SECRETARY SHAW AGAIN.

APPARENTLY SOMEBODY has told Secretary Shaw what not to talk about. Those who read the speech delivered by Mr. Shaw last Saturday night, a speech in which was fired the opening gun of the Republican campaign, will notice that Mr. Shaw let the subject of high prices severely alone.

Mr. Shaw found fault with the Democrats because they did not beg the country's pardon for declaring in favor of the free coinage of silver in 1896 and 1900 and for leaving all discussion of the financial question out of the platform.

And speaking of omissions and apologies, we venture to suggest that the Republicans should apologize for leaving a plank in favor of statehood for the territories out of their platform.

Again, the Republicans should apologize to the people for claiming credit for passing the national irrigation law, credit to which they are no more entitled than they are to credit for the capture of Nan Shan hill.

WISE YOUNG MEN.

TWO GRANDSONS of Henry G. Davis were in Chicago the other day. They also happen to be sons of Stephen R. Elkins, United States senator from West Virginia.

Somehow, this talk about former Secretary Root, as a candidate for governor of New York, saving that state for President Roosevelt, reminds us of a time when a Democrat carried New York for governor, while another Democrat, running for the presidency, lost the Empire state.

AN INTERESTING SUIT.

A MISSISSIPPI MILLIONAIRE has been made defendant in an action that should make all millionaires with marriageable daughters sit up and take notice.

In every section of the land there are millionaires with daughters of marriageable age. And wherever there are such millionaires and such daughters there also are lovers.

A Memorial Burglar Alarm.

Clara—You can't keep a dog in your new flat? Florida we had to give Fido away; but Frederick had his dear little bark put in our photograph.

of value for time spent in courting will be established. The sum may be $1 an hour or only 50 cents. That is not of very much consequence. The real question at issue is as to whether or not a man's time is wasted when he firmly clasps a young woman's hand and whispers soft nothings into her coral-like ear.

Of course the time is not wasted if a marriage follows. But is it wasted even if there is no marriage? There will be cynics who will say that in either event the time is fairly burned up. Real men, though, will insist that if any obligation is incurred in courting it is on the side of the lover, alleged or real.

AN EXCHANGE rises to express the opinion that the hottest corner in Hades has been reserved for physicians who deliberately keep a patient ill in order to extend the fee earning period. We don't pretend to expert knowledge of the geography of Hades, but we have no hesitation in saying that if there is such a corner as the one referred to it will be a very long time before it contains enough corners to make its enlargement necessary.

The average physician, and by this we mean practically all of the members of one of the most noble professions in the world, is a man who knows that if he is to succeed he must keep his reputation absolutely spotless.

Some doctors, and even that class is limited, have a habit of exaggerating the seriousness of an illness in order that the skill of the cure may seem greater. But, as a rule, there is no class of professional men so worthy of honest praise, so little deserving of blame, as the physicians. They work whenever they are called upon to work and as long as it is necessary for them to work. They cannot tell from one moment to another what they will be able to do.

Honestly, we'd rather believe there is a hot corner in Hades reserved for those who criticize the doctors unjustly than that there is one for the doctors themselves.

They are trying to make a hero out of a New Jersey doctor who went crazy while experimenting on himself with cocaine. He got so he could take several grains a day without apparent inconvenience, but in the end he lost his mind. Really, a doctor who does that is entitled to no more sympathy than the ordinary "dope fiend."

Somehow, this talk about former Secretary Root, as a candidate for governor of New York, saving that state for President Roosevelt, reminds us of a time when a Democrat carried New York for governor, while another Democrat, running for the presidency, lost the Empire state.

For our part we are perfectly willing to place the responsibility for the post-office department on the Republican party. Goodness knows there have been no such glaring examples of corruption and mismanagement under any Democratic postoffice administration.

An exchange is satisfied that what the St. Louis fair needs most is advertising. It should be remembered, however, that if people haven't the money they cannot patronize the most widely advertised show. Even advertising cannot wring blood out of a turnip.

Hark from the tombs a sound that isn't particularly doleful. Horace Boies, he who was once governor of Iowa, has declared that he will give his vote and his influence to the Democratic nominee this year.

Mrs. Maybrick, it is understood, has definitely refused to write magazine articles or to take the lecture platform. If any further proof of her innocence were needed it may be found in this decision.
