

WORKING FOR A SETTLEMENT

Mining Engineers to Follow Surveyors in Daly-West-Quincy.

PROBLEM THEY ARE TO SOLVE

EVERYTHING POINTS TO A CONSOLIDATION OF THE MINES.

According to latest advices, a most earnest effort is being made to ward off litigation...

While these conditions may not exist as strongly as either company would like, the opinion is expressed that both sides realize that a long drawn out fight might result...

It is said both companies are therefore determined that no litigation shall ensue if anything like a reasonable compromise can be effected.

PARK CITY MINES.

Strikes in Several Properties—The Week's Ore Shipments.

At the delinquent sale of Creole stock Wednesday, about 6,000 shares went under the hammer.

A. J. Mayne, the zinc operator, went to Iola, Kan., the first of the week, where he has other zinc interests.

An even trade of a block of 100 shares of Anchor stock was made on the streets Thursday for a similar block of Comstock.

A strike of another body of rich ore is reported in the Quincy, and it is said that four shifts work has failed to go through it.

The surveyors completed their work at the Quincy yesterday and went back to the city. They will return to the Park shortly and complete their labors—the survey of the Daly-West.

We understand some important changes have been made in the working force at the Washash. Richard Campbell has been assigned as superintendent and J. Gillette has been installed as general foreman.

Following are the shipments of ore from the Mackintosh sampler for the past week:

NEW ENGLAND COPPER CO.

How This Bingham Concern Is Locked Upon in Boston.

In answer to inquiries of a correspondent, the Boston News Bureau has the following to say of an eastern company operating in Bingham.

"The New England Copper Mining company is owned by what is called the 'beef' crowd, composed principally of market people. It is capitalized for $1,000,000 par of shares, $1. This stock was issued at $20, 25 and $1 per share.

"The property of the company adjoins the Utah Consolidated, and is composed of seven claims, only one of which is being worked. The property appears to have been well developed.

NEW EPISCOPAL PRELATES.

King of England Intuses New Blood Into Established Churches.

King Edward is introducing an altogether new element into the British episcopacy. His nominations to the sees of London and of Worcester are decidedly refreshing.

The new bishop of London, and Dr. Gore, who has just been appointed bishop of Worcester, are men who have made up their minds to live in touch with their diocese.

Like the Right Rev. Dr. Corrigan, who when he succeeded Cardinal McCloskey as archbishop of New York, and carriage to his suburban country residence, disregarding conventionalities, he may frequently be seen driving a penny omnibus, and devotes the money saved by the abandonment of the stables maintained by his predecessors to various useful enterprises of a philanthropic and charitable character.

The old-fashioned bishops look askance at King Edward's new appointments, and denounce them as socialists. But there is no doubt that such men as the new bishops of London and Worcester are more likely to put fresh life and vigor into the Church of England and to remain in touch with the masses of people than the old-fashioned bishops, who on promotion to the episcopate, are more likely to be indispensable to the dignity of their office to environ themselves with an amount of pomp and ceremony that practically kept their clergy and the people alienated as they were so august personages altogether to take any interest in the minor details of everyday life.

It is only fair to add that the present Archbishop of Canterbury is a member of the same type as the bishops of London and of Worcester, that in spite of his 80 years of age he travels more frequently by train third-class, with the workmen, than first-class with the well-to-do, and is most blunt and outspoken in his harked of all useless fuss, feathers, tummy and expense.

Until recently it has been the practice to recruit the bishop's bench in the house of lords from university dons, their achievements in the world of letters being regarded as the principal consideration in their selection. King Edward, however, has apparently made up his mind that an altogether different class of prelates is required, and that skill in the administration of popular parishes is a more favorable claim to episcopal promotion than the editing of some Greek or Hebrew lexicon or the publication of some history of the church.

A Night Alarm.

Worse than an alarm of fire at night is the brassy cough of croup, which sounds like the children's death knell, and which means death unless something is done quickly. Foley's Honey and Tar never fails to give instant relief and quickly cures the worst forms of croup.

Oh, yes, sir, I remember now, I read of Associated Press men walking, followed by many curious eyes, and often by a crowd of children.

The young lady who is related to Madame Wu is quite attractive. She has a slender, girlish figure, wears black divided skirts, with a little jacket of magenta silk. Her black hair, which is abundantly treated with pomatum, is parted in a sort of V-shape on the crown and combed back into a long braid that has magenta silk cord braided into the end of it.

