

THREE DEATHS IN ONE FAMILY

Grim Reaper's Visit to the Home of the Allens.

FORMER COUNCILMAN DIES

PRECEDED WITHIN FEW DAYS BY WIFE AND DAUGHTER.

John Allen, a prominent business man and formerly a councilman, died at his home, 48 Jeremy street, yesterday morning as the result of a malignant attack of pneumonia. His wife was buried the day previous, having died Monday of peritonitis. Mrs. Eliza Benyon, a daughter-in-law of the deceased, who lived in the immediate neighborhood of the Allen home, died one week before the death of his wife, after six weeks' illness of erysipelas.

John Allen.

Ten weeks ago Mr. Allen was declared by his physician to be the victim of a dangerous case of pneumonia and he was confined to his bed since that time. He became decidedly worse a few days ago and expired yesterday morning.

Wife Died Monday. Mrs. Harriet Allen, his wife, died Monday after a struggle of more than a year's duration with a complicated case of peritonitis. Her death weighed heavily on the mind of the other patient and it is believed that the event wrought so disastrously on him that it hastened his own end.

On Monday, a week before the death of Mrs. Allen, Mrs. Eliza Benyon, a daughter-in-law of the couple, died after a week's illness of pneumonia. Before that disease terminated abruptly and fatally. She was buried the following Wednesday, four days before the death of Mrs. Allen, business, but returned to this city after one year.

He was elected a member of the city council from the second precinct in that capacity for four years. During his term as councilman he gained the appellation of "Honest John," which clung to him until his death. He was widely known and respected throughout the city by those of his own political affiliations and by the opposition.

Funeral services will be held at the Twenty-fourth ward meeting house Sunday at 12 o'clock.

Amusements.

The Christmas matinee is recognized in the theatrical profession as a performance intended especially for the floating population of the town where the company happens to be playing. The idea is that a visit to the theatre keeps such persons from falling into the "blues" when they think of Christmas gone by. If this is all the case, there was good cheer to spare among the traveling men, the bachelors and others who attended "Foxy Quiller" yesterday afternoon in lieu of a Christmas dinner with the folks at home. It is as good as a hearty meal, but even better afterwards as an aid to digestion.

"Foxy Quiller" is a comic opera by De Koven and Smith, and in the hands of a competent company, headed by Richard Tawney, proves a delightful source of amusement. Its music is happily medium between heavy and light, but not so light as any time that the musicians escape a few tremors when playing it at sight. It is real De Kovenish. Indeed, there are occasions when you fancy this score might be the first-born of Robin Hood's marriage to Maid Marian. It is not necessary to say that the opera contains some surpassing gems. "The Peddler's Song" is foremost among these and, by the way, is excellently rendered.

The opera mostly concerns one Foxy Quiller, a blundering, conceited old sleuth, whose efforts to recover a fortune stolen from a fisherman by a Japanese dwarf (Adolph Zink) lead him into all sorts of adventures and keep the fun going at a furious rate. Golden, who was last seen in "Old Jed Crowdy," has a natural method of causing laughter. Having seen him only in rural comedy, it might be difficult to associate him with comic opera, but opera is really his old field. He made a great success in "The Merry Widow" as the helper in the first production of "Evangeline," while Henry Dixey—or was it Nat Goodwin?—played the front legs. Golden is funny, and he has a well-fertilized would-be detective part that fits him nicely. Adolph Zink, whose history goes back to the days he was the comedian of the famous Lilliputians, is a great favorite, mainly on account of his shape and the antics which the same makes possible for him to go through. He sings, dances, and performs contortions in his four feet of hide, and all but brings down the house. Harry Leone, the Turkish tenor, and Melville Collins are other worthy members of the male side. The soprano, Carlotta Gilman, is a very satisfactory Cornelia girl. Her voice is true and of good range. Miss Hamlin makes a cute appearance as the sailor's sweetheart. The chorus is large and well trained, selected, the chances are, for voice rather than beauty of feature.

In addition to the other good things sayable about "Foxy Quiller," it is a well-constructed and well-staged play among the prettiest ever shown here and the three stage settings are beautiful.

So great was the crowd that witnessed "A Little Outcast" at the Grand last night that even the aisles were packed and standing room was at a premium. The audience was liberal and even generous with its applause. The play, which was presented by the "A Little Outcast" troupe, showed no favorites in the greetings. Miss May Stockton, as Bob, in the title role, wins the audience from the start, with honors about equally divided with Joseph Troxler as Paul Weston, the unfortunate who suffers for the sins of others. "Thoma Quinne, the miser," is a difficult role, but the audience gave him.

