NATIONAL IRRIGATION A FACT.

THE ARID AND THE SEMI-ARID states of the west will be pardoned if they join hands and indulge in a little impromptu celebration this morning. President Roosevelt's signature is all that is needed to make the national irrigation bill a law. The views of the executive on this subject are so well known that no friend of the measure need feel a moment's uneasiness. He will affix his signature to it as soon as it reaches him.

To Senators Rawlins and Kearns, both of whom worked hard to secure favorable consideration of the bill in the upper house of congress, and to Congressman Sutherland, whose efforts were unceasing in the body of national lawmakers with which he is affiliated, the thanks of all the people of Utah are due. No measure that has passed congress in many a session can result in so much good to so many people. And this, let it be understood, is only the beginning.

The bill which is soon to become a law provides that the money derived from the sale of public lands in the arid and semi-arid states shall go into a fund for the building and maintenance of reservoirs and other irrigation works. It will also be used in completing surveys for the purpose of ascertaining the amount and character of the land which can most easily be made productive through irrigation. There is and there must be no hint of jobbery or corruption about the measure. It is a simple, business proposition, one that will result in the building of homes and the tilling of farms in territory which is now barren.

It has been estimated that the public lands now sold bring in an aggregate of about $2,000,000 yearly. Instead of being placed in the treasury to be used for all purposes, this money is now to be devoted solely to irrigation under government supervision. The sum will not be enough to carry into effect all the great plans of those who are interested in irrigation, but it will furnish means sufficient to make a good beginning. Through a judicious expenditure of this amount yearly the feasibility of national irrigation will be demonstrated so clearly that no further objection to it can be offered.

And the best feature of it all is that not a dollar of public money will be diverted from channels to which it properly belongs. Every cent will be returned to the treasury with interest as fast as the land which is brought under irrigation is sold. The passage of the act should bring to the west a new and a lasting prosperity. Rich mines are great factors in a country's wealth, but it must be remembered that mines cannot last forever. Every pound of ore taken out is a draft on the capital; it is as a man checking against his bank deposit without replenishing his balance.

Agricultural prosperity is a different matter. Once given an impetus, it goes on and on, increasing yearly and adding more and more bounteously to the wealth and the well-being of the world. National irrigation will make the west wealthier, but it will also make the east and the south and the north wealthier because it will open a new market for their products.

Congress hasn't done so good a day's work at this session as it did yesterday.

THE COUNCIL'S OPPORTUNITY.

THE SALT LAKE CITY COUNCIL should not hesitate one moment about selling the old city hall corner to the Young Men's Christian association for $27,500. In accepting the proposition the organization will shortly make the council will do the best stroke of business it has accomplished since taking charge of city affairs. As a matter of fact, the city will be the gainer by exactly $27,500, for it could easily afford to give the association the property. The donation would be a fine example of good citizenship, proper public spirit and excellent business judgment.

No power for good in Salt Lake approaches the work of the Young Men's Christian association. It makes no distinctions of race, color, politics or creed. It goes out into the highways and byways, into the thoroughfares of vice and crime; it enters the cottages and the mansions, and it induces the young men to come in. As an influence for better character building, for the turning of young men from unwholesome to wholesome forms of amusement, recreation and study, the Young Men's Christian association has no equal.

A man who has had much experience in the reclamation of young men has said that if he had to choose between a Y. M. C. A. and a police force as a reformative agent, he would take the former unhesitatingly and unquestioningly. A long and constantly growing record is kept in the local rooms of boys and men for whom positions have been found, of wanderers sent home, of weak characters braced and strengthened and rebuilt.

George Foster Peabody, the well known New York philanthropist, has agreed to give $27,500 with which to purchase a lot on which to build a structure exclusively for Y. M. C. A. purposes, provided local friends of the organization will raise $50,000 for the building. It should be comparatively easy to secure the necessary funds. Every resident of Salt Lake can afford to give something to this cause. Some citizens who have been more liberally blessed with wealth than others, have here an opportunity for practical philanthropy that may not come to them soon again. Surely no money could be better employed than in saving young men. The returns, when viewed from the practical commercial standpoint, are greater than can be found in any other investment. When an instinctive criminal is transformed into a useful citizen, the whole community is the gainer. That is what the Y. M. C. A. is doing in Salt Lake; that is why it should receive the cordial support of all the people.

The council can well afford to sell the lot desired for the price offered. It can hardly afford to do anything else. A Y. M. C. A. building on the old city hall corner will not only improve the appearance of the city, but it will improve the morals of the city. For the council to let the Y. M. C. A. have the property is like taking money out of one pocket and placing it in another.

