

AFFIDAVITS OF LABOR LEADERS

Attorney Meyer Charged With Responsibility For Murders.

PROGRESS OF THE STRIKE

LITTLE OR NO RIOTING IN CRICAGO YESTERDAY.

Chicago, May 31.—Judge Kohlsaat today decided that the federal courts have jurisdiction over the bills for injunctions brought by the express companies against the striking teamsters.

The attorneys for the teamsters denied that the federal court has jurisdiction over such bills, basing their contention on the declaration that the express companies are not engaged in interstate commerce.

Attorney Meyer, for the Employers' association, declared that the arguments of the lawyers for the union were ridiculous, and that if the express companies were not engaged in interstate commerce, there was no interstate commerce in the United States, and on that point of law in relation to the decision made by Judge Kohlsaat this afternoon will be made tomorrow.

Shea Before Grand Jury.

President Shea of the teamsters' union appeared before the grand jury this afternoon and was questioned for two hours. He told the story of the working of the international and local teamsters' unions. When questioned as to his knowledge of a black list maintained by the express companies against the teamsters, he was unable to tell anything definite. President Shea was also asked regarding conferences between the teamsters' leaders and employers, but in this direction his evidence was unimportant. He denied any participation on the part of the labor leaders and insisted that much of the trouble that had taken place in the strike had been caused by the private detectives and other representatives of the Employers' association for the purpose of exciting sympathy among the strikers.

Some Serious Charges.

It was announced tonight that certain of the labor leaders will tomorrow present affidavits to the grand jury declaring that Attorney Meyer of the Employers' association and Chief Detective Joseph Buckmaster, who had acted for the same organization, are responsible for all the murders committed in connection with the strike. They will also endeavor to secure indictments against the chief of the Employers' Training company for importing men from other cities under false pretenses.

The strike today was contrary to general expectation, very quiet, and no rioting worthy of the name having taken place in any part of the city. There were a few fights, but in none of them was anybody seriously injured.

The only incident to the number of strikers consisted of the teamsters employed by the Weaver Coal company, who went out when ordered to make deliveries to the American Express company.

All the business districts were in the trouble reported tonight that more wagons had been sent out today than at any time since the commencement of the strike, and that they were in a position now to increase their force of drivers each day to the full limit which the police are able to furnish protection.

Plain Speaking Lawyer.

A sensation was caused in the federal court today by the quietness of E. L. Leinen, who represented three persons cited in alleged violation of strike injunctions. Without a word he said: "This is a case where war was brought into a district where no war was intended, shot at women and children and men were killing one another. It is a case where trouble was brought into a peaceful district, the residents did not want trouble. When they entered the district they were like that the residents will not have to answer for violating an injunction."

"We have nothing to do with your quarrel, we are not union people. A boy is in a dangerous condition in the hospital. When his companions went to a soldierman to look the driver they were themselves arrested. I have thirty witnesses and will have them ready for examination tomorrow morning."

"Have them ready tomorrow," said the court, "preemptorily suspending consideration of the matter until then."

When brave men stand together, backed by patriotic womanhood, their might makes right. "THE FATE OF A CROWN," is stirring all through. Begin with the beginning chapters, which appear in The Herald of Sunday, June 4.

His Real Trouble. (Detroit Tribune.) "Please, ma'am," said the hobo with the crimson bow, "would you give me a nickel to help me eat?" "Don't you find it difficult to keep sober?" asked the suspicious female. "Not in the least, ma'am," answered the truthful tramp. "A griddle of price you a jag wot troubles me most."

Nice Finale. (Chicago News.) "And what do you think of our beautiful city?" asked the Chicago girl. "Four beautiful cities," yawned the young man from New York. "Reminds me of a bursted drum." "The Chicago girl looked daggers, bayonets and bayonets." "What?" she flashed. "Our city reminds you of a bursted drum? Why so, sir?" "Because it can't be beaten."

And she was so pleased she promised to say something real nice about New York.

The subtle power of Schuyler Stanton is his manner of creating thrilling situations wherein the hand of crime appears without a revolting climax. His new story of love, intrigue and adventure begins in The Herald, Sunday, June 4.

A shirt sale of some importance. The summer kind pared down from $1.50 to $1.15.

It's something to know good shirts—it's better to be able to buy the seasonable kind at a saving. Never mind the reasons why—they're good ones. Just as good as the shirts.

RICHARDSON & ADAMS CO. "A CLOTHES SHOP FOR MEN."

At "The Sign of the Four" THIS 172 MAIN STREET.

RICH GIRL GOES ON STAGE

Charlotta Weaver, Daughter of General J. L. Weaver, to Appear in Vaudeville

Born in luxury, with the proverbial silver spoon in her mouth, Charlotta Weaver, actress girl and daughter of General J. L. Weaver, one of the mining kings of Idaho, is in this city preparing to enter vaudeville in a sketch written for her by Charles Horwitz, and called "A Romance and a Hold-Up," says the New York Globe. Her father gained fame in 1891 as ad-

STATE NEWS.

UNIVERSITY EXERCISES.

Educational Institution at Provo Presents Long List of Graduates.