"A Little Outcast" continues until Saturday night, with matinees each afternoon. The sale for Frank Daniels' engagement at the Salt Lake theatre in "Miss Simplicity" will begin today.

He said the value of the stock in the Idaho store is between $200 and $300, and will be disposed of in accordance with the law and the proceeds pro-rated among the creditors.

DEPUTY SHERIFF.—Deputy Sheriff Hinkman of Milford came to the city yesterday and took back with him Mrs. William Hinkman, who was charged with being absconding debtors from Milford. The deputy sheriff said he would not reach the city until the debt was construed by the authorities there as an attempt to leave that jurisdiction with a debt, which is a semi-criminal offense.

SANTA'S POOR CHILDREN

Two Hundred Tots Made Happy at St. Mark's School House.

FINE GIFTS FOR THEM ALL

EFFORTS OF SALVATION ARMY CROWNED WITH SUCCESS.

A couple of hundred juvenile faces beamed radiantly around a Christmas tree last night at the old St. Mark's school house, while St. Nicholas crawled through the chimney and greeted each youngster with a shower of gifts, ranging in importance from red-top boots to dolls and poggons. The 200 looked like 400 as they swarmed around the old man and clamored for the bushels of good things he brought with him. When finally his bags were empty, the good-natured mob turned loose, at Santa's request, on the Christmas tree, and if there was a sprig left to bear witness to the erstwhile existence of that botanical object, the janitor will find it when he sweeps out this morning.

This jubilee, given by the Salvation Army—may it be everlasting—to the poorest children it was possible to find in Salt Lake. Between the hours of 7 and 8 there was a continual flow ofurchins climbing the stairs to the large room in which the celebration was about to begin. Many were accompanied by fathers or mothers, but the great majority were without such escorts. All were attired in their best garments, but "best" doesn't mean much here. The girl who owned any sort of wrap beside the mere shoddy covering of the boys had the envy of the party, while the boys had on worn-out pieces of leather that answer for shoes, and the rest of their apparel was correspondingly scant.

Good Gifts For the Tots. But these were not obstacles to the merriment. The way the bunch ofurchins turned in for a good time was a sight to gladden the eye. The evening started off with a hymn, led by one of the Salvation girls, and every one of the 200 tiny voices chimed in, the chorus swelling louder at each verse. "Glorious to be named," rang out as though each one of them was heart and soul with the sentiment—both for the Saviour and Santa Claus. A prayer followed, and then a dozen members of the Junior Salvation Army sang the "Jolly St. Nick," "Merry Christmas Bells," "The Star of the East," "The Shepherds of the Fields," and so on, until the entire story had been told over and over in different ways.

After that there were recitations by Willie, Richard, Archie, Eugene, Freddie, George and Joel, not forgetting the "Merry Christmas Bells," "The Star of the East," "The Shepherds of the Fields," and so on, until the entire story had been told over and over in different ways. After that there were recitations by Willie, Richard, Archie, Eugene, Freddie, George and Joel, not forgetting the "Merry Christmas Bells," "The Star of the East," "The Shepherds of the Fields," and so on, until the entire story had been told over and over in different ways.

After a few more selections by the tots a mysterious rattle was heard in the chimney, and presently a voice called down: "Is this the Salvation Army?" The "Santa" that went up shook the rafters. The next instant old Santa himself crawled down, and his hurrahs and screams of delight made his way to the corner of the room, where about 800 articles calculated to tickle the child's fancy were piled. How the old man ever managed to shuffle across the room after the hugging he got will remain a mystery.

Santa Claus Arrives. The "Santa" that went up shook the rafters. How the old man ever managed to shuffle across the room after the hugging he got will remain a mystery.

Santa suffered the little children to come unto him, and in the orderly riot which followed each one was sent away with three or four gifts, besides enough candy and nuts and popcorn to last an hour. Captain Wood and his associates labored many days for the success of the poor child's Christmas, and had not a satisfaction of seeing their greatest illusion realized. The upstairs of the schoolhouse had been appropriately decorated to carry out the Christmas illusion. In one corner a board stall had been built and in the manger, surrounded by hay, lay a doll, emblematic of the birth of Christ.

The two Christmas trees had been beautifully decorated by the army lassies, and when the children got their first glimpse of the sight their eyes almost popped out. It was a grand evening for the poor children. Rock Springs coal. 'Phone 508. Burton Coal & Lumber Co., 60 W. 2nd So. St.