WOMEN RESENT LIBEL.

A SHORT TIME AGO in a Chicago theatre, during a matinee performance at which the audience was composed largely of women, one of the stars, in responding to a question, said: "A miracle, indeed; a constant woman!" Then the spectators hissed loudly and long. It was several minutes before the performance was permitted to proceed, and the production was irretrievably ruined. Astonishment has been expressed that any resentment should have been displayed by the audience.

And, come to think of it, it is rather astonishing that a sex that has been consistently slandered by actor-folk should have the courage to make a row about it. However, it is better late than never. Almost since the stage's beginning, women have been held up to scorn and ridicule by those who professed to portray life as it is. For years and years the women have been submitted uncomplainingly. At last they have been goaded into a protest, and right-thinking people will thoroughly endorse their position.

Suppose an actor should proclaim from the center of the stage that patriotic American citizens are so rare that the finding of one partakes in a large measure of the miraculous. Does anybody doubt that he would be driven at once into disgraceful retirement? And yet the foulest slanders of God's first and best gift to man are passed with smiles, sometimes deprecatory, but oftener approving. It is not true that the constant woman is a miracle. She can be found in every community without taking the trouble to look for her.

Patient, self-sacrificing, self-effacing, she goes through life doing the work at hand uncomplainingly, cheerily, trustfully. The average woman is so far ahead of the average man in constancy that a comparison cannot be instituted. The Chicago women were right when they entered their protest. It is to be hoped that their example will prove contagious. The time has come to stop stage libels. Even if they were true they could serve no good purpose. Reeking, as they do, with falsehood, they are working irreparable injury to the young men and the young women of the land.

"A miracle, indeed; a constant woman!" There is no wit, no sparkle, no commendable feature in the words. The sentence is the bark of a cynic who has forgotten the mother who bore him, the sisters who grew up with him, the wife who gave her life and her happiness into his keeping. If women all over the country will follow the path their Chicago sisters have blazed, the stage will be elevated more rationally than through any other possible method.

Several prominent opponents of the administration's Philippine policy have joined in a petition asking that a congressional committee visit the islands for the purpose of ascertaining the exact conditions there. Such a committee would be about as useful as a fifth leg to a dog. Friends of the administration would select the committee and they would be very sure that it contained no investigators who would really investigate.

The Union Pacific officials who got all ready for train robbers have just cause for complaint. The robbers were so unkind as not to come when they were expected. Somehow train robbers and other robbers are terribly lacking in politeness. They never seem to come when they are wanted.

Senator Kearns says he will support the administration on the question of Cuban reciprocity so far as is consistent with the duty he owes to Utah. Will somebody now please have a revelation and let us know exactly how the senator is going to vote?

Many boys not more than 12 years old are among the looters who have surrendered. Are not the big British troops entitled to unstinted praise, especially in view of the fact that they conquered these youngsters in less than three years?

Mark Twain has announced his retirement from the lecture platform. The news will cause widespread regret, not only among those who have heard this genial dispenser of sunshine, but among the thousands who had hoped to hear him.

King Edward has been holding a special court to receive felicitations on the restoration of peace in South Africa. It is a good thing Edward has something left to hold. Nearly everything he had has been given to the Boers.

It is reported from New York that the king of Italy has been buying coal lands in West Virginia. How strange it is that some people always go around looking for trouble.

Senator Kearns has instructed the president to hurry up with the opening of the Uintah reservation country. That ought to fetch the desired and very necessary funds. Every resident of Salt Lake can afford to give something to this cause. Some citizens who have been more liberally blessed with wealth than others, have here an SNOW'S DIAMONDS. (New York Sun.) George A. Snow of Salt Lake City, who last week made trouble for the notorious "Fat" Masters and a fellow gambler, was the most interesting looking personage that the bounding west had contributed to the world's history in many months. Mr. Snow's specialty is diamonds and he prefers to wear them in bulk.

Attached to his watch chain he carries a huge letter S in sparkles. The eye is attracted to that ornament as surely as the magnet to steel. At a flash from it the glare of the electric lights pales. It is nearly three inches long and half as wide and after a minute's contemplation of it the onlooker needs an eyeshade.

Mr. Snow's tie is bordered with a headlight a few sizes smaller than a small hand mirror, but nobody minds that when the starry S is shining. On his fingers gleam more sparklers of large size.

Mr. Snow himself is large and in any assembly he is exceedingly conspicuous. He puzzled the central office detectives a great deal. He was not anxious to tell much about himself, and police opinion was divided as to whether he was a successful miner of sporting tastes or a detective from a western town who had borrowed extensively from loan establishments to enable him to make what, in police circles, is known as a front.
