

The present week promises more in a social way than any which has preceded it since the holiday festivities. Besides the grand opera, which will mean a total putting aside of Lenten obligations in most cases, there will be numerous small affairs for the Easter brides. Then two of the most popular women about to leave town are the guests of honor at the reception given by Mrs. and Miss Hobbs, Wednesday afternoon.

Any way, one fortunate circumstance has been overlooked. Dr. Osler, gentleman that he is, said nothing about the age of a woman.

An amusing incident is related in the letters received from the Salt Lake boys who are now in Cornell. At an annual freshmen feed the usual danger from the sophomores threatened the younger class and all sorts of expedients were resorted to in order to avoid missing the affair. One letter tells of how Clarence Bamberger, the toastmaster, in coming the corners of his classmates, rode to the scene of the spread under the false bottom of a coal wagon.

Harry Hintz, who essayed to go in a less obvious fashion, was caught and made to pay the penalty of being an underclassman. After his capture he was decorated like a Zulu chieftain and made to parade certain precincts, later attending the banquet in his novel costume. Clarence Bamberger was elected president of his class.

There is more than one girl, evidently, who can say with Virgil, "I sing arms and the man; the two have always gone well together."

A local hostess, who felt herself in that horrible state of indebtment from which there is no redemption except by means of a "series" of affairs, recently concluded the series. On the afternoon of the last day her little 6-year-old daughter was stationed in the proud position at the door to receive the guests. Among the corners there a dear friend to whom the little maiden confided: "Oh, I am so glad you came, Auntie A. This is the last one, and then mamma won't have to have any more parties for two years, and we're so glad."

It would be a safe guess to tell where the women will go to church Easter Sunday, when they have learned where the headgear will show to best advantage.

The newest things in pompadour is a toothbrush. This may sound somewhat far-fetched, but it is true. The guests at a popular cafe were more than amazed to behold a fine-looking woman with an interesting and original march in the other day with a perfectly unconscious air. She had leaned over the basin above which hung the rack with the brush and the result was a soft clinging effect. The wearer of the novelty seated herself and wondered why she was so cordially admired. Indeed, she rather resented the admiration which showed such evident glee, but she was totally at a loss to account for it. When she finally got up and had settled herself for her luncheon she looked up to speak to her mother. Instead, she shrieked: "Oh, mamma, your toothbrush is hanging in your pompadour!" It is related that she removed the offending but necessary implement and proceeded with her meal.

Judging by the care with which society events are guarded during the Lenten season, one would think that the recording angel keeps in touch with people through the society column.

There is some talk of a new bachelor's club being opened. A small and select company of the choicest bachelors of town have already taken steps toward renting a fine residence in a slightly local, and keeping house on their own account. The personalities of the party ones will shortly be known.