Blunders of Colored Man. Arthur Simmons, the colored sentinel at the door of the president's reception room, is quite a character. He has occupied this place for twenty years, during which time he has managed to accumulate about the largest stock of big words obtainable. Some time ago a representative of the Associated Press called to see the secretary. Arthur had forgotten him and, therefore, interrogated the caller as to his mission within. In reply, the newspaper man stated that he was from the Associated Press, whereupon Arthur's face brightened up, as he ejaculated: "Oh, yes, sir, I remember now, I read of Associated Press men walking, and thinks it de finest paper in de United States. Jais' walk right in."

The commissioner of education doubts has good reason for thinking that, in addition to his ordinary work, he is regarded by many as a sort of federal bureau of general information. More strange, erratic and ludicrous lectures has good reason for thinking that, in addition to his ordinary work, he is regarded by many as a sort of federal bureau of general information.

At the Chinese Embassy. Madame Wu will give a dinner next Monday. The Chinese hostess is progressing finely in her English. She has learned to carry on quite a conversation, and her "at homes," instead of being the stiff and formal gatherings of the past, are now more pleasant in every way. They are not so crowded with strangers, who came in just to see what manner of woman she is, for almost everybody in Washington has seen her so frequently that curiosity is entirely shaken. When Madame Wu was in China last summer she collected a great many beautiful articles for her home here, among which were priceless and wonderfully wrought silver plates. These have all been arranged in the ball room and her Friday afternoon callers are welcome to meet the young ladies who have come from China with their silverware present at her Friday afternoon "at homes." They are kept strictly in the background, although residents in the neighborhood often see them out walking, followed by many curious eyes, and often by a crowd of children.

MEN WHO SERVE THE NATION

GOSSIP OF WESTERNERS WHO ARE AT THE CAPITAL.

(Special Correspondence.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—Senator W. A. Clark of Montana continues to be a mystery to Washington, because he keeps everybody guessing as to his movements with regard to house-building. Just because he bought one of the most desirable and costly building lots on Dupont circle and tore down the last of the most elegant mansions there, people of Washington seem to think the multi-millionaire had not treated them fairly by not at once starting to erect a palace near enough to rival the one building for Thomas F. Walsh and proceed to make merry with a housewarming by bringing home a bride to reside over his magnificent home.

Senator Clark doesn't show the least disposition for display or any vulgarity of the newly rich whatever. His $5,000 automobile is creating a great deal of interest, but it is nothing more than any man of his means would buy. In every way he is the opposite of Thomas F. Walsh.

SETTLED AT LAST!

A Cace Aaron Burr Began, Eighty-seven Years Ago Just Ended.

New York.—After eighty-seven years of litigation, during which the valuation of a piece of property located at the corner of One Hundred and Thirtieth street and what was formerly the old Bloomingdale road, and is now Broadway, increased in value from $250 to $150,000, a judgment was rendered in the supreme court Friday which sets the title of the plot free and clear, and establishes the general tone of the which, for all these years, has been a matter of speculation. When the case first came to the notice of the courts Burr was retained, and a few days later his bill for $4 fees, which appeared as a part of the original court records, is now in possession of Harold Swain of 82 Liberty street, attorney for the City Real Estate company, whose ownership of the land was determined by the supreme court decision.

According to papers in Mr. Swain's possession, the property, which consists of a plot 3x100 feet in dimensions, was originally owned by William Callen, whose family was well known during revolutionary times. Callen came into possession of the property as a legacy from a British uncle, who had obtained it through a royal grant, and he died in 1814, leaving the land, Mr. Callen on Jan. 24, 1814, to his son, Marks for $250, part of which was to be paid in wampum.

Unfortunately there was no office during Mr. Callen's time where the sale could be recorded, else there would have been no litigation, for if the keen eye of an employee of the register's office today had glanced through the deed the error would have been detected. Mr. Callen had given an incorrect description of the property he sold, and instead of conveying the lot he owned at the corner, he had sold one-half of it, and one-half of the plot to it, and to which he had absolutely no claim. The error was not discovered at the time nor was it detected thirty years ago when the property was again changed hands, becoming part of the estate of Alfred Lyon, but twenty-five years later, when Mr. Lyon died and his widow, Hannah, disposed of the land to Louis B. Belder, accepting a mortgage of $25,000, the mistake became known.

