

CELEBRATED DOG PASSES AWAY

Bullet Ends the Life of "Old Turk."

INTERESTING CAREER CLOSES

BABY WINS HIM AWAY FROM NEWSPAPER FRIENDS.

Old Turk, the dean of the newspaper dogs, is no more. A pistol ball put an end to Turk yesterday and another of Salt Lake's best characters has gone the route all flesh must go.

If Turk had been a man he would have been a high-minded gentleman, but being only a dog he was a very good dog. He had no special accomplishments, knew no tricks and saved no lives, but he drew to him human friends by the hundred and kept them.

Turk's association with the night workers on the newspapers began several years back when Turk was a young Gordon setter. Alma D. Katz, Turk's owner, was a newspaper man in Salt Lake then and Turk was introduced to the night crowd.

Turk's condition bulletined. Early in his newspaper career Turk had a misunderstanding with a huck that resulted in a broken hind leg. One of the leading surgeons of Salt Lake reduced the fracture and a sick room was fitted up in one of the newspaper offices, where Turk was nursed back to health.

Turk passed the editorial departments of the newspapers in favor of the mechanical departments about four years ago. He was actuated by two motives. One of them was that the printers were close friends of his and did less traveling about town.

Business frequently took some of his newspaper friends into a certain town saloon, and Turk made that resort a branch office for his newspaper. He was accustomed to drop in there to look on the cool ties during the hot hours.

Gets Young Woman Into Trouble. This familiarity with a saloon got a friend of Turk into trouble one day. The friend was a young woman who knew Turk in his youth.

Became a Beggar. Turk was a dog of the breed and had received certain amount of training in his youth. This he soon forgot after he got the night habit.