Provo, May 31.—The following is the programme given by the Brigham Young University preparatory graduating class in college hall this afternoon: Overture, "Ere Davylo".....Orchestra Prayer.....Charles Powell President's address.....Leister Award Recitation, "Without Thee".....J. C. Alfred Recitation, "Judgment Day".....William Gordon Violin solo.....Josephine Shepard Violin solo.....Ralph Boyd Cornet duet.....Ina Foster Cornet duet.....Fred Fjelsted, Clarence Hawkins Selection, "My Little Zion".....Lizzie Edler, "I Would That My Love" (Mendelssohn).....Joseph McCallister, Florence Capperton Cyclic.....Katie Taylor Original song.....Helena Roberts.....Dorrie Dyer, Edith Dudley, Valodyna.....Lizzie Edler Benediction.....Andrew Anderson

"We have nothing to do with your quarrel, we are not union people. A boy is in a dangerous condition in the hospital. When his companions went to a soldierman to look the driver they were themselves arrested. I have thirty witnesses and will have them ready for examination tomorrow morning."

"Have them ready tomorrow," said the court, "preemptorily suspending consideration of the matter until then."

When brave men stand together, backed by patriotic womanhood, their might makes right. "THE FATE OF A CROWN," is stirring all through. Begin with the beginning chapters, which appear in The Herald of Sunday, June 4.

His Real Trouble. (Detroit Tribune.) "Please, ma'am," said the hobo with the crimson bow, "would you give me a nickel to help me eat?" "Don't you find it difficult to keep sober?" asked the suspicious female. "Not in the least, ma'am," answered the truthful tramp. "A griddle of price you a jag wot troubles me most."

Nice Finale. (Chicago News.) "And what do you think of our beautiful city?" asked the Chicago girl. "Four beautiful cities," yawned the young man from New York. "Reminds me of a bursted drum." "The Chicago girl looked daggers, bayonets and bayonets." "What?" she flashed. "Our city reminds you of a bursted drum? Why so, sir?" "Because it can't be beaten."

And she was so pleased she promised to say something real nice about New York.

The subtle power of Schuyler Stanton is his manner of creating thrilling situations wherein the hand of crime appears without a revolting climax. His new story of love, intrigue and adventure begins in The Herald, Sunday, June 4.

A shirt sale of some importance. The summer kind pared down from $1.50 to $1.15.

It's something to know good shirts—it's better to be able to buy the seasonable kind at a saving. Never mind the reasons why—they're good ones. Just as good as the shirts.

RICHARDSON & ADAMS CO. "A CLOTHES SHOP FOR MEN."

At "The Sign of the Four" THIS 172 MAIN STREET.

BOND ELECTION ARRANGED.

Will Submit Proposition to Voters to Bond For Full Limit.

Provo, May 31.—The city council last evening considered the proposition for arranging for a bond election for the completion of the waterworks extension and plant, in conformity with the expression of the voters at the recent election, and the city attorney Evans was present and took part in the discussion.

It was decided to submit the question to the voters at a special election, to be held on the 15th day of July, and the limit for both purposes—as it was considered there were legal objections to submitting the proposition for a bond election for the completion of the waterworks extension and plant, in conformity with the expression of the voters at the recent election, and the city attorney Evans was present and took part in the discussion.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

PREPARING FOR RUSH.

Government Installing Additional Operators in Carbon County.

Provo, May 31.—The government authorities at Washington are evidently anticipating a big rush to the Utah resort between now and the opening of the season, and an additional telegraph operator from the signal corps is ordered to Provo for duty. The operator will be permanently stationed at this office.

The order also calls for a second operator at Provo, and a telegraph office in Nine-Mile canyon, about thirty-five miles out from here on the Fort Duchesne road. The line, which is used also in combination for telephoning, is being installed in first-class shape for the entire distance of ninety-six miles out of Provo.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

PROVING NOTES.

Provo, May 31.—Judge Booth held court in the forenoon at 10 o'clock.

John T. Clark has returned from Utah county, where he has been looking after some of his mining interests. Mr. Clark is interested with Caleb Rhodes of Price in telephoning, which he believes will prove very valuable.

The Utah Independent Telephone company is now running the lines for its pole line in this city. It is understood that the company has made arrangements for office room in Mayor Roylance's building opposite the fire hall.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After "trying it on the dog" in Pennsylvania, Miss Weaver expects to begin the circuit about July, starting in this city.

Both her father and her mother, who are here in the city with her, have been opposed to the step their daughter is about to take, but have been won over by the girl's entreaties.

"Ministers may preach and do good for civilization," she said today, "but the stage is one of the greatest of educators; people can be lifted from sorrows and plinancies from which they can enjoy life and be inspired by its beauty—that is what I think of the opportunities of the stage to do good in this life."

As a climax to the sketch, Mr. Johnson, who is managing Miss Weaver, has secured an electrical illusion which he calls "Life From Death, or, Re-Creation by Fire." In this startling novelty the heroine is placed on an old-fashioned square piano which is presently cremated in full view of the audience. Nothing is left but a skeleton. When the flames die away she is seen coming from an entirely different part of the stage.

After