brought down to the latest practical date add to the value of this department. A description of the principal mining districts and the principal mines in each district is a feature that will be appreciated by those desiring to invest.

The drainage system of the state and the work that is being done along the lines of irrigation occupies the important place it deserves in the book. The manufacturers, commerce, agriculture, horticulture and stock raising of the state are described and explained with compact tables. In all these lines Utah makes a good showing and many of the figures will be surprising even to people living in the state.

It is perfectly natural that Judge Colborn should dwell on the climate of Utah for the reason that the book will be distributed largely in the Mississippi valley where the people are forced to endure the rigors of extreme cold in the winter, and are prostrated by the heat of summer. It would be difficult for any state in the Union to make a better showing in this respect than Utah makes by the statistics presented in this little book.

The Indian reservations, the railroads, the school system, the religion and the many attractions of the state are set forth in an attractive and instructive way. The many resorts of the state are described under this last head. The book closes with an article on Salt Lake that must be read to be fully appreciated. In brief space the city is intelligently described, and a mass of information is presented that will make the book one of value even to people living here in the city described.

Judge Colborn has been working for some months past on this book and it is but just to say that it is worthy of his efforts. It is neatly gotten up and will be widely circulated among investors and home-owners throughout the country. Utah and Salt Lake City are especially indebted to E. L. Aomax, general passenger agent of the Union Pacific, under whose auspices the book is published. It is much the best published exposition of the wealth, resources and advantages of this state.

AN UNUSUAL SUIT. A RATHER UNUSUAL SUIT is about to be instituted at Butler, Pennsylvania. It was at Butler, readers of The Herald will remember, that a terrible epidemic of typhoid fever raged last winter and during the early months of this spring. There were 2,000 cases of typhoid and a great many deaths. Now the survivors propose to sue the water company for damages, it having been shown that the epidemic was caused by impure water.

Is the company responsible? We do not pretend to a knowledge of the legal phases of the question, but morally and ethically the company is surely responsible. Would a druggist who sold drugs which he declared to be pure and which later brought disease and suffering and death on the users be liable for damages? We are inclined to think he would be responsible. The Butler water company undertook to supply the people there with pure water. That it did not do so was assuredly not the fault of the people, but of the company.

The question that will arise at the hearing will naturally be as to whether or not the corporation knew it was supplying the citizens of Butler with water that was loaded with typhoid bacilli. If it did have such knowledge it would seem to be impossible for it to escape financial as well as moral responsibility. But was it not the duty of the company to know that its water supply was pure? Can a man who ignorantly sells an article that causes disease and death escape responsibility because of his ignorance? In any event the progress of the action and its outcome will be watched and waited with considerable interest. If the verdict is against the company it will make other water companies very much more careful of their supply. And the suit will be of benefit for another reason. It will at least call the attention of the general public to the necessity for municipal ownership of municipal water supplies. In no other way can water users be sure that their interests will be carefully safeguarded.

There ought to be laws everywhere to punish idiots that playfully point pistols at people. This whether anybody is hurt or not. There is just one occasion on which it is permissible to point a pistol at another. That is when you desire to protect your own life or property or the life or property of some one dear to you. And on such occasions you are not likely to be in a playful frame of mind.

It makes Speaker Cannon very happy to know that in some lines of work men in this country receive twice as much pay as similar workers abroad. This should be a very comforting to American workers who are out of work.

While of course Senator Smoot is taking no hand in local politics it will not make him a bit peevish if the men he has selected for the various state and other offices are nominated by acclamation.

A negro fell seventy feet in New York the other day. The sidewalk was badly damaged. The negro, fortunately for himself, alighted on his head and walked away feeling first rate.

Judge Parker will be elected this year and again in 1908. Now isn't it about time for the organization of a few Henry G. Davis 1912 clubs?

A highwayman who rides a motorcycle is the latest thing in crime. Properly enough his first act was to hold up an automobile party.

Really there are more than a few Democrats left in Utah, those who went to Saltair on Thursday will cheerfully testify.

No wonder the Japanese catch the Russians napping so often. Aren't the Russians retreating before the Japs all the time?

Naturally mineralogy plays an important part in a work of this kind. People interested in this branch of industry will have no fault to find with Judge Colborn's book. Of the 118 pages, all told, thirty-seven are devoted to the mineral wealth of the state, and under this head the information is so condensed that little is left to be said. A number of valuable statistical tables
