up there that will become related to Salt Lake what Pueblo is to Denver.
