

It would be enough to make a man turn in his coffin to read an obituary like that published by a little sheet to the north of us about Dr. John F. Critchlow. After a lot of the most fulsome praise which no man but a dead one could possibly stand, the sheet gives the details of some of the utter foolishness perpetrated under the name of fun on the bridal pair. It's about up to Dr. John's host of friends here to read that he gets a different kind of start here and there will give him a good one.

There wasn't another girl in Zion who could have done the stunt that the fair maiden did in the "folk song" programme given at Unity hall last Sunday night. Ranging through the Italian, French, Spanish, Norwegian and Russian tongues, she brought us home at last to at least our own words in the bewitching music of Hungary. And that the great man was pleased with her work was more than evident.

If there was any one at the Knutsford Thursday evening that thought there was a wake on somewhere they were mistaken. There wasn't a dead one among the bunch, but all the other signs were set in their proper places in the sodas. And when they came to "We're all good fellows here," there wasn't a dissenting voice.

And now at Salt Lake is to come forward in the same way for the sake of sweet charity. The institution is the ever desiring infants' home on I street and the means to be a series of Shakespearean lectures by Edgar C. Abbott, who is said to be an eminent scholar. The lectures will be given at Langerosner, the M. H. Walker home and the Frank Knox home, the dates being May 23 and 31 and June 2. The subjects will be "Othello," "Hamlet" and "Merchant of Venice."

Three of the girls of Provo (and there is no denying that Provo has a few) are winning out in the Salt Lake beauty. And there is one in Springville who holds a few strings here, too.
