

RESUMPTION AT THE MAMMOTH Differences Between Smelter and Managements Being Adjusted. CONTRACT EXPIRES IN MONTH AND SEVERAL CONCERNS WILL BID FOR THE ORE.

After a close-down lasting several months and during which time no ore from the mine has been marketed other than that taken out by a few leasers, there is now every prospect of early resumption at the Mammoth, one of the biggest mines of the Tintic district. Manager McIntyre ordered the mine closed because he was not satisfied with the settlements he was receiving under his contract with the American Smelting & Refining company, claiming a large sum of money had been lost by a difference in the construction put upon certain features of the contract, as compared with the way he had declared at the time that the American company would have to pay him the money due a great many thousands of dollars more than the contract provided for the Mammoth and, because the settlement did not appear to be in sight, he shut the mine down pending the expiration of the existing contract.

There are many places in the mining regions of the world where such systematic exploration is justifiable, but the great risk which is a natural accompaniment of such undertaking deters the cautious investor from engaging in an enterprise the outcome of which is so uncertain, but there are frequent examples of satisfactory results from just this sort of thing, and so in any country or district where the leasing system is followed to any extent, it is not surprising to find a mine with nothing in sight, and explore for new bodies of ore.

GEORGIA GOLD MINES. Mining Men Leasing, Bonding and Buying Properties in State Named.

It seems quite natural that the gold fields of northern Georgia should again revive the spirit of enterprising miners and capitalists, says the Mining World. The majority of the forty miners who went to California were Georgians. Georgia is a gold-bearing state, and with the modern machinery and cheap methods of extracting the metal from low-grade refractory ore is sure to become in the future a large producer of the precious metal.

WILL OPEN MINES. Building of New Line From Denver to Help the Miner.

Concerning the benefits that will accrue to mining from the building of the Denver, Northwestern & Pacific road from Denver west to Salt Lake, Ore., the Denver, Northwestern & Pacific railroad, now building from this city to Salt Lake, on the other side of the range, will open a country of vast mineral wealth which has been hitherto inaccessible, by reason of lack of transportation. There are mines of gold, silver, iron, lead and copper, coal and granite along its route, both in Utah and Colorado, a mine of no doubt, but heretofore it has been impossible to reach the riches which nature has stored, owing to the fact that it has been impossible to get the product to market. Shipments of the highest class of ores have been made for years, but only the better grades would stand the heavy haulage to the railroads. The new route will open it to the miner.

HISTORIC LEAD MINE. Property That Once Supplied Lead For Mormon Bullets.

Long years ago the old Mormon settlers found a hill of lead where they were wont to go to get their bullets for the purpose of killing game, Indians, etc. Later on this crude way of making their bullets was possibly through the lead hill was forgotten by a majority of them, says the State Line Oracle. But a few of the old-timers from Beaver, believing that such an immense body of lead would some day prove to be valuable, proceeded to take advantage of the mining laws of the state and located the property. Instead of doing their assessment work from year to year, however, they would locate whenever it became necessary and a man who might develop the property could not gain a foothold.

TELLS OF HIS UTAH GROUND. Colorado Man Goes Home and Explains What He is Doing Here.

Tales of gold from Utah fields were told today by Francis A. Reah, who arrived during the week from the Par Value properties near the Mercur district. It was not of high values that Mr. Reah talked, for in that section more money is made from the great shoots of low-grade than the lesser seams of sensational quality.

Some less than 1,000 feet of newly opened ground to show. In the meantime the tunnel that is reaching for the wealth of the field was advanced to the 400-foot point. It is calculated by Superintendent Reah that 500 feet farther on a massive vein should be encountered. A 100-foot pipe to a depth of 500 feet will be attained. Because of the pitch of the body, about 90 feet of stopping ground will be provided. That the body will be mineral of shipping grade is indicated by the Reah by surface conditions. In his explorations below grass roots the superintendent broke out ore containing ounces in silver and $1 in gold to the ton.

Prospective work includes the sinking of a shaft on the same body. Examination made in the tunnel indicates that the shaft will pass through quartzite, porphyritic limestone and iron carbonates. Mineral conditions are not unlike those of the Park City properties, and it is anticipated by Mr. Reah that he may some day duplicate in importance the famous dividend payers of that fashionable locality. In several of the discoverable veins, the Reah that were well charged with white and yellow metals.

Secret Societies. The Washington Society. Jan. 6 being the first meeting night of the new year, the following new officers were installed by District Deputy A. G. Mahan.

Every prospecting party in Atlanta going to north Georgia to examine some gold proposition. And already nearly every ledge and lead in the Dahlonega district is either owned, leased or optioned by some person or company that means to work it for gold. Gold from Georgia mines began to be sent to the United States mint in Philadelphia in 1830. Prior to that, from 1824 to 1829, North Carolina furnished all the American gold that was found and used by the government.

nel may not be resumed until spring. It continues to discharge a great volume of water, which results to several neighboring properties. Engineering & Mining Journal: One result of the war scare is the sudden cessation of the demand for iron ore properties. It is estimated that the iron ore properties that were actively sought after only a few months ago. Lands in the vicinity of shipping on the Mesaba range, which were in great demand at high prices, do not seem now to be considered at all.