The mortgage was to run for one year, and the time expired in 1847. Lyon was to redeem it and receive the title of her property.

The mortgage ran for four years, during which time Mrs. Belder had seen every lawyer in the city, but receiving it, had had the title searched and learned, to her surprise, that Mrs. Lyon was not the owner of all the land. Mrs. Belder was advised to investigate, and she had her attorney, the late William B. Hornbloom, begin a rigid search for the heirs of every one of the communications she purchased the plot thirty years before.

After a chase of thirteen years Mr. Hornbloom located some of Mr. Callen's heirs in Kentucky, and others in Louisville, Ky. It was by the merest accident that he discovered them.

In 1855 he instituted a suit for the redemption of the deed to the property, so that title to the original plot, which Mr. Callen owned, might be clear, so that Mrs. Lyon could assert her ownership through the will of her husband.

A judgment was given Mrs. Lyon reforming the deed, but when she went to Mrs. Belder and informed her of the result, Mrs. Belder refused to reconsider the conditions set forth in the mortgage, and later, in the court of appeals, it was decided that Mrs. Belder was entitled to a clear title to the property. In the meantime Mrs. Lyon died, and her son, Andrew Shields, 70 years old, laid claim to the land.

Mrs. Belder, desiring to rid herself of the troublesome tenant, had discovered the deed she had obtained to a real estate agent, and he, in turn, had sold his interest to the Title Guarantee & Trust company.

The latter concern later disposed of the land to the City Real Estate company, which found itself confronted with the claim of Mr. Shields, and to settle which Mr. Callen brought suit against all the persons interested in the various transactions relating to the property from 1814 to the present time. After this suit had been continued for several years a decision was handed down in the supreme court, Friday which gave the title of the land to the City Real Estate company.

WALL STREET IS PAYING EUROPE

Shipments of Gold From New York to Paris.

ANSWER TO HOLLAND'S NOTE

DISAPPOINTING* TO EUROPEAN SPECULATORS.

London, Feb. 9.—The activity on the stock exchange continues, and with the prospect of easy money for a considerable time to come there is a reasonable prospect of prices going higher, in spite of the failure of the peace overtures and the lack of any considerable military success in South Africa.

The greatest interest still centers in Kaffirs, in which the public is now dealing with almost all its ante bellum enthusiasm. There were strong evidences of professional manipulation in the way successive groups of shares are lifted to sustain the general market level.

American securities more than held their own, in spite of the postponement of the decision in the matter of the Northern Securities company. As a matter of fact, there has been a marked improvement in Illinois Central and in D. & R. G. Shipments of gold from New York to Paris are regarded as a favorable factor, indicating that Wall street is repaying Europe for the securities purchased last week, and American houses were further strengthened by the sale here of large quantities of American railway securities, consequently if the decision in the Northern Securities is favorable, there is plenty of prospect of a boom in Americans in the near future.

Berlin, Feb. 9.—Notwithstanding the fact that the bourse was greatly disappointed at Great Britain's answer to the Dutch note, the general tone of the market during the week remained firm. Special interest during the week was attached to bank stocks.

The reduction in the rate of discount by the Bank of England awakened the expectation that the reichsbank would reduce its rate of discount forthwith. Coal shares receded generally during the week, upon the increasing slowness of sales. Iron remained firm. The reports from the iron trade continue to go better, but those from the hardware trade are unsatisfactory. Electrical shares were held upon during the week, while those of the transportation companies rose slightly.

NO DAMAGES FOR RADCLIFFE State Asserts His Actions Provoked the Acting.

Denver, Feb. 9.—It is announced that Attorney General Post has decided that William Radcliffe, who has just claimed against the state of Colorado or the government of the United States for the destruction of his property at Grand Mesa makes by fire, and that Governor Orman will reply to this effect to the communication from Secretary of State Hay on the subject.

The attorney general's report on the incendiarism at Grand Mesa lake, which was forwarded to Secretary Hay, details the causes of the fire, and the responsibility of the burning of Radcliffe's property, but failed to apprehend the guilty parties. Secretary Hay will be told that the state is very sorry for Radcliffe's loss but that it is all it can say in extenuation.

It is said that shortly after the ambassador, Lord Pauncefote, press Radcliffe's claim for $5,000 damages after receiving the communication from Secretary of State Hay on the subject.
